Two genres, poetry and drama, produce distinct presentations of their art. Poets create highly personal and often abstract works that draw the reader into a world of rhythmic stanzas. Those who create drama are aiming for stage productions and unique performance art. When considering their differences, the concepts of style, perspective and form are key parts to making each type of work genre specific. Literary Genre Both poetry and drama are considered literary genres. Poetry is written form that expresses emotions, observations and feelings through rhythmic cadence. It is this combination of cadence and words that draws the reader or listener in. Drama, by contrast, presents the actions and words of characters on the stage. The intensity of action and plot development are the key markers that act to draw the viewer in. Perspective Perspective is key when considering the differences between poetry and drama. In the lyrical sense of poetry, the poet writes from his perspective. He will often employ first person use of "I," or will write from the role of personal observation. Drama, even when written from personal experience, includes characters that are separate from the writer. The writer must create an external way of expressing himself within plot and this is seen through actor monologues or by the voices of multiple stage characters. Style Each genre has a particular style. For example, poetry presents a clear rhythmic form. It is the mind of the poet that chooses the cadence. The poet chooses words which have a particular syllabic breakdown to establish a rhythm. Poetry can be abstract and have different meanings to the reader. Drama, on the other hand, must have the action of characters around plot choices such as irony and conflict. This leaves less room for drama pieces to be abstract. Commitment to Form As a writer of either genre, you must become familiar with the forms of your genre and be faithful to artistically crafting works within these forms. Creativity is fine, but you must abide by the established form expectations. For example, the poetry form of a sonnet is only 14 lines long. It would be nearly impossible to write a drama with such a format. In contemporary drama, flashbacks, scenes, setting changes and sequencing jumps are employed. This would be difficult in poetry and does not fit its form. Cite this Article A tool to create a citation to reference this article Cite this Article.

A popular and often-quoted poet, Frost was honored frequently during his lifetime, receiving four Pulitzer Prizes. Whose woods these are I think I know. His house is in the village though; He will not see me stopping here To watch his woods fill up with snow. My little horse must think it queer To stop without a farmhouse near Between the woods and frozen lake The darkest evening of the year. He gives his harness bells a shake To ask if there is some mistake. The woods are lovely, dark and deep. While this America settles in the mould of its vulgarity, heavily thickening to empire And protest, only a bubble in the molten mass, pops and sighs out, and the mass hardens, I sadly smiling remember that the flower fades to make fruit, the fruit rots to make earth. Out of the mother; and through the spring exultances, ripeness and decadence; and home to the mother. You making haste haste on decay: And boys, be in nothing so moderate as in love of man, a clever servant, insufferable master. There is the trap that catches noblest spirits, that caught " they say " God, when he walked on earth. He is generally considered to be among the greatest American poets of the twentieth century. The old South Boston Aquarium stands in a Sahara of snow now. Its broken windows are boarded. The bronze weathervane cod has lost half its scales. The airy tanks are dry. Once my nose crawled like a snail on the glass; my hand tingled.

Ballad poems may take the form of songs and may contain a moral or a lesson. The Mermaid by Unknown author
Oh the ocean waves may roll, And the stormy winds may blow, While we poor sailors go skipping aloft And the land lubbers lay down below, below, below And the land lubbers lay down below. For example, here is a name poem for a person named Alexis: X-rays, though, reveal a sylvan sprite, Intense as a bright bird behind her veil, Singing to the moon throughout the night. This can be done with any name - for example, the following name poem is a poem for a person named Taylor: Years may roll like waves across her shore, Leaving none of what there was before, Obliterating every sign of grace. Reason not, says Taylor, with the sea! Sonnet by Shakespeare Let me not to the marriage of true minds Admit impediments. Which alters when it alteration finds, Or bends with the remover to remove: Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks, But bears it out even to the edge of doom. If this be error and upon me proved, I never writ, nor no man ever loved. Shakespeare was not the only source of sonnets. Masquerading as hope they tell their lies; Only the young can hear their lullabies. But I am barren and I am thirsty Since she has gone. No hope is there for me. I will roam and curse this earth and these skies-- Death from life which Zeus sovereign denies. No myrtle shall flower, no cypress bud Till the gods release her
