Conception[edit] Aspiring filmmaker Bob Rafelson developed the initial idea for The Monkees in , but was unsuccessful in selling the series. He had tried selling it to Revue, the television division of Universal Pictures. Rafelson and Schneider ultimately formed Raybert Productions. However, John Sebastian had already signed the band to a record contract, which would have denied Screen Gems the right to market music from the show. Running Parts for 4 insane boys, age Have courage to work. Must come down for interview. Tork, the last to be chosen, had been working the Greenwich Village scene as a musician, and had shared the stage with Pete Seeger ; he learned of The Monkees from Stephen Stills , whom Rafelson and Schneider had rejected as a songwriter. By that time he was using his real name; he found out about The Monkees through his agent. Not getting much interest from his usual stable of Brill Building writers, Kirshner assigned Tommy Boyce and Bobby Hart to the project. The producers called upon Kirshner to recruit a producer for the Monkees sessions. Garrett, upon meeting the four Monkees in June , decided that Jones would sing lead, a choice that was unpopular with the group. This cool reception led Kirshner to drop Garrett and buy out his contract. Because of this, they would often bring in each singer individually. You are now duping the public. In conjunction with the first broadcast of the television show on September 12, , on the NBC television network, NBC and Columbia had a major hit on their hands. Twenty years later, during their reunion, it would spend another 24 weeks on the Billboard charts. From television to concert stage[edit] Publicity shot in In assigning instruments for purposes of the television show, a dilemma arose as to which of the four would be the drummer. Both Nesmith a skilled guitarist and bassist and Tork who could play several stringed and keyboard instruments were peripherally familiar with the instrument but both declined to give the drum set a try. Jones knew how to play the drums and tested well enough initially on the instrument, but the producers felt that, behind a drum kit, the camera would exaggerate his short stature and make him virtually hidden from view. Thus, Dolenz who only knew how to play the guitar was assigned to become the drummer. Tork taught Dolenz his first few beats on the drums, enough for him to fake his way through filming the pilot, but he was soon taught how to play properly. For example, Tork was actually a more experienced guitar player than Nesmith, while Nesmith had at one time specifically trained on the bass. In concert appearances Tork also took much of the guitar duties, even in appearances with Nesmith, and Dolenz often plays rhythm guitar on stage. Unlike most television shows of the time, The Monkees episodes were written with many setups, requiring frequent breaks to prepare the set and cameras for short bursts of filming. Some of the "bursts" are considered proto-music videos, inasmuch as they were produced to sell the records. The four actors would spend hour days on the set, many of them waiting for the production crew to do their jobs. Noticing that their instruments were left on the set unplugged, the four decided to turn them on and start playing. As the band was essential to this aspect of the recording process, there were few limits on how long they could spend in the recording studio, and the result was an extensive catalogue of unreleased recordings. The massive success of the series and its spin-off records created intense pressure to mount a touring version of the group. Against the initial wishes of the producers, the band went out on the road and made their debut live performance in December in Hawaii. They had no time to rehearse a live performance except between takes on set. They worked on the TV series all day, recorded in the studio at night and slept very little. The weekends were usually filled with special appearances or filming of special sequences. These performances were sometimes used during the actual series. One entire episode was filmed featuring live music. The last show of the premiere season, "Monkees on Tour", was shot in a documentary style by filming a concert in Phoenix, Arizona , on January 21, The four Monkees performed all the instruments and vocals for most of the live set. During the summer tour of the United States and the UK from which the Live recordings are taken , they were backed by a band called the Sundowners. The Monkees toured Australia and Japan in The results were far better than expected. Wherever they went, the group was greeted by scenes of fan adulation reminiscent of Beatlemania. This gave the singers increased confidence in their fight for control over the musical material chosen for the series. At the time songwriters Boyce and Hart considered the Monkees to be their project, with Tommy Boyce stating in the Rhino reissue of More of the Monkees that he considered the Monkees to be actors in the television show, while Boyce and Hart were the songwriters and producers doing the records. They wanted Micky to sing the faster songs and have Davy sing the ballads. However, the Monkees had been complaining that the music publishing company would not allow them to play their own instruments on their records, or to use more of their own material. These complaints intensified when Kirshner moved track recording from California to New York, leaving the band out of the musical process until they were called upon to add their vocals to the completed tracks. This campaign eventually forced Kirshner to let the group have more participation in the recording process. My job was to be an actor and to come in and to sing the stuff when I was asked to do so. I had no problem with that. The artist is the bottom line. We were confused, especially me. But all of us shared the desire to play the songs we were singing. Nesmith and Tork were particularly upset when they were on tour in January and discovered this second album. Indeed, the Monkees had not even been given a copy of the album; they had to buy it from a record store. Kirshner had presented the group with royalty checks and gold records. Moelis reminded Nesmith that he was under contract. The confrontation ended with Nesmith punching a hole in a wall and saying, "That could have been your face! This single was only released in Canada and was withdrawn after a couple of weeks. I kicked them out of the studio because I had a TV show that I had to put songs in, and to me it was a business and I had to knock off the songs. Screen Gems held the publishing rights to a wealth of material, with the Monkees being offered the first choice of many new songs. Due to the abundance of material numerous