

Chapter 1 : For the Love of a Vampire by Michelle Leighton

After the two of you talked about some random stuff he asks you, if you want to take a walk and you agree. You stop. Now you are standing under an oak tree, watching the moon shine through the leaves.

Is your little newborn being rebellious? As far as I can see, Edward plans to terrorize the village. What will you do if he gets his first taste? I will stop him. Roy grabbed his jacket and boots and ran after Edward; he would have to thank Riza later. Edward smiled and breathed in the fresh air. He could barely remember the streets of Central, they were so confusing. Edward smelled new things, some things he had no idea that they even had a scent, like concrete. It was so bright outside; the sun was hurting his eyes. The soundest were the hardest to deal with. He could hear every conversation within a mile, dogs barking, the hums of automobile engines, shouts from train whistles, the pounding of feet as people walked by him, and many other things. It was giving him a headache. Edward walked to the park, where it was quieter. His head was hurting and he was so thirsty. He sat on a bench, just needing to think. A blue ball rolled over and hit his foot, coming to a stop. He picked it up as a little girl with pigtails ran over. Edward smiled softly and offered her the ball. She giggled and thanked him before accepting the ball and running off with it. Edward could see the blue veins, just beneath the skin. Edward stood and followed the little girl. He just wanted a taste. Instincts controlled his every movement as he approached her. Roy ran in and grabbed Edward from behind. Edward had no idea what was happening at first. How did you get out?! Come with me or you might do something, you will regret. You need to feed. Roy disappeared into the woods and appeared suddenly with a rabbit that he snapped the neck of. The normal side of Edward wanted to throw the rabbit aside and demand to know why Roy was acting so weird and going on about all this vampire crap. Edward noticed what he was doing halfway through his rabbit. Roy held Edward close. Are you still thirsty? I will be right back. Edward drank his fill. But I need to teach you self-restraint for a good 50 years before I can let you even have a sip of human blood. You will be drinking animal blood. Consider it like tofu, it has all the nutrients and meat has without being the real deal. The bad thing is that the flavor is a little€undesirable. As Edward dried off, he looked in the mirror. He was pale and his hair looked brighter and longer. The biggest eye catcher were his eyes, They were blood red. Edward walked into the living room and saw Roy reading. Edward curled up beside him and Roy held Edward close as he tried to finish the chapter of his book. We just do it for fun. But as a newborn, I would suggest it. Your review has been posted.
