Chapter 1 : Occupy Wall Street: 'Brother, Can You Spare A Dime?' | HuffPost

In lieu of an abstract, here is a brief excerpt of the content: 5 | Brother, Can You Spare a Thousand? Who Gives to Whom? One of the most popular ways to curry support is to buy it. It is an unspoken prerequisite that a [leadership] candidate has to be an aggressive fundraiser who has campaigned for.

Author, historian, professor Occupy Wall Street: The ideas that inform the direction of the movement arise from the actions of the movement itself, not from pundits or armchair commentators no matter how sympathetic. It is the activism in the streets that is the most important thing. The organic connection of thought and action will evolve on its own terms. Opinion polls, even those that indicate widespread support for the OWS movement, are tertiary at best, epiphenomena at worst. OWS, so long as the direct action of street demonstrations prevails and continues, is at this moment growing into something that none of us can see at this time. And it is this mobilization of ideas and activism focused on the future that gives OWS its strength and ties it closely to the aspirations of the Arab Spring and the social movements that are now building in Europe. OWS has clearly taken the bankers and their political servants in Washington and in the corporate media by surprise. Tangible effects of the movement can already be seen in the authorities in Oakland backing off from their repression. Even the big banks are rethinking their latest gouging of their "customers" in the form of added fees. Obama did us a favor by showing us definitively that the Democratic Party is useless in a time of real crisis even when controlling both chambers of Congress. From the shoe store clerk at the mall to the nurse or teacher, even police officers and firefighters, are all catching on to the scam that Wall Street and its servants among Democratic and Republican politicians have perpetrated against us. If an honest opinion poll were taken today, disgust with Wall Street would not be 65 or even 75 percent but closer to percent. You can feel it out there. Few people have internalized the crisis to the point of blaming the victims even though you hear that point of view coming from all facets of the corporate media. The illegitimacy of a rigged economic system is beginning to sink in. Back in the early s Americans widely picked up on the song: Yip Harburg, explained it this way: The prevailing greeting at the time [], on every block you passed This is a man who says: I built the railroads. I built that tower. I fought your wars. I was the kid with the drum. Why the hell should I be standing in a breadline now? What happened to all this wealth I created? The Occupy Wall Street movement echoes the spirit of solidarity and questioning of the status quo that Yip Harburg captured back in They used to tell me I was building a dream, with peace and glory ahead, Why should I be standing in line, just waiting for bread? Once I built a railroad, I made it run, made it race against time. Brother, can you spare a dime? Once in khaki suits, gee we looked swell, Full of that Yankee Doodly Dum, Half a million boots went slogging through Hell, And I was the kid with the drum! Buddy, can you spare a dime?

Chapter 2 : Brother in Latin - English-Latin Dictionary - Glosbe

Which historical event was the major incentive for Harburg to write the song, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" Which statement explains the irony of Harburg's description of the bread line? What led Harburg to write the song, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?"

Realizing that the plant could be sued for millions, Burns considers options for escaping that liability. He and his lawyers settle on the idea of tricking Homer into signing a waiver by pretending that it is an award, given in a hastily-concocted ceremony for "The First Annual Montgomery Burns Award For Outstanding Achievement in the Field of Excellence". After boldly claiming that all a person needs is a good idea, Herb sees a woman struggling to understand her baby and seizes on the idea of developing a baby translator. Herb finds a newspaper with a photo of Homer winning the Burns award and accepting the cash prize, and decides to pay him a visit to ask for a chance to make his money back. Homer tries out the Spinemelter Homer, though, has other plans for the award money. Marge talks him out of making the purchase. They take him in, bathe him and give him a new suit. Herb then goes to the Simpson home. When Homer answers the door, Herb punches him in the face and walks in. Herb asks them for a second chance and explains his baby translator idea. Now with the money as well as the idea, Herb goes to work on his baby translator. After much work with Maggie, he unveils the translator to the family, who are quite overwhelmed by it despite its clunky appearance. However, the device does work, and Herb takes it to a Baby Convention, where he is inundated by orders and an offer from a baby goods store to stock thousands of his translators. Herb believes that he has made his fortune back again. Finally, to Homer, two gifts: Homer is immensely pleased by this gift. Production[edit] This episode aired later than most episodes, in August. This was because Fox wanted an extra episode during Summer so they could become "the biggest network" on television. As a result of this, the crew all had to work extra hours in order to get the episode ready. The episode currently has a 7.
