

Chapter 1 : Bartlett Cocke: An Inventory of his Papers

Biographical Sketch Professor Albert Allen Bartlett. Al Bartlett is a retired Professor of Physics who joined the faculty of the University of Colorado in Boulder in September

Of Welsh extraction, his father was a semi-invalid who was unable to do any physical labor such as farming and eked out a living for his large family by teaching in country schools. As a lad Yancey attended the neighborhood school near his home. At age fifteen he taught in the school for one term, performing his duties so well that he was invited the next year to teach in the academy located at the county seat. For two years he taught there and studied Latin and mathematics under the principal, the Reverend Hugh Shaw. In Yancey enrolled at The University of North Carolina over the strenuous objections of his mother, who was convinced that no young man who attended the university was "ever of any account afterwards. Murphey, under whom he studied law. On receiving his license, Yancey borrowed enough money from his brother James to open a law office in his native Caswell County in Yancey possessed a rare personal magnetism, and that combined with his great legal skill, common sense, and powers of persuasion within a short time made him one of the most successful lawyers in the state. Soon he was able to pay off his debts and build a fine home, where he dispensed a generous hospitality. In he decisively defeated his former teacher, Archibald D. Murphey, in a race for Congress, receiving all but three of the votes cast in Caswell County. Appointed during the second session to the Committee on Claims, he became chairman of the committee in the third session when Stephen Archer left that position to become chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. Calhoun, and Henry Clay. According to tradition, Speaker Henry Clay frequently called upon Yancey to preside over the House in his stead, a responsibility that Yancey discharged with great efficiency. Another of his intimates in Congress was Nathaniel Macon, already a friend of long standing. Yancey often differed with Macon on specific issues, however, and they frequently voted on opposite sides. At the end of his second term Yancey refused to be a candidate for Congress again, as he wished to give more time to his law practice in order to support his growing family. Economic considerations also dictated his refusal in of an appointment to the superior court bench by Governor John Branch. During his first term he was unanimously elected speaker of the senate, and he held the position by successively unanimous elections until the end of his legislative service. Yancey played a prominent role in almost all the important political developments of his time. He was extremely influential in obtaining the legislation that created the North Carolina Supreme Court, and he deserves much of the credit for reorganizing the office of the state treasurer and for reforming the method of selecting trustees for The University of North Carolina. Against the advice of his friend Nathaniel Macon, he earnestly advocated federal aid to finance internal improvements. Yancey shared with his mentor, Archibald D. Murphey, much of the honor for taking the first steps towards the establishment of public schools in North Carolina. In the legislature enacted a bill, drawn by Yancey and introduced into the senate by Charles A. Hill, that created a Literary Fund, from special sources, which was to be used to establish common schools when the fund had become sufficiently large. Yancey was an early proponent of constitutional revision to grant the western portion of the state representation in the General Assembly commensurate with its population. He had long wished to serve in the U. They had two sons and five daughters: Henry McAden , Mary Mrs. Giles Mebane , Ann m. On Sunday morning, 23 Aug. His condition steadily worsened, and he died the following Saturday, only a few days after his election to an eleventh consecutive term in the state senate. As death drew near, he called his wife to his bedside and gave her instructions concerning the future management of his estate and the training of their children. Powell, When the Past Refused to Die: Used by permission of the publisher. While it repeats some of the foregoing, the links should be helpful: Bartlett Yancey 19 February - 30 August was a U. Congressman from North Carolina between and The Bartlett Yancey family consisted of four sons and five daughters: Swepson Bartlett Yancey died near Yanceyville in and is buried in his family cemetery.

Chapter 2 : "Hannibal Hamlin Biographical Sketch in Calligraphy " by D. W. Bartlett

Samuel E. Bartlett, lawyer, of Ellsworth, Kansas, was born on a farm near Wellington in Sumner County, Kansas, January 18, , a son of Samuel Coan Bartlett and Mary Catherine (Wheeler) Bartlett.

