Basketball for Fun! has 7 ratings and 3 reviews. Robert said: Beetle checked this out from her school library this week. It is a rather surprising book for.

The post of these drills listed below written by Tim Briggs continues to be the 1 visited part of our website. These games could be used for players of all ages but would probably work best for younger players age 10 or below still learning the basics of dribbling. While dribbling the basketball, and without double-dribbling or traveling, players must tag other players. Red Light, Green Light: Have all the players line up on the base line with a ball. Send back to the start any player not dribbling in control. The winner of the game is the first to cross the opposing end line. Play until one player remains. A good game for the coaches to play with the kids as well. Create two teams amongst the players and put the two teams on opposing base lines from each other. Roll multiple balls onto the court spread the balls out. Explain to the kids that sometimes on a farm, the cows break loose from their pens and the farmers have to round up the cows and put them back in their pens. The winning team can be determined by how fast all the balls cows are shot back into the basket pen. I would ask you to read further to see how to make these drills even more effective in the lives of your players. What if instead of stopping with just the drills and the skills you were trying to teach, you could move seamlessly from the drill to life and then to truth? What did it take to do well at this game? That is not just true in this game but in basketball game as well. I want you to have an ear for the other players who might be calling for the ball or for me who might be calling out a play. Lose the ball So we learn from this game the need to pay attention to both the ball and the voices of other players and the coach. This need to listen to others while we are focused on a task is true in life as well. How would she feel? Could get you or someone else in trouble. So you need to be able to have fun but also keep attentive to other important voices in life like you do on the basketball court. This is also true in our relationship with God. One wonderful thing about God is that he talks to us. But just like that game, we need to be attentive to his voice while we do the things we are doing. Rather it teaches a biblical worldview that integrates all of life with truth and maximizes the impact of their athletic experience. This method of utilizing sports, life and truth, we call 3D Devotionals. Anyone can learn it. To find out more about this method, watch the short minute explanation below. Here are 3 really simple youth basketball drills that are TONS of fun and excellent for developing young players. We use these drills all the time. Everyone else has a basketball. Everyone with a ball starts dribbling in an area of the court. If the pirate touches the ball, you are now a pirate and you give the ball to the person that touches your ball. Good drill for all ages. This comes from soccer. I have seen a number of youth soccer coaches use this drill. It works for basketball too. Each player needs a basketball. The coach stands at the foul line. Players line up along the baseline. When the players are ready, they yell "What time is it Mr. So the players take 6 dribbles toward the coach. Then the players ask again, "What time is it Mr. Repeat until some of the players get close to you. Then when players ask, "What time is it Mr. You coach run after them trying to tag them before they get back to the baseline. This is a good drill for year olds. Variations Variation 1 - Let one of the players be Mr. Variation 2 - Have the players hop toward you on two feet to work on their jumping and agility the ball is optional. The teams line up at the start line. Group them into teams for the relay race. There, the player gets one chance to drop the penny into one cup of the carton -- without lowering their arm below waist height. The player then runs back to the start line and the next player goes. The game ends when a team has gotten at least one penny in each cup of its egg carton. Now once they get the hang of it, give each player a basketball and require them to dribble. They have to dribble without looking at the ball and develop coordination. Good drill for year olds. What do you think? Let us know by leaving your comments, suggestions, and questions

This is a fun drill for working on defensive footwork. The only problem with this drill is that only two people can go at once so if you have a large group it might not be appropriate. Everyone starts by finding a partner and standing in pairs behind the baseline. The first pair comes out and sets themselves up directly opposite each other on the two parallel lines of the key. The coach then assigns one of them the offensive player and the drill begins immediately. The goal of the defensive player is to stay directly in line with the offensive player. The offensive player must work hard to try and separate themselves from being in line with the defender by sliding up and down the line of the key. After 30 seconds they step behind the baseline and two new players come in. Players must stay in a low defensive stance with their hands out wide the entire time of the drill. Encourage the offensive player to use head fakes and quick changes of pace to throw the defender off. Make sure you cover what good defensive stance is before running this drill.

