Dick Brewer , c. The three men had wielded an economic and political hold over Lincoln County since the early s, due in part to their ownership of a beef contract with nearby Fort Stanton and a well-patronized dry goods store in Lincoln. Tunstall put Bonney in charge of nine prime horses and told him to relocate them to his ranch for safekeeping. During the encounter, one member of the posse shot Tunstall in the chest, knocking him off his horse. Baker and Morton were killed while trying to escape. Hindman , were killed. Battle of Lincoln On the night of Sunday, July 14, McSween and the Regulatorsâ€”now a group of fifty or sixty menâ€”went to Lincoln and stationed themselves in the town among several buildings. Another group led by Marin Chavez and Doc Scurlock positioned themselves on the roof of a saloon. Peppin then sent a request for assistance to Colonel Nathan Dudley , commandant of nearby Fort Stanton. In a reply to Peppin, Dudley refused to intervene but later arrived in Lincoln with troops, turning the battle in favor of the Murphy-Dolan faction. Bonney and the other men fled the building when all rooms but one were burning. Beckwith, who was then shot and killed by Bonney. All four were indicted for the murder, despite conflicting evidence that Bernstein had been killed by Constable Atanacio Martinez. Antrim, alias Kid, alias Bonny [sic]" but was unable to execute them "owing to the disturbed condition of affairs in that county, resulting from the acts of a desperate class of men". It specifically excluded persons who had been convicted of or indicted for a crime, and therefore excluded Bonney. According to eyewitnesses, the pair were innocent bystanders forced at gunpoint by Jesse Evans to witness the murder. On March 15, Governor Wallace replied, agreeing to a secret meeting to discuss the situation. Bonney met with Wallace in Lincoln on March 17, During the meeting and in subsequent correspondence, Wallace promised Bonney protection from his enemies and clemency if he would offer his testimony to a grand jury. Bonney escaped from the Lincoln County jail on June 17, The origin of the difficulty was not learned. He walked up to Grant, told him he admired his revolver, and asked to examine it. Grant handed it over. Before returning the pistol, which Bonney noticed contained only three cartridges, he positioned the cylinder so the next hammer fall would land on an empty chamber. When it failed to fire, Bonney drew his own weapon and shot Grant in the head. A reporter for the Las Vegas Optic quoted Bonney as saying the encounter "was a game of two and I got there first". Carlyle offered to exchange places with Greathouse, and Bonney accepted the offer. Carlyle later attempted to escape by jumping through a window but he was shot three times and killed. The shoot-out ended in a standoff; the posse withdrew and Bonney, Rudabaugh, and Wilson rode away. Unknown to Bonney and his companions, a posse led by Pat Garrett was waiting for them. When they arrived on December 26, they were met by crowds of curious onlookers. The following day, an armed mob gathered at the train depot before the prisoners, who were already on board the train with Garrett, departed for Santa Fe. Garrett refused to surrender the prisoner, and a tense confrontation ensued until he agreed to let the sheriff and two other men accompany the party to Santa Fe, where they would petition the governor to release Rudabaugh to them. On the evening of April 28, , while Garrett was in White Oaks collecting taxes, Deputy Bob Olinger took five other prisoners across the street for a meal, leaving James Bell, another deputy, alone with Bonney at the jail. Bonney asked to be taken outside to use the outhouse behind the courthouse; on their return to the jail, Bonneyâ€”who was walking ahead of Bell up the stairs to his cellâ€”hid around a blind corner, slipped out of his handcuffs, and beat Bell with the loose end of the cuffs. Bonney waited at the upstairs window for Olinger to respond to the gunshot that killed Bell and called out to him, "Look up, old boy, and see what you get". When Olinger looked up, Bonney shot and killed him. The first bullet struck Bonney in the chest just above his heart, killing him. Ritch, the acting New Mexico governor, refused to pay the reward. Most of these claims were easily disproven but two have remained topics of discussion and debate. In , a central Texas man Ollie P. This was unsupported by his family until , some time after his death. The image shows Bonney wearing a vest over a sweater, a slouch cowboy hat, and a bandanna, while holding an Winchester rifle with its butt resting on the floor. For years, this was the only photograph scholars and historians agreed showed Bonney. This led historians to believe he was left-handed, but they did not take into account that the ferrotype process produces reversed images. Horan and Paul Sann wrote that Bonney was "right-handed and carried his pistol on his right hip". If authentic it is the only known photo of Billy the Kid and the Regulators together and the only image to feature their wives and female companions. McCubbin and outlaw historian John Boessenecker concluded in that the photograph does not show Bonney. Kent Gibson, a forensic video and still image expert, offered the services of his facial recognition software, and stated that Bonney is one of the individuals in the image. A photograph curator at the Palace of the Governors archives, Daniel Kosharek, said the image is "problematic on a lot of fronts", including the small size of the figures and the lack of resemblance of the background landscape to Lincoln County or the state in general. As a result of his efforts, a stone memorial marked with the names of the three men and their death dates beneath the word "Pals" was erected in the center of the burial area. New Mexico Governor Bruce King arranged for the county sheriff to fly to California to return it to Fort Sumner, [] where it was reinstalled in May. Although both markers are behind iron fencing, a group of vandals entered the enclosure at night in June and tipped the stone over. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed.
