A cold steady rain. It ends at 7: I check the forecast to see overcast all day, rain starting again late afternoon. Low grey clouds with a NE wind. Hand Point at 7: And rain begins to fall the weather must not have listened to the forecast. I can see the Kent Narrows bridge up ahead and go under power to try and make the 8: It is cold, rainy and dark, I feel lonely. We motor north and reach the Chester River by 8: Off Wickes Beach by 9: Rain all day, all night, and again tomorrow, high winds coming through beginning the early morning hours. I get a text from Mary Lou. She and Fred saw my tracks going north out of Kent Narrows. They are on their way north too, in their powerboat cruiser, the weather chasing them to their Rock Hall home. Rock Hall is a nice place. With the forecast maybe a time for a weather day. I begin a series of tacks into the harbor, dodging a series of cruising boats - both sail and power - coming home early because of the weather. I was under sail and had right of way but tacked to keep clear of the boats heading for both Rock Hall and Swan Creek. The closer we get to Rock Hall the heavier the rain. Distance can be deceiving in bad weather. I tie the tiller in place and the boat holds a steady course while I go forward to use the bilge pump. One more tack at Hummingbird Point and we turn back towards the channel entrance. Tied up Rock Hall Landing Marina at 1: Yes, a weather day sounds good.
