Will the Ministry of Agriculture, the EMA and the Ministry of Health become more serious about protecting our communities from the giant African snail? This foreign pest is an environmental and health problem. The rainy season is here and I am worried about the continued infestation of the snails, particularly in my community, Mt Lambert. To eradicate this pest, it is critical that it does not spread to other areas. Any material construction, rubble, steel, tyres, old vehicles etc to be moved out of the area should be inspected by the Ministry of Food Production personnel. Do not put any snails in the garbage. Do not throw any snails in the water ways drains, canals or rivers. Of the districts mentioned in the flyer, Mt Lambert, Aranguez North and South and Barataria lie within a part of Trinidad, stretching from Streatham Lodge to Barataria, which is an area most suitable for vegetable farming. It means that with the presence of the snail we run the risk of losing crops at a time when we are being urged to pay more attention to agriculture, whether on a commercial scale or home gardening. It also means citizens are in danger of being infected with the disease which the snails carry. Agriculture officials visited our community. They captured hundreds of snails no exaggeration , then applied a chemical which later killed some snails but after each visit the snails reappeared with a vengeance. My neighbours and I have cleansed our yards. We have collected snails day and night. We seeded our premises with snail and slug killer to no avail. On my fourth call to the ministry, I was told I have to help myself by collecting snails, dunking them in brine and then burning them. I have done so but it is not good enough. Our area suffers from annual flooding and the eggs of snails are going to hatch. In the not distant past this country had to go through the ravages of the mealy bug. For obvious reasons I want to start my home garden. But what are we to do about this plague of snails?

In the last 5 months or so, I have had 4 snails 3 mystery and 1 nerite, never more than 2 snails at a time live in the tank, and I got the second pair after both of the first pair had died live with my betta, a hyper HMPK. All of the snails have died, and my betta appears to be healthy as a horse -- and he is NOT killing the snails. He barely knows they exist, and when he does finally see them, he stares for a few seconds, then swims off to go investigate his reflection. I have watched this for many hours at a time, and the snails are not being eaten. They die in their shells, and I verify death by smell and oh my is that a bad smell Water parameters tested with API liquid tests always show 0 for Ammonia, Nitrate, Nitrite sometimes just a hint of ammonia like not even 0. Tank is kept at 81 degrees, 5 gallon heated with sponge filter, load of live anubias, wisteria, and java fern plants, bare-bottom. I drop a drop of Flourish in about once per week, and I make sure the snails are near the bottom of the tank before I add it. There are a few clean shells in the tank and some cuttlebone for calcium, and I drop fragments of OO veggie-algae wafers and some bits of extra OO or NLS pellets for them. Obviously, the nerite ate algae, and was the biggest pooper ever to grace a tank. The nerite Batu Khan, maybe 1 cm across died after about a month. His tankmate Nokhai Khan golden mystery snail, about an inch across died after about 3 months. Ogedei Khan wild-type mystery snail, about 0. Chaggedei Khan golden mystery snail, started out at 0. The mystery snails were in typical dead snail position, slightly open. All 4 seemed to be relatively closed up for most of a week prior to death. The only other clue is that the golden snails developed a brownish color on the shell which seemed to get more pronounced and the snail got a bit less active with time. I have attached a photo of Chaggedei about 10 days before his death. All snails were bought at Petsmart -- the first two from the same place I got the betta, and the last two from a different Petsmart but both from the same store. Does anybody know what is killing my snails? This is getting very depressing! Perhaps they are just old I know warmer water makes them more active but die faster? Are Petsmart Snails usually short-lived? Am I doing something wrong? Attached Images File Type:
