Bano novel by Razia Butt Online Reading. Bano novel by Razia Butt is a very famous social romantic. Urdu calendrierdelascience.com was published in monthly Digest.

Dastaan finally comes to an end. My first review was on Episode 8 "partition. I have never cried so much while watching a drama as I have with Dastaan. It moved me, shook every nerve in my body, it woke me up jolting me with each episode, it drew my passion and patriotism from my heart into my bloodstream! Each and every single scene has been well calculated, brilliantly dramatized, marvelously directly, and superbly performed. With each new episode the Dastaan team kept raising the bar higher and higher. Truly Dastaan deserves international recognition " MominaDuraid, your team deserves the Oscars, a whole handful! There can be no best scene or best dialogue when there was a relevance to every scene and every dialogue was outstanding " brilliant, outstanding, you have my standing ovation! Before I get into what really moved me in Dastaan, I wanted to recognize my most valued performers in Dastaan " SanamBaloch for living my Bano and delivering her to us in such grace, elegance and purity. No one else could have done what you did. Really, you are the heart and soul of Dastaan! Saba Qamar for being such a darling, so eleloquent; you took a very flat character and outperformed to make us fall in love with Suraiyya Khala. Mehreen Raheel for playing such a difficult role with such pride; for making us fall in love with you especially in the last episode. Ahsan Khan " you are the star for me, I would give you the best actor award for Dastaan any day! Samira, I am very proud of you today! HH, my admiration for your work has no words; yet again the English dictionary falls short of adjectives when I try to express myself as to how much I have admired your work " the work that all 3 of you put together for us. A special thanks to the 3 of you!!! Razia Butt " Bano was truly your masterpiece. Partition- the pains, the suffering, the sacrifice, you have so beautifully captured it all. Independence " a gift from God that is so very easily taken for granted. You made us realize what we have isa blessing. Woh mera ghar hai, meri jannat hai, mera Pakistan hai. But to see the power that she has to bear all of that and yet be smiling in the end is empowering. She goes from being a lover to a liberated woman who could care less about Hassan; she lives for Pakistan and was there to purify it, which she does with pride and dignity! There are layers upon layers of messages that need to be decoded fromDastaan. I could write a novel just decoding Dastaan! The true strength of Pakistan is Islam; Pakistan was founded as a nation for Muslims. Pakistan was founded on true, pure beliefs but unfortunately what Bano witnessed in her beloved land was not Basant Singh but replicates of him who are Pakistani and sadly Muslim. There will be a day when Bano will not have to kill a Basanta to cleanse our nation, when women will have equal rights, where there will be justice, when we can stand proud to call ourselves a citizen of Pakistan, when we will be a super power because we have the strength to take it there. I can see how this ending may have been preferred as this way Bano, a person who believes that Pakistan is perfect gets to purify it. Is it better to see Bano in a mental asylum rather than her being dead? Bano meri Pakistan ki dulhan hai" as I said hum sab mein Bano chupi wihai, usko jagao" wake her up and get to work; a new Pakistan awaits! Saba Qamar for being such a darling, so eleloquent; you took a very flat character and outperformed to make us fall in love with SuraiyyaKhala. MehreenRaheel for playing such a difficult role with such pride; for making us fall in love with you especially in the last episode. Samira Api, I am very proud of you today! Wohmeragharhai, merijannathai, mera Pakistan hai. Banomeri Pakistan kidulhanhai" as I said hum sab meinBanochupiwihai, uskojagao" wake her up and get to work; a new Pakistan awaits!

Chapter 2 : Bano By Razia Butt - Urdu Stories

Painful novel, really hoped for Bano and Hassan but some things are just not meant to happen. True history.