tracks were recorded but left unreleased, until Rhino Records started releasing them through the Missing Links series of albums, starting in the late s. A rumor persists that the Monkees were offered " Sugar, Sugar " in , but declined to record it. Producer and songwriter Jeff Barry , joint writer and composer of "Sugar, Sugar" with Andy Kim , has denied this, saying that the song had not even been written at the time. To me, that was the cruelest thing. With Kirshner dismissed as musical supervisor, in late February Nesmith hired former Turtles bassist Douglas Farthing Hatlelid, who was better known by his stage name Chip Douglas , to produce the next Monkees album, [35] which was to be the first Monkees album where they were the only musicians, outside of most of the bass, and the horns. Douglas was responsible for both music presentationâ€”actually leading the band and engineering recordingsâ€”and playing bass on most of Headquarters. The A-side rose to No. Having a more country-folk-rock sound than the pop outings under Kirshner, Sandoval notes in the Deluxe Edition reissue from Rhino that the album rose to No. Pepper released the following week, which would knock Headquarters to the 2 spot on the charts for the next 11 weeks, the same weeks which would become known by the counterculture as the " Summer of Love ". A selection that Dolenz wrote and composed, "Randy Scouse Git", was issued under the title "Alternate Title" owing to the controversial nature of its original title as a single internationally, where it rose to No. Nesmith would continue in his country-rock leanings, adding the pedal steel guitar to three of the songs, along with contributing his self-composed countrified-rock song "Sunny Girlfriend". The Monkees wrote five of the 12 songs on the album, plus the two tracks "Band 6" and "Zilch". Headquarters has more interesting songs and a better quality level [than previous albums] None of the tracks is a throwaway The improvement trend is laudable. At the height of their fame in , they also suffered from a media backlash. We were under siege; wherever we went there was such resentment for us. We were constantly mocked and humiliated by the press. We all knew what was going on inside. Kirshner had been purged. The rabid element and the hatred that was engendered is almost impossible to describe. It lingers to this day among people my own age. Technically it was much better, but I think it suffers for that reason. They used a mixture of themselves and session musicians on the album. Nesmith stated, "One of the things that I really felt was honest was country-rock. I wanted to move the Monkees more into that because It had a lot of un-country things in it: So it was a little kind of a new wave country song. Praised in The Los Angeles Times by the author of The Encyclopedia of Jazz, jazz critic Leonard Feather wrote "Verbally and musically, Mike Nesmith is one of the most articulate spokesmen for the new and literate breed of pop musicians who have spring from the loins of primitive rock. Micky sang the pop songs e. Davy sang the ballads e. This last song is notable for added effects to make it sound like an old record even including a "record skipping" simulation made before the Beatles "Honey Pie", which used a similar effect. March Learn how and when to remove this template message During the filming of the second season, the band became tired of scripts which they deemed monotonous and stale. They had already succeeded in eliminating the laugh track a then-standard on American sitcoms , with the bulk of Season 2 episodes airing minus the canned chuckles. They proposed switching the format of the series to become more like a variety show, with musical guests and live performances. This desire was partially fulfilled within some second-season episodes, with guest stars like musicians Frank Zappa , Tim Buckley and Charlie Smalls composer of The Wiz performing on the show.

What in me is dark Illumin, what is low raise and support; That to the highth of this great Argument I may assert Eternal Providence , [25] And justifie the wayes of God to men. Nine times the Space that measures Day and Night [50] To mortal men, he with his horrid crew Lay vanquisht, rowling in the fiery Gulfe Confounded though immortal: If he Whom mutual league, United thoughts and counsels, equal hope And hazard in the Glorious Enterprize, Joynd with me once, now misery hath joynd [90] In equal ruin: What though the field be lost? And what is else not to be overcome? That Glory never shall his wrath or might [] Extort from me. If then his Providence Our labour must be to pervert that end, And out of good still to find means of evil; [] Which oft times may succeed, so as perhaps Shall grieve him, if I fail not, and disturb His inmost counsels from thir destined aim. Seest thou yon dreary Plain, forlorn and wilde, [] The seat of desolation, voyd of light, Save what the glimmering of these livid flames Casts pale and dreadful? Thither let us tend From off the tossing of these fiery waves, There rest, if any rest can harbour there, [] And reassembling our afflicted Powers , Consult how we may henceforth most offend Our Enemy, our own loss how repair, How overcome this dire Calamity, What reinforcement we may gain from Hope, [] If not what resolution from despaire. Such resting found the sole Of unblest feet. Be it so, since he [] Who now is Sovran can dispose and bid What shall be right: Farewel happy Fields Where Joy for ever dwells: Hail horrors, hail [] Infernal world, and thou profoundest Hell Receive thy new Possessor: Or in this abject posture have ye sworn To adore the Conquerour? Nor did they not perceave the evil plight [] In which they were, or the fierce pains not feel; Yet to thir Generals Voyce they soon obeyd Innumerable. He also against the house of God was bold: Belial came last, then whom a Spirit more lewd [] Fell not from Heaven, or more gross to love Vice for it self: All in a moment through the gloom were seen Ten thousand Banners rise into the Air [] With Orient Colours waving: And now his heart Distends with pride, and hardning in his strength Glories: Thrice he assayd, and thrice in spight of scorn, Tears such as Angels weep , burst forth: Thither, if but to pry, shall be perhaps Our first eruption, thither or elsewhere: But these thoughts Full Counsel must mature: Peace is despaird, [] For who can think Submission? Let none admire [] That riches grow in Hell; that soyle may best Deserve the precious bane. But far within And in thir own dimensions like themselves In close recess and secret conclave sat [] A thousand Demy-Gods on golden seats, Frequent and full. After short silence then And summons read, the great consult began. The End of the First Book.