Defensive Specialist – Defense Drill Overview: You will require four D-men or cones for this drill. All players begin in a straight line on the baseline. All players line up in a straight line on the baseline. Players perform this defensive course one-by-one. The first movement is a sprint and then close out to the cone in front. The player then back-pedals around a cone directly behind them, and then slides across to the other side of the court. When the first defender slides past the line, that triggers the next player in line to start the drill. When the first defender has slid around the cone on the other side of the court, they again sprint to close out, and then once again slide to the opposite side of the court before returning to the end of the line. Depending on the amount of players you have, run this drill for 3 – 5 minutes. Hold the close out for a second or two before moving on. Make sure all defensive footwork is done well since this is a very important part of the drill.

One-on-One – Defense Drill I love using one-on-one drills at practice to teach both defense and offense. This drill starts with two players at the free-throw line or top of the key depending on age and experience. The defensive player starts with the basketball. The other players wait behind them near half-way. Use both ends of the basketball court if you have two coaches so that players get to play more often. To start the drill, the defender hands the basketball to the offensive player. By handing the basketball to the offensive player, it ensures that the defender is challenging themselves by starting up close to the offensive player instead of standing back playing lazy defense. The offensive player then has a maximum of 2 or 3 dribbles to attack the ring and get a clear shot. Offensively, this drill teaches players not to waste their dribble and teaches them how to attack a defender one on one. Defensively, players will learn how to keep an offensive player in front of them and challenge every shot. After either a make or a miss, a new offensive player comes in, the previous offensive player switches to defense, and the previous defender joins the end of the line. Make sure you enforce the rule of 2 or 3 dribbles maximum depending on which you decide. Encourage the defensive player to get up close and play hard defense. Make sure players are using good footwork and good fakes. Zig-zag slides are a great drill for a beginning team. The two most important things this drill teaches is how to defensive slide properly and also how to drop step when playing defense. The drill begins with all players on the baseline lining up on one of the corners. No player should have a basketball. The first player will defensive slide from the corner to the high post and perform a degree drop step so that they are now sliding back to the opposite sideline. This process of sliding from one side to the other and drop stepping continues until the player reaches the opposite baseline. They come back down the opposite side of the court using the same principles. Teach all players how to defensive slide and drop step at the beginning of the drill. Players should never cross their feet!

War – Fun Drill Overview: War is a great drill to incorporate fun small-sided games into your practices. The drill is set up by splitting your group into two teams and lining each half up along opposite sidelines. You will give the each individual player on each team a number from 1 – 6. The drill requires one basketball and it always starts with the coach. The drill begins with the coach throwing a basketball out into the middle of the court and calling out a few numbers between 1 and 6. The coach can play games with any number of players from 1 on 1 to 6 on 6. Try to match the best players up against each other. Finish off the drill by calling everyone in!

Golden Child – Fun Drill Overview: Golden child is another fun game that kids will end up begging you to let them play each practice. It involves splitting up into two teams, a shooting team and a dribbling team, and then the dribbling teams must run around the half-court one-by-one while the shooters try and get them out. The first step is to split your group up into two similarly even teams. The dribbling team must all have a basketball and they should be lining up at one of the corners of the baseline. The shooting team will have one or two basketballs and will be lined up around the free-throw line or closer depending on age and skill. A home run is when a dribbler makes it all the way around the outside of the half court and back to the line. The shooters must attempt to get them out by making a shot. The next dribbler can begin immediately when this happens. If they make it home, they get one run and can join the end of the line to run again. This continues until all the dribbling players are out and then the teams switch roles. The team with the most amount of runs at the end of the game wins. The shooting team players must rebound their own shot and pass it back to the next person in line. If your players are struggling to make shots, consider splitting the shooting team in two and putting them on both elbows or even closer so that they have more chance of scoring. The coach must pick the golden child or there will be upset kids! Elimination is a game I often run to conclude practice. The goal of the game is to make your shot before the person behind you makes their shot. The first shot must always be from the free throw line but after that can be from anywhere on the floor. All players line up in a straight line behind the free throw line. The first two players in line have a basketball. The drill begins with the first person in line taking a shot. If they make it, they quickly rebound their ball and throw it to the next person in line. If they miss, they must rebound the ball and score as quick as possible. As soon as the first player has shot, the second player can begin. If the player behind scores before the player in front, the player in front is out. The drill continues until there is one person left and they are crowned the winner. The person in front must always shoot the basketball first. Do kids love anything more than playing a real game of basketball? I recommend playing small-sided games for the benefits listed here. Depending on the amount of players you have, I believe 3 on 3 or 4 on 4 are the best small-sided games to use. Use both halves of the court and create small-sided games depending on the amount of players you have. Tell each team they must advance the ball to either half-court or the third line of the court if you have one. Each game needs one basketball. Start the game and let them play! Make adjustments and team changes when you need to, but I recommend trying not to interrupt too much. Let the players learn from their own mistakes by experience. Small-sided games are the best. Click here to find out why. Stop the game if you see a mistake 3 times in a row. Until then let the kids experiment and learn on their own as much as possible. Stress the importance of spacing. Game-Winner – Fun Game Overview: This drill is an awesome way to finish practice on a high note. Each time I run this drill, the players end up leaving practice with a smile on their face.

Basketball games are one of the best way to help the kids get better at the sport without them knowing it. You can play this with as many people as you like. The first person takes a shot and the second person must duplicate that exact same shot. If the first person makes the shot and the second person misses they get assigned an H. The third person would now get to take their own shot since the second person missed. If the second person would have made the shot then the third person would have had to make the same shot. You can pick any word to spell, this is just the common word used in the game. You can play PIG if you have less time. Bonus Rule – You can play with this fun bonus rule. If they shoot and make it, the person loses. If they miss the prove it shot then no letter is assessed and the person stays in the game. Or, the player can simply choose to shoot it themselves. Around The World This game is super simple, but really helps improve shooting in pressure type situations. The rules are pretty simple. You designate 8 spots on the court, typically around the 3 point arc or to make it easier around the key and free throw line. You can play with as many people as you like for this game as well. The first person simply takes a shot from the first spot you designated if they make it they move on to spot 2. They then shoot from spot 2, if they make that shot the move on to spot 3 and so on. They keep moving until they miss. If they take their second shot and make it, they keep moving. If they miss their second shot they must go to the beginning of the game. Back to spot one. You can move to all 8 spots and call it good, or you can come all the way back again. This part of the game is kind of up to you! Firing Squad This is kind of like around the world, but a little more fast paced. In this game, all players are shooting at the same time. They must shoot their ball and collect their rebound. They only advance upon making the shot. They keep shooting from each spot until someone makes it from the final spot, this person is the winner. Lightning Or Knockout You only need 2 people for this game, but the more you have the better. They line single file all facing the hoop, so the line will go toward the other end of the court. The first person in line takes their shot, if the ball goes in they advance to the back of the line. The second person shoots right after them. If the first person misses they have an opportunity to get their rebound and make a basket from anywhere on the court. If the second person that shoots ball goes in before the first person, then the first person is knocked out of the game. You always want to get your ball in the hoop as fast as you can or before the guy behind you does. Golf This is one of the most fun basketball games for kids, the low score wins, just like in golf! You can play with as many as you wish, each kid takes turns starting at the free throw line. The first player shoots, if they make it they get 1 point. If they miss they must shoot from wherever they rebounded the ball if they make the second shot their score is 2. But if they miss the second shot rebound and make the third they are now a 3. I would set a cap on how many they can get up to, say 6. Once they get to 6 they just move to the back of the line. If they rebound the ball in an area that is impossible to get a shot off, they have to take a penalty and shoot from the free throw line, like taking a drop in golf. You play this for 9 rounds, or as many rounds as you want. And tally the score at the end. The player with the lowest score wins. Those are some of the best basketball games for kids, especially if your looking for real basketball games for kids. Hopefully one of these games will work for you and you can show your kid how to have a lot of fun playing this sport. Basketball is taken pretty serious sometimes, its very competitive. Basketball tests players' hand-eye coordination along with ball skills while teaching teamwork, discipline and responsibility. These common attributes shared by athletes in every team sport represent important character-building skills for kids of all ages to learn.

Select one or two players to be "sharks". The rest of the players will be the "minnows" and will line up along the baseline facing the sharks. The sharks will not have basketballs, and the minnows will each have one ball. For the minnows, the object of the game is to dribble from baseline to baseline without their ball being stolen or knocked out of bounds by a shark. For the sharks, the object of the game is to eliminate as many minnows as possible within each round by stealing or deflecting their ball out of bounds. If a minnow loses their ball, they will become a shark in the next round. The round stops when each minnow has successfully made it across to the other baseline or has been turned into a shark. The last minnow remaining is deemed the winner, and the game stops when all minnows have been eliminated. The last one or two minnows remaining will serve as sharks for the beginning of the next game. The dribbling team will have a basketball and will line up at one of the corners of the baseline. The shooting team will have one or two basketballs and be lined up at the free throw line or closer depending on the age and skill level of the players. If a shot is made, the shooters call out "stop," and the current dribbler freezes and the next dribbler may begin. If the dribbler makes it home, they get one point and return to the back of the line to run again. Continue until every dribbler is out and then switch team roles. The team with the most runs wins. One or two players will be the designated taggers. Players who are not taggers will each have a basketball. Each player has to remain on a line at all times throughout the game as the taggers attempt to tag the other players who are not "it". If a player who is not "it" gets touched by a tagger, steps off of a line or loses control of their ball, they are "out" until the next game. The last person who has not yet been tagged is the winner and the game restarts with the last one or two players to be tagged starting as the taggers.

Basketball Drills for Kids by Hall of Fame Coach Houle 4 Fun Basketball Dribbling Games For Young Players Find this Pin and more on Sports by Eileen Price. The below games could be used for players of all ages but would probably work best for younger players (age 10 or below) still learning the basics of dribbling.

At least two players are needed and there is no maximum of who number who can join. First thing to do is to agree on order of who plays first. There is various way to decide " you can stand at the free throw line and who makes most shots starts etc. Now the fun parts start. The first player who starts the game have to invent a shot, let him think before he starts as more creative the shot will be the better. Now if the first player missed his shot, second player in the row gets the ball and shot invention privilege. That way the game goes around till only one play left. If you are making a copy shot and missing it you get a letter each time, first is H, second O.. The only way you get a letter is if you miss the challenge granted to you. If you miss, the turn goes to the next player. If you make a challenge shot and all other players also makes it, you have to invent a new challenge, now there is a version of HORSE that if everyone makes the shot you challenged them " you get the letter. But usually you just make a new challenge shot without a penalty. The game continues until one person is left and this is how we have a winner. This is an ideal game for kids offering a chance of winning for everyone because of wide skill set required. All you need is two basketballs and at least two players there is no limit of players in this game. First step is to form a line at the free throw line or closer to the basket. First two players standing receives basketballs. If the first player makes the shoot, he passes the ball to the next payer in the line and so on. That next player tries to knock out the second player if he is still trying to make a shoot while the first player goes to the end of the line and that way the game flows. Watch video of Knock out being played on court: Around The World This game has many known variations. It requires a single basketball hoop and minimum two players. The game starts as first player makes a layup, next goes a shot in the middle of the basket and free throw line, next follows a free throw shot, 20 foot away shot from the wing, the distance keeps getting longer " 3 point shot and the final shot from the half court. Once this part is done, the player must make every shoot again just from the different direction. Starts from the half court and returns to the basket and finishes the game with layup. I have seen often that people in order to make the game quicker, or there are a lot of players, they allow player to stay on the spot where he missed his last shot and other players take their turn. The next time player gets his chance in next turn he starts from the same spot he missed his shot in the last turn of his. The spots for shooting can be placed all over the court. All Court Trap This game is a nice combination of shooting and running to get the ball. The idea is that kids shoot from all over the court, there is no pre-marked locations. The game needs at least two players and one basketball. The first player begins the game with any place he wants. If he makes the shoot next player must repeat the shoot from the same place, if he misses he gets one point, the player who is next in turn has to rebound the ball and shot from the spot he caught the ball. Player loses than he reaches 5 point mark and the winner is who is left one and all opponents are eliminated. Additional rule can be applied to this game: If he is not capable making the shot in 3 attempts " he is out. This game is awesome because kids have to run around to rebound the ball and sometimes it bounces far away and often kids just are not strong enough to reach the hoop with their throw. This game requires source of music, a hoop and basketballs for each player. Preparation for the game is easy, place balls in circle and have kids walk around the balls while the music plays. At one moment music stops and kids must grab a basketball and make a shot. The point is that once a player makes the shoot, he must instantly shit down to show that he finished this round. The winner is determined that way: Another variation of this game that allows kids to improve dribble is to use actual chairs and balls, hoop is not required for this version. Kids dribble the balls around the circle of chairs while the music is playing and have to stop and sit at the moment the music pauses. Take your kids off from computer and have fun playing basketball!

