

Chapter 1 : Family Affair - Wikipedia

Despite working on a funny TV show, the cast of Family Affair was eventually plagued by tragedy. Only two members of the original cast are still alive today: Kathy Garver (who played Cissy) and.

Family Affair hit the trifecta. However, fate took a turn for the worse for the cast and now Kathy Garver, one of the only two living actors from the show, opens up about the secrets speculated behind the scenes and the rumored curse. Bad Blood They may have been colleagues for years while on the show, but Garver had bad blood with a former Family Affair costar, until very recently. Over five centuries have passed since the show ended, and since then three of the leading actors have died, leaving only Garver and Whitaker as surviving cast members. However, there was more to the show than meets the eye. Once the curtains closed for the last time, horrible endings awaited the actors of the once optimistic show. It seemed the stars were dropping like dominoes, and there was no way of knowing who was going to go down next. Psychological Problems As the show progressed, the stars acting have significantly changed their appearances and producer Don Fedderson was not happy about this transformation one bit. The character he desperately wanted to stay exactly the same was Anissa Jones, and her aging was becoming a problem. This later created psychological problems for the young star. Less Promising By The Minute Anissa Jones spent most of her acting career playing the archetypal dainty little girl but as she matured, her future seemed less promising by the minute. Jones did not know how to handle growing up in the limelight and consequently started hanging around with the wrong crowd. At a very young age, she sought external, illegal substances to make her feel better about herself, something she had trouble doing ever since Family Affair ended. Subsequently, Jones dropped out of high school. She was whipped off every weekend to do PR and she was 8-years-old when she started the series. In fact, they were just beginning. Johnny Whitaker, much like his on-screen sister Jones, began taking illegal substances as he grew older. A decade after his divorce in , Whitaker became hooked on the substances, and his life began to spiral out of control. He felt helpless and could not find a way out of the dark abyss that became his life, and soon, the addiction would ruin both his professional acting career, as well as his finances. He selflessly started a non-profit for Spanish-speaking substance abusers, where he volunteers to this very day and works with the homeless to get them back on their feet. Although his character may have seemed unhappy at times during the show, Keith was happy as a clam offset, seeing as how he had a pretty sweet work schedule, thanks to executive producer Don Fedderson who was remarkably generous when it came to the careers of his leading men. Keith filmed his scenes as Uncle Bill in day blocks, which enabled him to take more roles. Did What He Wanted Kathy Garver spoke of her former co-star Keith and said there was no knowing what the talented actor had up his sleeve. The formerly all smiles stand-up guy turned into a shadow of a man. He suffered from emphysema and was diagnosed with lung cancer, which was a devastating blow considering he had quit smoking ten years earlier due to the diagnosis. Keith was a heavy smoker when he was younger and had even appeared in an endorsement campaign in for Camel cigarettes. It did not look as though things were about to get better for the beloved actor. Keith died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound. Many speculated the reason for his suicide, claiming it had to do with the fact two months prior to his death, his daughter Daisy took her own life, that he had financial problems, and that he suffered from depression throughout his final days. Some argued that since Keith knew he was reaching the end of his life any way he decided to take things into his own hands. Join His Daughter Keith left his fans, family, and friends heartbroken, as many were not ready to handle his loss. However, even in his final decision, Keith thought of others and made sure to leave a short note to explain why he did what he did and explain why his act should comfort some. School Dropout Sebastian Cabot left school at the age of 14 to work in a car garage, but despite the major decision to drop out of school, the young Brit was indecisive of what he wanted to do with his life. After a while, he began to show interest in theatre, and so he joined a repertory company. Cabot needed to get his career rolling, so he lied on his resume and pretended to have acting experience. In a much later interview, Cabot admitted he believes acting was very much like lying. Cabot turned to an agency for representation, and with every audition, his acting was getting better and better. As his skills increased, he received significantly more call-backs, and finally, he landed the role of Mr. Giles French on Family Affair. After the show ended, Cabot was a well-known actor celebrated in his field. Replaced With Another However, good health was not in the cards for the gifted artist. Cabot had to frequently miss out on tapings of episodes on account of being seriously ill. In fact, he even had to be temporarily replaced when he could not arrive at the set for an extended amount of time. It was the veteran English actor, John Williams, who had to step in to play the part of Mr. Williams ended up covering for Cabot for nine episodes. Premature Death Sadly, it seemed that the rumored curse of the Family Affair stars was put on Cabot, too. While his premature death was not a result of self-infliction, Cabot still left this world a lot younger than he should have, denying his fans from enjoying more work from the skilled actor. Cabot passed away in August at the age of Having suffered from ill health throughout his entire Family Affair