January 23, Beatified By: Today, that region is part of Germany. Just a year after her birth, her family emigrated to the United States, settling in Utica. Cope attended a parish school until she reached the eighth grade. By that time, her father had become an invalid and she went to work in a factory to support the family. Her father died in , and this along with her siblings maturity, permitted her to leave the factory to pursue a religious life. She took the name Marianne when she completed her formation. German-speaking immigrants settled in large numbers in her area of New York state, so she became a teacher and later a principal at a school for immigrant children. Cope also helped direct the opening of the first two Catholic hospitals in central New York. She arranged for students from the Geneva Medical College in New York to work at the hospital, but also stipulated that patients should be able to refuse treatment by them. It was one of the first times in history that the right of a patient to refuse treatment was recognized. By , Cope had become the Superior General of her congregation. It was at this time she received a plea for help from leprosy sufferers in Hawaii. The King had already been declined by more than 50 other religious institutes. Mother Marianne, as she was then known, left Syracuse with six sisters to attend to the sick, and arrived on November 8, The next year, Mother Marianne helped establish the Malulani hospital on the island of Maui. Upon arrival and following an initial investigation, Mother Marianne demanded that he resign or she would leave. The government dismissed the administrator and gave her full management of the hospital there. Although Mother Marianne was getting older, he workload only seemed to increase. Soon, she was responsible for orphans of women who had contracted the disease as well as clergy who had contracted the disease while working with lepers. Despite this limitation, she continued to work tirelessly. Many noticed that despite all her years of work she never contracted leprosy herself, which many regarded as a miracle in itself. Mother Marianne passed away on August 9, and was buried at Bishop Home. In the years following her death, several miracles were reported in her name. In , a woman was miraculously cured after multiple organ failure following prayers to Mother Marianne. On December 6, , an additional miracle was credited to her and approved by Benedict. On October 21, , she was officially canonized by Benedict.