Posted November 18, , in Basketball for Kids , Games Its true, basketball is a competitive sport, but basketball for kids is also about having fun! While competing and training do advance kids basketball skills, there are many basketball games for kids that allow them to practice and have fun at the same time. In school, kids often play basketball games with their friends. Often, kids get into a routine when playing basketball. They go to practice and play in leagues each week. These are excellent practice for kids to gain more skills and to get game play. Adding games that they can play with friends or on their own allows the routine to be broken up and provides a fun outlet for them to practice. To play, the players take turns shooting the ball into the hoop. The first successful shot gives the player the word, H, the second shot the word O and so on. Around the World This game is great for kids to practice shooting from many different places on the court. This game requires two or more players and a single basketball. Start by picking five or more spots in an arc around the basketball net. Each players get two tries at each shot, then moves on to the next spot. If you miss after two shots, you start over from spot number one. To make the game more difficult or better suited towards more advanced players, from the points on the arch, the player has to make a variety of different shots before moving to the next spot. An example would be a player making a layup, a shot from the free throw line, foot shot from the wing, a 3-point shot, a shot from half court and finishing with another layup. This is great practice for the player to make those shots during a game as well! This game is very similar to musical chairs but will help kids practice their basketball dribbling skills. The kids stand in a circle with one basketball. When the music starts, the child dribbles 3 times and passes the ball to their neighbor. When the music stops, the person holding the ball is out. Seems simple, but controlling the ball and passing while dribbling can be a challenge! Changing up the routine in basketball will allow kids to get a change of pace and have fun while doing so. These games will still teach valuable skills that they will use on the court. They will keep their energy and focus up and be refreshed and ready to go back to competitive game play! To learn more visit our disclosure page. Nothing beats the summer; grilling and parties bring friends and family together. If you are lucky enough to have a pool in your backyard then it takes the party atmosphere to a whole new level. Of course not, you need a few toys so that when you and your crew jump in you have some fun activities to do. Imagine dunking over your best friend between beers and dropping deep bombs from the other end of the pool. Too bad there are no three point lines in pools. So whether you have a small above ground pool or a complete water park, there is something in this list for everyone. This hoop provides hours of fun thanks to a regulation metal rim and 44 inch polycarbonate backboard. Assembly is easy with this pool hoop and is one of its biggest strengths. That means you have this thing up and ready for use in no time. It does appear that Swimline Cool Jam does have an issue with rusting over time, especially with the rim. Hopefully, Swimline will consider adding rust protection coating to the rim to help prevent rusting. They make very popular value hoops and even manufacturer some high-quality in-ground basketball systems like the Lifetime Mammoth line. Their Pool Side Basketball Hoop is a mid-priced pool hoop that comes in three different color options: This pool basketball hoop is designed to sit on a deck or on the concrete just outside the pool. The support pole does have powder coating which helps protect it from rust. As for the backboard it is shatter-proof and the graphics are fade resistant. This pool hoop also comes with a five year limited warranty. With a cool blue and white color scheme, this hoop screams summer. The base is filled with water and is 17 inches wide and 38 inches tall. Killing two birds with one stone is one of my favorite pastimes and there is no doubt that having two different sports to choose from will only increase the fun you can have in your pool during those warm summer days. The hoop is mini-sized, so if you require a full size basketball experience then we suggest considering another hoops from our list. As for the volleyball net it spans 24 feet. A basketball and volleyball are included. Featuring a 60 inch acrylic backboard, this a full-sized basketball hoop that can be used for deep shots and rim hanging slam dunks. Featured on this pool basketball hoop is a hand crank height adjustment mechanism, single-piece support pole, and a pro style breakaway rim. The only serious downfall about this hoop is the price. Is it worth it? Depends on how much you love the game and how deep your pockets happen to be. This hoop is 20 inches in height, which allows for players of all sizes to throw down monster dunks. A mini basketball is included so you can get in on the action right away. The base of the Poolmaster Hoop can be filled with either sand or water and will help keep the hoop upright. One of the biggest strengths of the Poolmaster Pro Rebounder Pool Hoop is that the rim is rust resistant. This is something that is an issue with many pool hoops and it is nice to see Poolmaster address this concern. This hoop comes with a mini-basketball and requires a small area for the base. In-ground pools allow for a greater variety of pool basketball hoops. You can more easily use a hoop that sits just outside the pool. Full Size or Mini?
