

Chapter 1 : MA LTC, Firearms Safety Class, calendrierdelascience.com, Boston

Boston's on Guns and courage is well written. Many quotations from John Ross' book Unintended Consequences, as well as from patriots going back to the revolution of , frame a nice discussion of the authors thesis, namely that the second amendment is the final guardian of the rest of the constitution.

Party was updating his popular book Boston on Guns and Courage, I was pleased. Although I never expressed this wish to him, he fulfilled it in a big way with his update. In fact, his new book expands on his theme so well that he gave it a new name: Its size gives an indication of what the reader is in for; at pages, the book has some serious heft. The book is divided into six sections, with subtitles such as "Combat Rifles", "Guns in General", and "Acquisition". Actually, just reading the table of contents provides helpful information, as BTP includes section headings under each chapter. The book is well-organized, overall. In an introductory chapter on terminology, Boston covers the basics of shooting and preparation. Then he delves into combat rifles, guns in general, and gear in turn. Included in the section on general guns is a chapter titled "Women and Guns" which seems a bit out of place in the section. It could easily go in the "basics" section, as its information is neither gun- nor gender-specific. Boston devotes considerable attention to the challenge of acquiring firearms and gear, investing one chapter into covering the BATF, their methods, and ways to avoid being entrapped by them. The last two sections address current and possible future disarmament strategies, and psychological aspects of preparation. This includes a highly thought-provoking discussion on preparing and using a cold carry piece. However, with cops going after former gun owners in their never-ending crusade against the second amendment , such issues may become relevant overnight. The heart of the book is the evaluation of weapons and equipment. He includes older weapons and foreign ones, cheapies and high-end firearms, addressing value, utility, and availability of each. The rifle information is extensive, including a comprehensive rating for each rifle. Handguns are also given fairly thorough treatment. My only major complaint with the book is the dearth of information on shotguns--out of a nearly page book, only 5 pages on a firearm type that is less regulated in the States than any other so far , and that many people choose for home defense. The fact remains that, for whatever reasons, individuals will choose shotguns as part of their defensive equipment and thus would benefit from learning more about available features, gear, training courses, and uses. Typos and other such errors are few, but some are substantive. On other matters, however, a lack of information makes it difficult to evaluate the quality of the information being presented. In there were guys in Montana welding shackles to the insides of railroad box cars. If such a thing is true, it ought to be independently verifiable by interested parties, and providing more specific information what railroad company, for example would help individuals accomplish that. The "Resources" section at the back of the book offers a wide variety of helpful resources, from books and movies designed to help with preparedness and planning, to sources of gear, and contact information for relevant groups and organizations. This section is a nifty little gem on its own! Some are fairly easy, such as the imminent regulation of. Our backs were not made to be saddled nor our mouths to be bridled! We are the sovereigns--they are the servants. Back off, now, before you step into the abyss. Back off, now, while you are allowed to. Chapter 4 : Kenneth W. Royce - Wikipedia

Moral Courage and Guns Boston University School of Theology Madison Park Development Corporation, to explore the topics of moral courage, gun violence, and advocating for gun legislation.

The fact that my officers were able to confiscate 2 guns in less than 15 minutes underscores, not only their bravery, but the fact that there are way too many guns out there. Less than two months into the new year and my officers have already taken over guns off our streets. In light of the public safety violations, officers activated their lights and sirens and stopped the car. While talking to the operator, officers quickly noted that he appeared to be nervous and uneasy. Additionally, officers recognized the operator from previous encounters. In light of the above, officers asked the operator and his two passengers to exit the vehicle. As soon as the occupants exited the car, officers immediately observed a round of ammunition on the backseat floor of the car. In light of their discovery, officers requested a ballistic K-9 to respond to the scene. Upon closer inspection of that area, officers were able to locate a firearm see above photo which appeared to have been wedged into an opening between the dash and steering column. The firearm, described as Ruger P95DC, and ammunition were quickly confiscated and taken into evidence. While on random patrol in the area of Olney Street, officers observed two individuals, described as black non-Hispanic males, walking towards the intersection of Geneva Avenue and Rossetter Street. Officers promptly noted that one of the individuals was walking in such a way as if to suggest he may be in possession of a firearm. Specifically, officers noted that one of the individuals was walking with his right arm pressed against an object in his waist area. In addition to the above, officers noted that the suspect, who appeared to be nervous, repeatedly looked back over his shoulder back in the direction of the officers. In light of their observations, officers pulled up to the duo in an effort to better understand and further investigate their observations. As soon as the officers pulled up, the individual believed to be armed, began to walk away from the officers. When officers attempted to speak to him, the suspect took off running in a full sprint down Rossetter Street. Officers quickly gave chase and were able to catch up to and subdue the suspect who was found hiding behind several trash cans in the rear of 64 Rossetter Street. A pat frisk of the suspect for weapons proved unsuccessful. However, when officers retraced the steps taken during the foot pursuit, officers were able to locate and recover a loaded black-colored firearm see photo that the suspect had attempted to bury under a pile of loose soil in the rear of 78 Rossetter Street.
