Additional notes on individual designs[edit] Alabama: The Alabama state quarter is the first coin circulated in the U. The banner reading "Grand Canyon State" in the design is intended to split the quarter into two sections and indicate the Grand Canyon and the Saguaro Cactus are in two different Arizona scenes, as the saguaro cactus is not native to the area near the Grand Canyon. The Charter Oak on the back of the Connecticut quarter fell during a storm on August 21, The outline of the state of Georgia on the quarter appears to have accidentally left out Dade County , which is in the extreme northwestern part of the state. In Dade residents voted to secede from the United States, and from the state of Georgia. The Hawaii quarter features a rendition of the statue of Kamehameha I , who united the Hawaiian Islands in , with the state outline and motto. This is the first business strike U. The Illinois quarter is the only quarter to directly reference and portray an urban city, with a picture of the Chicago skyline. The Missouri quarter indirectly references the city of St. Louis with its portrayal of the iconic Gateway Arch. Lake County is either partially or completely missing where it borders with Lake Michigan. The error did not garner considerable notice. When Iowans were debating the design for its state quarter in , there was a grassroots effort to use a design featuring the Sullivan brothers to honor the five Waterloo siblings who died when the ship they were aboardâ€”the USS Juneau CL â€”sank during the Naval Battle of Guadalcanal , The effort was ultimately unsuccessful, and a Grant Wood design was used, but not before some copyright issues were resolved. It emerged that Mint engravers may exercise discretion in the final design of U. One of the final concepts for the Nebraska quarter was based on the Ponca leader Standing Bear , who, in a suit brought against the federal government, successfully argued that Native Americans were citizens entitled to rights under the U. This design was chosen by the Oregon Commemorative Quarter Commission. The Quarter Commission chose the Crater Lake design from three other finalists: Although South Dakota has the second highest proportion of American Indians of any state, the South Dakota quarter features three items that are the result of European settlement. These symbols are Mount Rushmore, which is carved into the Black Hills which are seen as sacred by the Lakota , a pheasant an exotic species , and wheat , which has replaced tens of thousands of square miles of diverse grasslands. There has also been some controversy over the Tennessee quarter. Some sources [26] claim that the details on the instruments depicted on the quarter are inaccurate, such as the number of strings on the guitar and the location of the tubing on the trumpet, although the number of strings on the guitar-like instrument is accurate if the instrument is in fact the Mexican vihuela that influenced the country-and-western music prominent in Nashville culture and business. During the submission process for the design of the West Virginia quarter, there was an apparent movement to put the famous Mothman on the final design. A number of the Wisconsin quarters featured a small mint error: Some of the affected coins feature a "low leaf", others feature a "high leaf". All of these "error coins" were minted at the Denver mint. It is unclear whether the error was deliberate or accidental, but the error generated considerable initial interest. Some Wyoming quarters were released in with indications of improper quality control. However, evidence of cracks in the die and subsequent hasty repairs have been observed in a few circulation specimens. The following table has the quarters grouped by year.
