Roll up, roll up! For March's issue we're gearing up for the London Bass Guitar Show, chatting with Therapy?, Alter Bridge and Doll Skin, and reviewing basses from Dingwall, Chowny and ESP.

He may not be one of the most famous bassists but he is definitely one of the most talented. I look at you as one of the best innovators in the bass community. The path you have chosen to follow is special and deep. If anyone has any issues with this, I feel for them and they should not be paying any attention to what you do. Just move on to a more mundane approach to the instrument and be happy. You are a gift and I love your playing and concept. He is a pioneering innovator in the art of looping. This is perhaps the best argument yet that the bass is a versatile, deeply expressive instrument and in the hands of a brilliant and visionary artist like Steve, is capable of making music of enormous emotional and musical depth. Please buy a copy and share it with your friends and family. What you have as a result of the best of both is a gentleman known as Steve Lawson. But his work showcases not only prodigious playing talent but also a thorough lack of self-consciousness about engaging with his listeners. A wonderfully melancholic fretless solo is played over an underlying mood reminiscent of Brian Eno. Dreamy pastoral visions interrupted by an invasion of drunk Martians. A Little Nitrous Music anyone? It takes you on a journey that is simultaneously familiar and exotic, engaging and serene. With its extended and often reflective feel, the highly-attuned duo improvisations allude to the vintage eras of record labels like ECM or Windham Hill. Finally, lots of notes when needed. Now all we need is a Steve Lawson that plays double bass – are you out there? When I heard Steve play doing a live solo with self accompaniment I was instantly transported to somewhere beautiful inside, even though we were in Anaheim of all places. I am going to rip off every idea he has ever had!! It was as spontaneous as it could possibly be! Jez Carr is sparse with his lines, leaving Lawson room to explore the upper reaches of his Modulus Custom 6 string fretless. Two of the tracks exceed 14 minutes, and both are happy to heave lots of space during the tunes where the freedom to bounce ideas around never gets out of control. Conversations is extremely laid back conjuring images of dream like open spaces.
