

Chapter 1 : River of Smoke by Amitav Ghosh – review | Books | The Guardian

ThriftBooks sells millions of used books at the lowest everyday prices. We personally assess every book's quality and offer rare, out-of-print treasures. We deliver the joy of reading in 100% recycled packaging with free standard shipping on U.S. orders over $

Beschreibung bei Amazon Amitav Ghosh is an Indian-born writer famous for contemporary literature that uses complex narrative strategies to explore the personal and national identity of people from India and South Asia origins. Ghosh was born on 11th July to a Bengali Hindu family in Calcutta. Ghosh went to the University of Delhi for his higher education graduating with Bachelor of Arts and Masters Degree in and respectively. During that time, he was also working as a reporter and editor at Indian Express newspaper. He then moved to England and enrolled for a Ph. Degree in social anthropology in the University of Oxford. He received his Ph. They are blessed with two children Lila and Nayan. Ghosh career as a writer began in when he released his debut novel the Circle of Reason. He then went on to release other captivating fiction and nonfiction novels that have been honored with various awards. The Ghosh work revolves around the epic themes of history and memory, travel and diaspora, love and loss, and political struggle and communal violence while at the same time crossing the generic aspects of art and anthropology. The writings narratives of Ghosh both fictional and nonfictional tend to be transnational moving across countries, oceans, and continents. His literature is also convincingly learned and thoroughly researched showing the scale of scholarship that sits behind every piece of his work. Furthermore, his work is consistently focused. It never loses the charming human dimension of things and always returns to Calcutta. Moreover, the referents and registers of Bengali and South Asian culture consistently and thickly accent the characters global ambition on all of his novels. Amitav Ghosh Novels and Literature Career His first release, the Circle of Reason centers on an eight-year-old Bengali boy with a huge head accused of terrorism and his journey to Africa. The novel is considered as a postmodern and postcolonial literature due to the way it highlights the colonial factors as well as the intertextual nature of the novel. The novel perfectly blends the elements of picaresque and fable fiction by bringing out the postcolonial element distinctively in the marginalization of Europe and the postcolonial element uniquely in its thick intertextuality and nonlinear structure. Amitav Ghosh released the Shadow of Lines in The novel is written in a captivating, condensed prose that almost sounds like poetry. The novel is more about geography and chronology experimentations. It brings out excitement and creativity while moving between Calcutta and London dealing with the past inventions and the arbitrariness of Second World War and present partition. The Shadow Line highlights the threshold between the West and East while also bringing out the ghostly haunting of the past. Furthermore, besides the historical fiction, the Amitav Ghosh has also delved into science fiction genre with the Calcutta Chromosome published in The novel is a medical mystery thriller that is set in future around random people brought together by common events. The novel brings out three searches that include the trace of a disappeared L. Murugan, missing links in Malaria research and a suppressed journalist. In addition to the fiction novels, Amitav Ghosh has also written non-fiction literature including the famous Imam and the Indian and in an Antique Land. In an Antique Land was released in and borrows heavily from the Ghosh anthropology training while defying the generic details. The novel brings out the delicate and deeply moving evocation of the twelfth century Egypt. The Imam and the Indian novel was released in and features a large collection of different themed essays that include Egyptian culture, literature, history of the novel and fundamentalism. Awards and Recognitions Amitav Ghosh has won several accolades for his amazing fictitious and non-fictitious literature. In , the Calcutta Chromosome won the Arthur C. Another novel that brought Amitav Ghosh awards and recognition is the Sea of Poppies, which was shortlisted for the Man Booker Prize in In , Ghosh also hit the limelight when his literature the River of Smoke was shortlisted for Asian Literary Prize. In addition to wide honors, Amitav Ghosh has also courted controversy. His writings have been translated into more than 20 languages. Jack Reacher is back! Family secrets come back to haunt Reacher when he decides to visit the town his father was born in. Because when he visits there he finds out no-one with the last name of Reacher has ever lived there. It leaves him wondering - did his father ever live there? Recommendations Every 2 weeks we send out an e-mail with Book Recommendations. Insert your e-mail below to start getting these recommendations. If you see one missing just send me an e-mail below. Featured Author Our author of the month is Canadian author Opal Carew who writes erotic romance novels. Opal has written over novels with multiple book series such as the Dirty Talk series and the Abducted series. Did You Know Clive Cussler started working as a copywriter for an advertising industry after his discharge from the military. Later he became the creative director of two successful advertising agencies. He was assigned to produce radio and television commercials and was also given a reward at the Cannes Lions International Advertising Festival for many of his commercials.

