In , I had been feeding a feral adult cat named Midnight. There was this neighbor guy who has been trapping all those feral cats to get them fixed and releasing them. Midnight was the one around my neighborhood when I moved into this townhouse. I thought ht was beautiful because he started coming around my backyard around halloween time so I renamed him Halloween. As soon as I open the back door, he would dart across the street in fear. I would continue to feed him for two years. When I returned, his demeanor changed. He was so happy I returned and was meowing a lot and standing really close to the back door. SO I came outside and sat down on the steps, he was getting closer and closer and sat down next to me looking away. That was my moment of daring to "pet" him so I did. He was surprised to be touched. Then he turned around asking for more. I decided since I could pet him, I picked him up and put him in the house and shut the door. Yes, he freaked out trying to get out of the window. Keep in mind I have four other cats when this happened. So I allowed him to come in and eat and leave for about few months. Fast forward, I took him inside and took him to the vet. I cried and said hell to the no. He was skittish and hide a lot. But was litter trained that day. Ate with my cats when I fed them. He changed in few weeks time and laid down next to me on the couch. He would only trust me and no one else. Ive had him for 10 years. He died Feb of this year due to Kidney Faliure. He was 15 years old. He was crushed when he passed away. Now Funny thing is when Halloween passed away. I saw a litter of feral kittens running around in the back alley fo where I live currently in Florida. I was like omg is that a sign? Does Halloween wants me to adopt another feral cat? My neighbor kept two of them. This new feral kitten is a girl. I named her Pandora. She is in a guest room all by herself with no furniture or anything but a box so she can hide and food and litter box. Stratching post as well and TV playing with human voices so she can get used to it. I have three other cats in the house as well. She has an appt with the vet on Monday for spaying and vaccines and leuekmia test I am hoping she tests negative. Would break my heart if shes positive. But she still ate and even used litter box in the room. She would cry and cry all day and night. Today after 4 days, Idecided to pet her. She would hiss and all that. I fed her with chicken flavored baby food, first time she ate it off the spoon. I believe she is 5 months old. So I put my hand out so she could sniff it. She started purring loudly and fell asleep. I was shocked by how fast she is getting used to it. She still does run and hides whenever we come in the room and meowing at us but as soon as we sit next to her she calms down. She is even playing with a string a little bit.
