

Chapter 1 : Hotel Solomon Heights Srinagar - 04 Star Hotel in Srinagar

4 How beautiful you are, my darling! Oh, how beautiful! Your eyes behind your veil are doves. Your hair is like a flock of goats descending from the hills of Gilead. 2 Your teeth are like a flock of sheep just shorn.

Article added 18 years ago "Simplicity, simplicity, simplicity! I was born on an island, but moved when I was just two years-old and raised in a small mining town inland. Among the smallest countries in the world, the Solomons are made up of hundreds of tiny islands which combined have a mass of just 27, sq km. The tropics of the South Pacific are magnificent. About 30, people live in Honiara. The island is known to many because of battles that took place there between the U. Tropical rain forests, beaches and the underwater world of the Pacific Ocean are usually within a minute walk of where you are, due to the small size of the islands. Formed by volcanic activity long ago, they often rise sharply out of the ocean. Some of these volcanoes are still active; the locals sometimes use their heat for cooking by. They are rugged, mountainous, and covered with tropical plants. The islands range from 90 to miles to kilometers long and from 20 to 30 miles 32 to 48 kilometers wide. Each island has a central spine of mountains. Some of the mountains are more than 4, feet 1, meters high. The land drops sharply to the sea on one side of the island and gently to a narrow coastal strip on the other. Some of the outlying islands are atolls ring-shaped coral reefs. The people speak Pidgin English but also have their own local languages, called wantak from "one-talk". Wantak varies greatly from island to island, or even from village to village. Thus, all its inhabitants are bilingual. An example of Pidgin English is, "Hemiufalla closup now go long riva fo swim-swim," meaning "Soon we will go to the river to wash, bath or swim. Some have lighter hair and skin, as a result of relations with foreigners during the war. They are an overwhelmingly nice people, the girls are quite shy, and they have a wonderful outlook on life. Without much in terms of monetary value or material possessions, they are rich in culture, kindness and warmth, a reflection of the climate they live in. The happiest people, they express themselves through their musical nature and melodic voices. Upon entering a town called Kira Kira on Makiria Island, I was greeted by about a dozen school children who simply said "Hello" in unison, but with such beautiful harmony that I can hear it clearly in my mind even now, five years later. The economy of the Solomons is poor but relatively self-sustained. The people grow or catch their own food cassava and tropical fruits are common , build their own shelters people generally live in leaf huts , and purchase or obtain by other means any other necessities such as clothing. Sarongs are commonly worn by both men and women. Sugar can be obtained through sugarcane, which grows abundantly in the region, and there is even a plant that is used directly to obtain soap. They make their own canoes, by cutting down thick hardwood trees and carving the boat out of its trunk with axes and chisels. The result is a heavy one- or two-man vessel used by the islanders for fishing. Another form of fishing is with a spear. The spear is simply a metal rod with a sharpened tip, with a rubber band and a bamboo handle attached to the bottom for retrieval. Night is the best time for spear fishing because the fish are sleeping and can be hit easily. A few divers go down with these spears and shoot them at the fish in a slingshot like fashion. I was not aware of this when I noticed a friend actually walk out of her way to get around me. She would not even disturb me enough to say, "Excuse me," so I would raise my legs so she could pass. The unfortunate reality of globalization is causing customs like this to become extinct from many cultures, and this custom is in the process of disappearing from Honiara. There is an overpass for pedestrians to cross a busy road in the city, but residents are consciously or unconsciously not respecting the custom, as cars pass beneath them when they are using the overpass. The safety of pedestrians is improved, but a unique custom is being put aside as a consequence. If you specify a time to meet someone or for something to happen, it could be up to three hours later than planned, or even later. This is prevalent especially in the Solomons because of the intense heat you have to bear walking around in the sun; thus, no one walks quickly. Things are also delayed because so much depends on the ocean:

Chapter 2 : Song of Songs 4 - NIV Bible - How beautiful you are, my darling! Oh, how Indicative of the Solomon Islands government's drive to see tourism become a major economic contributor within the next five years, Prime Minister, Manasseh Sogavare has officially launched a key National Tourism Development Strategy (SINTDS). Funded by the South Pacific Tourism Organisation and.

Stephen Whelan Article added 18 years ago By now you might wonder why is such a paradise not more popular. Tourism is virtually non-existent, and only a few foreign companies operate in the country. These factors make it an even more beautiful place, virtually untouched by tourists and foreign exploitation, but why? One reason is that it is expensive to travel to the Solomons. Fiji or Hawaii are cheaper destinations, and much more oriented towards the tourism industry. Another reason might be the five-minute snakes, so named because once bitten, you are dead in five minutes. Of course, then there are the poisonous spiders that are as big as your hand. A thousand other interesting creatures might deter the common tourist. But the major reason tourists are not flocking to visit the Solomons is because of the most dangerous insect in the world: Malaria, spread by the Anopheles mosquito, is a very serious disease that causes fever, headaches, vomiting, general joint pain and death in many cases. Fortunately, that type of mosquito only comes out at night, so prevention is possible by wearing long clothes and taking anti-malarial pills. No vaccine existed five years ago, and after a short time the mosquitoes become immune to the variety of tablets on the market. The pills also cause strange side effects such as stomach illness or bizarre dreams, so many people are hesitant to take them. A Colombian doctor named Manuel Pattaroyo has invented a vaccine for malaria, but it has yet to be accepted by authorities. Malaria is an unfortunate reality in the Solomons, but it also prevents the country from becoming a tourist trap. Considering that malaria kills 10, children on a daily basis worldwide, the mosquito is the most dangerous insect in the world and the greatest killer of man, since it spreads the disease. Many studies have been done, and attempts made to get rid of the Anopheles mosquito, but such an endeavour is impossible to achieve. Cleaning rivers, streams, and stagnant water areas, and even using explosives have been tried with some success, but the mosquito prevails. DDT has also been somewhat affective in areas that could afford to use it, but it has been banned internationally because of the damage it causes to the environment. Fred, Tim and I were walking back to the camp from the beach one night, when we heard heavy steps in a field not far to the right of us. I was walking behind and got a little frightened; Fred and Tim stopped to listen when I walked into Fred. We laughed and then could make out the shadows of what we thought were wild boars. There were six, one baby. Fred said that if we had a knife we could go after one and have a feast at the village, Pawa on Ugi Island. We thought about going back to the camp to get a machete, but it was still about 15 minutes away. I had a pocketknife so Fred said he would go after the small one with it. Tim and I had to control our laughing as we crouched and watched Fred set out in the dark. We could still see the shadows of the animals. Suddenly we heard a loud splashing sound, and the animals went running. The splash was followed by Fred swearing. He had stepped into a puddle in the field. All of us laughed hilariously, as with each sloshing, soaked step Fred came with us back to camp. When we got back Fred told us some other stories about experiences he had wrestling boars to the ground to slit their throats. A large fine would have had to be paid if we had killed one.