Chapter 2 : Amitav Ghosh - Wikipedia

Note: Citations are based on reference standards. However, formatting rules can vary widely between applications and fields of interest or study. The specific requirements or preferences of your reviewing publisher, classroom teacher, institution or organization should be applied.

With violence in Vietnam about to peak, a cargo ship from Kewaunee sparked a new international incident with North Korea. Sturdevant recounts the stories of everyday Wisconsinites during the years that the Cold War gripped the world with fear of espionage and nuclear winter in this book, which preserves a fading piece of Wisconsin history. Thursday, November 1, 7: Amitav Ghosh, author of The Great Derangement: Ghosh traces the entangled history of commodities, conflict, and climate change in the Indian Ocean. For centuries the main players were Western colonial powers, but lately the countries of the Indian Ocean rim have become the principal drivers of anthropogenic climate change, an ongoing process that will have catastrophic consequences for the billions of people who live around the Indian Ocean. This lecture explores the continuities between the resource conflicts of the past and the future by focusing on two transformative imperial wars: It also poses a question: Ten years ago a man and his son trekked into this wilderness and never returned, presumed dead. Ten years later, the son is discovered ransacking an outfitter store, violent and uncommunicative, refusing to answer questions about his father or the last ten years of his life. Friday, November 2, 7: Inspired by his childhood on a dairy farm in Illinois, tales of rural life lead the way in this collection focused on family, violence, and memories. Stet is a work of serious play that brings home the connections and intimacies of language. Austin Smith grew up on a family dairy farm in northwestern Illinois. He teaches at Stanford University. Saturday, November 3, 9: Enjoy panels, one-on-one interviews, and schmooze with the authors. Find your new favorite writer or hang out with an old favorite. Bring books from home to get signed or buy them from Boswell. Distributors are circling and that part of the deal should be made shortly. Sold out - Saturday, November 3, Signed copies of Everyday Dorie can still be requested for pickup after the event. Monday, November 5, 4: With Laurie Keller, author of Potato Pants! Please register for this free event at potatomke. A potato and his eggplant nemesis struggle to find the perfect pants in a hilarious, heartwarming tale of forgiveness by author-illustrator Laurie Keller. Mean, pushy eggplant who was rude to him the other day. Can these vegetable rivals make peace in the name of fashion? And also, they are completely clueless. After they light the menorah and gobble the gelt, Grandpa Latke tells everyone the Hanukkah story, complete with mighty Mega Bees who use a giant dreidel to fight against the evil alien potatoes from Planet Chhh. Monday, November 5, 7: Both the publisher and both wholesalers are currently out of stock on this title. Part mystery, part war story, part romance, Winter Soldier tells the story of a medical student who enlists when World War I erupts across Europe. In a freezing outpost ravaged by typhus, he finds himself falling in love with the mysterious nurse from whom he must learn a brutal makeshift medicine. From the gilded ballrooms of Imperial Vienna to the frozen forests of the Eastern Front, from hardscrabble operating rooms to battlefields thundering with Cossack cavalry, The Winter Soldier is the story of war and medicine, of family, of finding love in the sweeping tides of history, and finally, of the mistakes we make, and the precious opportunities to atone. Daniel Mason is a physician and also the author of A Far Country. A recipient of a fellowship from the National Endowment of the Arts, he is currently Clinical Assistant Professor of Psychiatry at Stanford University, where he teaches courses in the humanities and medicine. Posted by Daniel Goldin at

Chapter 3 : Amitav Ghosh | Books | The Guardian

Amitav Ghosh has 24 books on Goodreads with ratings. Amitav Ghosh's most popular book is Sea of Poppies (Ibis Trilogy, #1).