The story is based on the independence of Pakistan; prior partition between India and Pakistan in the year 1947. Before partition, Hindus and Muslims lived together. Due to the number of arising differences between the two religions, it became difficult to stay in the same continent. Therefore, Mohammad Ali Jinnah and Gandhi took the initiative to propose for separate homelands for Hindus and Muslims. Bano lives with her parents and two brothers; Saleem and Faheem, in Ludhiana Punjab. Saleem is getting married to Suraiya, one of his oldest relatives and sister to Rasheeda. Bano has been friends with Suraiya since childhood and they are extremely fond of each other. Hassan has been invited to attend the wedding of his only aunt, Suraiya. He meets Bano at the wedding after quite a long time and falls for her eventually. Bano also falls for his charm and their romance blossoms with time. However, both of them were completely ignorant of the storm coming ahead. Hassan has to move to Rawalpindi with his mother because of his job transfer, leaving Bano and her family behind. He promises to come back to marry her. When he departs, the partition between Pakistan and India begins and violence spreads throughout the country. Hindu and Muslims hatred goes at peak as several murders take place. Many Muslims are killed viciously, women get raped and many manage to seek refuge to go to their homelands via railways. Bano faces tremendous repercussions caused by the partition while Hassan is totally unaware of what problems and devastations she went through. Her entire family gets executed in front of her eyes and her mother dies too. Bano tries to escape to Pakistan but gets caught by a Sikh family. They bring her home safely and promise to deport her to Pakistan soon. However, this all comes out to be a trick. Basanta, the person who brings her home, falls for her and insists her to marry him and convert to Sikhism. However, Bano retaliates but she is forced to marry a Sikh because they torture her to death. Basanta ties the knot with her and rapes her, making her feel more horrible and devastated. On the other hand, Hassan has unwillingly believed that his Bano has died along with her family back in Ludhiana. He has been living in Rawalpindi with his mother for the past five years. He did not want to get married to any girl because he had dedicated his entire life for Bano. First he disagrees but later he could not say no to his mother because he found Rabia a very decent girl. Hassan gets engaged to Rabia and soon they were to get married. Bano has produced a son from Basanta and continues to live a miserable life with him as one day; Basanta falls off from the terrace and gets killed. Bano is finally released from the forceful relationship and runs back to her country, Pakistan. On the verge of his wedding to Rabia, Hassan receives a letter indicating him that Bano is still alive. Hassan and his mother get a mere shock. He rushes to get her instantly, breaking his engagement to Rabia. He is shocked to see Bano in a terrible condition because she was not the same as before. Nevertheless, both of them unite and he brings her home. They feel pity on her. Hassan tries to calm her down and shows her the world ahead of her. He brings her new clothes and asks to forget all the past miseries and try to live a happy life with him. She pleads Hassan not to show mercy towards her anymore and gets married to Rabia and then she leaves his place. Hassan looks for her everywhere but she hides herself every time they encounter. She sends him a message to get married to Rabia, start a new life and forget about her completely because she is not his old Bano anymore. He becomes helpless and agrees to marry Rabia. But Rabia has some other plans. She arranges a secret meeting with Bano where she begs her to marry Hassan because he only loves her and not anyone else. Bano becomes weak and finds herself in a very complicated situation. She gives her consent to Rabia and promises to come as a bride on the wedding day. Meanwhile, she has started working in an office. The owner keeps an eye on Bano everytime he sees her. At the wedding day, Bano is about to give resignation letter to the owner when he surrounds her in the library and tries to get his hands on her. On the other hand, everyone is waiting for the bride to arrive. Hassan, dressed in bridegroom attire, is waiting for Bano to return. He is completely traumatized after seeing her drenched fully in blood. She comes and hugs him and says repeatedly that she has finally killed Basanta and has made Pakistan a pure country to live in. The police finds out about the murder and arrests Bano immediately. In the end, Hassan marries Rabia and Bano is seen spending the remaining life in jail. As a critic, I was a bit disappointed with the way the story had ended. It could have been something else. For instance, Bano could not have gone to jail. She should have been living a normal and happy life with Hassan. In the novel, we find a contrary end. The character, Hassan goes insane and Bano dies in the novel but in the drama it has been portrayed differently. Whatsoever, Dastan will always be considered as one of the finest dramas ever witnessed in the Pakistan Drama Industry. Both of the actors have done complete justice to their roles and have performed brilliantly overshadowing the rest of the performers. You cannot take off your eyes once you are watching them act onscreen. Both of them bring a magic onscreen and their couple looks beautiful. It is an extremely emotional story that will leave tears in your eyes and make your heart sad. All in all, it is a well made drama that cannot be missed at any cost. It will always remain my most favourite.
