At the end I mention changes for version 0. I noticed that the. HDT- 1, and it seemed to have a. However, after testing the unit. I noticed white marks and smudges on the finish. I had handled the unit. I wiped the stuff off and continued, but it kept. I moved the unit around in the lab. After a day of this I. The photo above shows what happened when I ran my fingers across. I had washed it. What is this persistent stuff? The enclosure finish was much smoother and the small amount of white. In the prototype HDT- 1. X I evaluated, the AM. RF amplifier on the right was enclosed by a metal shield with removable cover. PCB, but the shield was. When I put my finger. SPDIF cable, it got much louder, as did. With my hands away from the. I believe this very sparse. I saw no sudden onset of distortion for an FM test signal deviated beyond 1. Connecting both the optical and analog outputs to a Mitsubishi M- PF5. B lower for optical than for analog. The deemphasis error was considerably lower for the optical output see the curves below. Forcing analog also will keep the tuner from. While the tuner progressively blends the stereo channels as a signal gets weaker, a strong signal with co- channel or multipath interference may be unlistenable. Forcing mono can clean things up. Forced mono reverts to stereo whenever you change frequency except with the manual tuning button or cycle power. When you switch to. This lets you sleep in the same room as the. Pressing any key turns on the backlight so you can check the clock. During normal operation an option. This feature allows a broadcast engineer to measure amplitude and delay differences between the analog and digital signals. It lets a consumer instantly compare analog and digital sound quality with an external switch normal mode switching takes several seconds. Split- audio mode uses the left source channel and the audio output level is 8 d. B higher than normal. This function is useful only to a broadcaster. It takes about 5. FM band and 2. This is very annoying when tuning manually, entering frequency digits, or even setting the clock. According to Sangean, the problem is due to an updated i. Biquity software development kit. These automatic functions cannot be disabled. There is no stepped muting. Assuming the noise level changes linearly in this region, estimated stereo 5. B quieting sensitivity is 3. I estimated mono 5. B quieting sensitivity as the 5. B quieting point, allowing a calculated 6. B noise reduction for the lowpass noise filter that progressively engages below 2. Bf signal 1 d. B above the onset of channel blending for an isolated signal , a 1. Bf signal at either adjacent channel dropped separation to 2. With signals at both adjacents, just 5. Bf signal, a single 7. Bf adjacent reduced stereo separation 1. Bf adjacent dropped it to 2. I found a couple of stereo signals on the air well above the normal blend threshold that had blended to mono due to a strong adjacent. However, on one occasion I noticed that an unusual number of signals had blended to mono. Resetting the tuner restored normal operation, confirming a firmware bug. Bf monophonic desired signal, the high end started to roll off as I increased a 1. Bf, the response at 1. Hz was down 1. B and the frequency response curve sloped downward above 1 k. Hz it looked like a single- pole LPF with a 3- k. For left- only stereo, the whole curve dropped 6 d. While all of the tuners were able to reject the adjacent- channel signals, the HDT- 1. X always yielded cleaner audio, often strikingly better with no audible distortion. I believe the high group- delay variation of narrow ceramic filters aggravates residual multipath distortion. X uses a digital IF filter with uniform group delay. A conventional tuner was undistorted. I used the test equipment listed here. I made these measurements in a way that sidesteps the phase- noise sidebands of the tuner and signal generators. For these measurements I used a 5.

B quieting level of 1. Bf, which disregards the lowpass noise filter response. It is not much lower than the 5. B quieting level because of the large and frequent impulses that begin near the FM threshold. I averaged the noise level with the 5- second time constant of a true RMS meter. I had no trouble with RF overload at my location. At signal levels above 8.