The Indian-born writer produced a wide range of novels in the genre of historical fiction. His fictional work centers on the Southeast Asian population dealing with the identity crisis at different levels. Consequently he had the opportunity to grow up and see the different cultures of Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, and Iran besides India. Ghosh received his higher education from University of Delhi obtaining a Bachelors of Arts and a Masters degree. During his studies he also engrossed himself in reporting and editorial work for a newspaper. Afterwards he left for England where he got admission in the University of Oxford and had himself enrolled in social anthropology course for Ph. Before embarking on a journey as a writer, Ghosh started off his professional career with teaching. Ghosh made his writing debut with The Circle of Reason. It is considered a postcolonial and postmodern literature for its treatment of the colonial factors and the intertextual nature the novel, respectively. Another widely recognized work of Ghosh includes The Shadow Lines that also deals with the aftermath of departure of British colonial powers from India. Later in , Ghosh produced another historical novel, The Glass Palace. This is a complex work of fiction set in different regions and time periods. In depth the novel addresses the prevailing issues like economic changes, constitution of a nation and the impact of modernity on the society. Sea of Poppies is one of the first volumes in Ibis trilogy. The story is set in the pre-Opium-War period in s. It summarizes the colonial period in the Southeast Asia. The second volume in the trilogy is recently published by the title, River of Smoke. Besides writing historical fiction Ghosh subsequently delved into science fiction genre. Sir Ronald Ross is considered to be the inspiration for the book. This medical thriller, set in future, revolves around random people who are brought together by a common thread of events. Incendiary Circumstances, Dancing in Cambodia and The Imam and the Indian are marked as his contributions to non-fictional genre. Clarke Award was presented to him for The Calcutta Chromosome. Amitav Ghosh is an established Indian author and there are more twenty languages in which his works have been translated so far. Bluebook Style Amitav Ghosh, https: Write About Amitav Ghosh.

Chapter 4 : Amitav Ghosh | Biography, Books and Facts

The author's new book on climate change questions why the arts have been largely silent on the issue and says India must do more reduce its emissions Amitav Ghosh among 10 writers up for the.

There are certainly the things about this novel which differentiate it from the most others out there in the market. The writing style and the choice of theme which is always a class when we talk about Ghosh are amazing. Indian Book Critics will bring it to you. The novel is somewhat retrospective and finds its base theme in the Morichjhanpi massacre in West Bengal which led thousands of inhabitants of the island to other places. The characters are limited in the novel which makes it a pleasant read. The storyline is very straight – Piyali is on a research trip in India and she is finding out more about the dolphins. She meets Fokir and he helps her in the research by taking her to the portions of the ocean which inhabit dolphins. In the meantime, they both are attracted to each-other very forcibly. Exploring many events and braving the tide, stormy rain and fate, Fokir dies – saving Piyali behind his brave and strong arms. This impresses Piyali Roy so much that she decides to remain in India and also helps the young kid and young wife of Fokir. Kanai, though at the beginning posing as the lead male character, is rather subdued in the background. Storywise, the novel is pleasant – unpredictable and unlazy. It flows with the pages and a reader should not feel too much. A major choice of the researchers for the papers on Ecocriticism, The Hungry Tide tells more graver tales in the subtext of its pages rather than in the plain words. Amitav Ghosh, as his name is, has written this novel keeping in background the gloom which we have called upon ourselves by disturbing the balance and the order in which nature had to be. The scene in which a tiger is burnt alive and those details which narrate how troublesome the life of the island inhabitants become after the police orders are wonderful as well as grave. That diary also unfolds some romantic encounters from the past in a rather sophisticated manner. The novel, however in an implicit manner, raises questions on the operations of the Bengal government and also the central leadership of that time, the late 80s. These questions are not directly posed as the line goes – conceal the messages which are important and let the world decipher and answer those. Amitav Ghosh has successfully stuck to that principle of writing. Technically, creating a metamorphosis of seriousness mixed with a narrative which can somehow manage the readers to stick with the book up to pages is not a bad performance. Yes, there are a few concerns which reader can raise while or after reading the novel, but those are minor ones. This novel could not be better than The Hungry Tide is! Indian Book Critics passes the novel with an A grade and suggests that readers must go for it without wasting time in giving a second thought.