career, the end came when Cabot had a fatal stroke. This was his second stroke in three years. She also added that he would not have committed suicide as it went against his Catholic beliefs. At first, he was up and then his second year, he was going through a divorce, and then, the third year, he met somebody else. Keith explained why he enjoyed challenging himself professionally, saying: Then this thing came along. Before he ended his life, he was quoted saying he had high hopes for the future, which led many to believe his death was not a suicide after all. This renewed version lasted for 16 episodes, out of which only 14 were aired. The one-hour pilot had satisfying ratings, but it was the subsequent episode, and those that followed that declined against competition such as Survivor, Friends, and WWF Smackdown. Original cast members Johnny Whitaker and Kathy Garver even appeared in the Christmas special, but the show was canceled shortly after. The voice heard politely greeting the viewers was non-other than the great Sebastian Cabot! What A Small World Whitaker began his professional acting career at the outstandingly young age of three. Whitaker appeared in a television commercial for a local used car dealer, and was discovered for the adorable frizzy-haired boy he was. Devastating Heartbreak Whitaker married Symbria Wright in Finally, they held an intervention and threatened not to have any contact with him unless he got help for his substance abuse. Whitaker agreed and joined a twelve-step program. French who had the most standout name change. Despite being called Mr. Take Cheers and Frasier, for example. Family Affair is another example, seeing that it was created by producer Don Fedderson. Ultimately, the shows became linked when Jody and Buffy appeared in the latter. Just two episodes after their surprise cameo, a couple of characters from My Three Sons appeared. Nearly Came Back Every single fan of Family Affair was completely devastated when the show was abruptly canceled. It seemed unreasonable, especially since it was so popular. In fact, shortly after the show came to an end, the network was planning on bringing it back and making some more episodes. Nevertheless, due to the success of the similar show The Brady Bunch, they had a sudden change of heart. Due to its increasing popularity and connection to the show, Mattel ended up releasing a line of the doll in the late 60s. Not only did it make a lot of money from Mrs. Beasley, but Mattel also unveiled two dolls of Buffy. One was a talking Buffy told, and even had its own mini Mrs. An Engineer Wrote The Script? It seems like the creators of Family Affair were very aware of making the show as realistic as possible. He was a successful engineer, which was ultimately the reason that he had a good home as well as a big family. As a result, the producers got an actual engineer, the president of the National Society of Professional Engineers at the time, as a consultant for the script. It was a last minute decision and one that certainly paid off in the long run. They were actually the offspring of his brother. They went by the name of Patterson. As the show went on, they ended up being known as Patterson Davis, and it may have been small tidbit, but it was certainly something that was easy to overlook. Take the two surviving stars, Johnny Whittaker and Kathy Garver, for example, who are respected stage actors. Garver has most recently starred in plays such as Absolutely Dead and Dinner at Five. This was extremely clear after being close to landing the iconic role of Regan in the classic The Exorcist. Unfortunately, Jones was typecast during her short career. Each season was shot in less than 60 days. As a result, every actor, crew member and extra needed to be on call during that two month period, making sure that they had no other plans. What attracted casual fans to the show the most was probably the many famous guest stars. Quite simply, Anissa Jones broke her leg in real life. She was playing in the playground when the accident happened. It was completely unexpected and the writers were completely unprepared for it. As a result, they chose to write her accident into the script and make an episode out of it. It took just a day to write! As a result, every season had a different director at the helm.

How did your part on A Family Affair come about? I have been working since I was a child. Something happened to the original Cissy so they needed a new one but they wanted a blonde-haired, blue-eyed girl. At that time I had brown hair and brown eyes. My mother sprayed my hair with Streaks and Tips Hairspray that makes your hair lighter. It made my hair bronze gold. It was very hard so when you tapped it it would not move. When I met with the producer, he asked what was wrong with my hair. He said it looked green. What is The Annoyance Theater event? I am playing one of the characters in the cast. There are three stories that we will present. It is interesting because I am working on a project with Silicon Valley about movie scripts. There is a new company that is taking some of these screenplays, buying them for nothing, who have had them in the warehouses for years. For one reason or another they never got produced. They are first turning them into books then movies. How did the voice over work come about? I remember when I first went to audition on a commercial for voice over work and it was for tuna. The person wanted me to try a different voice and I had no idea how to do it. I took lessons after that. Once I understood the concept I had a natural melody to my voice. That bodes very well for cartoons or commercials. I have done about 70 audiobooks. I have done four Oasis Audio that is right there in Illinois. I now teach voice work. I love going to comic-book conventions. I bring my Firestar character with me. What are your plans after the Chicago appearance? Then I am making a speech in Washington, D. Where Are They Now?