Thomas Alva Bartlett The following biographical sketch was compiled at the time of induction into the Academy in He is the son of Cleave and Alma Hanson Bartlett. Tom Bartlett wooed and won the hand and heart of Mary Louise Bixby, and the two were married on March 20, They are the parents of three sons: Bartlett attended Willamette College, In he earned an A. In he was awarded a Ph. During the years from to Dr. Bartlett accepted the position of president, American University in Cairo, Egypt. During the succeeding six years of his presidency there, the student population increased threefold and the graduate programs were greatly enlarged. Bartlett yielded to the challenge to return to his native country to accept the presidency of Colgate University, where he served from Here he put into operation co-education in a formerly all-male institution. He conducted successful capital campaigns and developed year-round calendars to use facilities more efficiently. During the years Dr. Bartlett served as president of the Association of American Universities. It was in this position that he identified major education issues related to research and graduate education. Bartlett the position of Chancellor of the University of Alabama System with a combined student population of 35, on campus at the University of Alabama, the University of Alabama at Birmingham and the University of Alabama at Huntsville. He retired in for a few months, but then went to Albany, New York to serve as Chancellor of the State University of New York, a system of some 64 campuses. He served as a member and then chairman of the US-Japan Foundation for many years and served as vice president of the American University in Cairo. At age 72, he retired from all boards, but was called back to Egypt to fill in as interim president of the American University in Cairo while its Board of Trustees carries out a search for a new president. Bartlett and his wife, Molly Mary Louise are residing in Cairo.

Chapter 3 : BARTLETTâ€™Nancy â€™ Goodspeed's History of Tennessee

Biographical Sketch Yancey, Bartlett (19 Feb. - 30 Aug. ), lawyer, congressman, and longtime state senator, was born at the Yancey family homestead in Caswell County, now within the limits of the county seat, later () named Yanceyville in Bartlett Yancey's honor.

Bartlett in ; additional materials were purchased from him in The collection comprises photographs, drawings, negatives, and 69 slides. Item lists are available in the library. The suggested citation for the collection is "Paul A. Born July 13, in Moberly, Missouri; died April 19, Graduate of Oberlin College. Over a period of several decades he visited hundreds of haciendas throughout Mexico, photographing and drawing their buildings and decorative objects. Scope and Contents Note Pen-and-ink drawings, photographs, slides, and negatives of Mexican colonial hacienda buildings. The images document architectural forms and details of approximately haciendas, many of which no longer exist. Included are depictions of residences, chapels, furniture, statuary, and other features of the haciendas; also portrayed are things representative of hacienda operations, such as machinery, farm implements, barns, and other structures and objects. The following states and haciendas are covered extensively in the collection: The collection includes negatives for fewer than one-third of the photographs. Drawings were completed by Series and Subseries The Paul A. Bartlett drawings and photographs of Mexican haciendas are organized into two series: The drawings are further divided into two groups and arranged numerically; the bulk of the photographic material is arranged alphabetically by state and thereunder by hacienda name. Drawings Group 2, items Photographic Material Prints and slides. Seven 8 x 10 prints, 69 slides, one box of small prints representing locations in Campeche to Zacatecas, and 13 photographs given to Bartlett by Ricardo Lancaster-Jones in Items depict Baja California through Jalisco; items represent Mexico state through Zacatecas.

Chapter 4 : Elias Lyman Bartlett () - Find A Grave Memorial

This well known and representative business man of the town of Drewsey has a fine hotel, where he does a thriving business and also a large livery and feed stable, being a man of excellent capabilities and one of the prominent figures in this part of Harney county.

Chapter 5 : Michael E. Harris - USC Price

Get this from a library! Biographical sketch of Shubael Bartlett.. [David Ely Bartlett].

Chapter 6 : Bartlett: Biographical Sketch

Calligraphy by D. W. Bartlett. No date. An image scanned from a black and white photograph of a work or art created by arranging the text of a biographical sketch of Hannibal Hamlin into a design that includes his initials in the center.

Chapter 7 : Bartlett Yancey

Biographical Sketch of Bartlett Cocke. "Bartlett Cocke [], architect, son of Emmett and Bessie Cocke, was born in Floresville, Texas, on October 30, He grew up in San Antonio, graduated from the University of Texas in , and attended the School of Architecture at MIT.

Chapter 8 : Welcome to the Alabama Academy of Honor

Biographical sketch, by A.L. BartlettThe city's tributeMemorial services: Ode to Whittier, by Will Carleton. Eulogy, by E.D. MeadMr. Whittier and Haverhill.