She has gone through many changes throughout the years from her debut in 1959, to now she comes in all varieties. Barbie Roberts History Ruth Handler, after seeing her daughter Barbara assigning her dolls adult roles, wished for a more grown-up doll for children to play with, as most toy dolls during the 1950s were modeled after infants. And on a trip to Germany with her husband, a co-founder of Mattel, she found Bild Lilli Dolls which became the inspiration for Barbie dolls. The original Barbie doll, with blonde hair. The original Barbie doll came in blonde or brunette hair and wore a black and white one-piece bathing suit with a ponytail and sunglasses. There were seven variations of this doll, all varying slightly in things such as ponytail style, stand style, and eyeliner color. A Bobblecut doll with the hair color "Titian" In 1961, she was released with a new hairstyle called a "Bobblecut". This hairstyle was inspired by first lady Jackie Kennedy, and was a rounded bob. It was released from 1961 until 1963. She was inspired by a popular fashion trend of the 1960s: She had molded brown hair with a removable blue band, and wore a white and gold striped bathing suit and similarly patterned hat. Miss Barbie was released in 1963, and had molded brown hair with an orange band, similar to Fashion Queen Barbie. She was the first Barbie to have bendable legs, and the sole Barbie to have "sleep" eyes like modern American Girl dolls. Like Fashion Queen Barbie, she also came with three wigs. In 1964, Barbie became an astronaut. Astronaut Barbie featuring her box An advertisement for Color Magic Barbie in 1965, Color Magic Barbie was released. She came with either Golden Blonde or Midnight Black hair, which when an enclosed solution was applied, would turn into either Scarlet Flame or Ruby Red. Her outfit colors would also change as a result of this solution. She featured a different face, hairstyle, and body compared to older Barbies. In 1966, Talking Barbie was released. This hairstyle may have been inspired by the hairstyle of Marlo Thomas on the TV show "That Girl", which aired from 1966 to 1968. Dramatic New Living Barbie was released in 1967. She had bendable joints, and swiveled at her waist, neck, legs, arms, and hands. She had a bun with a retractable ponytail. It also came with two hair pieces, one being small looped braids, and the other being long ringlets. In 1968, Live Action Barbie was released. A version of this doll came with a stage, and was a "hippie" Barbie. In 1969, Living Barbie was released. She was a re-release of the Dramatic New Living Barbie, with different makeup, and a new outfit. In 1970, Sunset Malibu Barbie was released. She represented the "California girl" look with her tanned skin and blue eyes. She came in a high-neck, light blue swim suit and lavender glasses. She had red hair and came with 3 hair pieces, which were also red. From onwards, Barbie dolls were released with centered eyes. In 1971, Busy Barbie was released. Her hands were molded to hold her accessories, including a suitcase, TV, telephone, glasses, and a tray. She was the same as Busy Barbie, including accessories, but came with a blonde bob. Using her stand, she would walk and move her arms. In 1972, Quick Curl Barbie was released. She came with hair that "curls instantly". In 1973, Barbie Sweet Sixteen was released. She was a promotional doll. In 1974, Barbie Fun Time doll was released. She was only sold in Europe. She used the Barbie head mold and wore an orange swimsuit. In 1975, Gold Medal Barbie was released. She was Sunset Malibu Barbie but with a red, white, and blue swimsuit. She was a promotional item for the Olympics. This doll was also a promotional item for the Olympics. This doll also used Sunset Malibu Barbie. Gold Medal Skater Barbie in packaging. In 1976, Gold Medal Skier Barbie was released. She was also a promotional item for the Olympics, and also used Sunset Malibu Barbie. In 1977, Hawaii Barbie was released. She used the Steffie head mold, had black hair, and brown eyes. She had many different prints. She now came with a Jergens Beauty kit, a Barbie head, a twist waist, and bendable legs. In 1978, Ballerina Barbie was released. She came with a twist waist and special joints to allow her to do Split kicks. In 1979 and there were Ballerina Barbie On Tour department store promotions. In 1980, beautiful Bride is released. She is the last Barbie doll to have rooted lashes in the USA until 1980. She was a department store special. Her bride outfit was also available separately.