Chapter 5 : Amitav Ghosh : Pictures

Amitav Ghosh is a novelist and essayist, author of The Calcutta Chromosome, the Ibis Trilogy, and the essay collection In an Antique Land. He has won the Prix Médicis Étranger, an Arthur C. Clarke Award, and in he was awarded the inaugural Utah Award in the Environmental Humanities from the University of Utah.

How does the current political situation in Burma inform this novel? Why did you choose to end the novel there? The meeting made a very powerful impression on me, and my memories of it remain intensely vivid to this day. The end, because it was in a way, the culmination of a long history that I was already familiar with, at second hand. Your characters seem to float between boundaries of both geography and class. Uma travels effortlessly through Asia, Europe and the U. Would this sort of fluidity have been possible? How fluid were these boundaries in turn of the century British Asia? To take Uma first class was often the key to mobility in the British Empire. In the late 19th century there were many Indian women who went abroad to study, in much the same way that Uma did the first Indian woman doctor graduated from a British university in the s. The experience of journeying abroad frequently served to radicalize Indians, men and women alike this is true to this day. The same is true of Rajkumar. Rags to riches stories were very common among Indians in Burma. Many of the Indian business magnates of pre-war Rangoon had arrived in that city with little more than a tin suitcase and a few annas in their pockets. Indeed, Burma held a great attraction for ambitious young Indians and Chinese precisely because it offered more opportunities than the sub-continent with all its social rigidities. In The Glass Palace, the intimate family histories of the characters are inextricably linked to larger events in world history. Do you think events in world history usually have such profound effects on personal histories? How does your own personal family history inform this novel? It is often war that creates a collision between history and individual lives. In circumstances of war, as in such situations as revolution, mass evacuations, forced population movements and so on, nobody has the choice of stepping away from history. The 20th century visited many such calamities on Asia and The Glass Palace attempts to chronicle the impact that these events had on families and individuals. How does your background as an historian, journalist, and anthropologist inform your work? Is this entirely a work of fiction? For me, the value of the novel, as a form, is that it is able to incorporate elements of every aspect of life – history, natural history, rhetoric, politics, beliefs, religion, family, love, sexuality. As I see it the novel is a meta-form that transcends the boundaries that circumscribe other kinds of writing, rendering meaningless the usual workaday distinctions between historian, journalist, anthropologist etc. How does photography function in your work? Why is photography such an appropriate symbol with which to discuss colonialism? My interest in photography goes back a long way. The part that it plays in The Glass Palace is probably attributable to the influence of the late Raghubir Singh who was a very dear friend. He opened my eyes to many of the less obvious aspects of photography. In The Hindu, Meenakshi Mukherjee calls the novel "the most scathing critique of British colonialism I have ever come across in fiction. If this is true, then it would have to be said, surely, that colonialism has had a pretty easy ride.

Chapter 6 : The Fiction of Amitav Ghosh: A Postcolonial Perspective | Angus & Robertson

Amitav Ghosh is a well-known name in the contemporary literature. The Indian-born writer produced a wide range of novels in the genre of historical fiction. His fictional work centers on the Southeast Asian population dealing with the identity crisis at different levels.

Chapter 7 : Amitav Ghosh : Biography

Amitav Ghosh is an Indian author of fiction and non-fiction books. Amitav Ghosh was born in Calcutta in He studied in Dehra Dun, New Delhi, Alexandria and Oxford and his first job was at the Indian Express newspaper in New Delhi.

Chapter 8 : Amitav Ghosh | LibraryThing

Amitav Ghosh was born in Calcutta and grew up in Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, and India. He studied at the Universities of Delhi and Oxford, has taught at a number of institutions, and written for many magazines.

Chapter 9 : Amitav Ghosh | Indian-born writer | calendrierdelascience.com

Amitav Ghosh (born 11 July) is an Indian writer best known for his work in English fiction.