

Chapter 1 : Bye Bye Baby - Ich hab' die Nase voll () - IMDb

Bye Bye Baby has a shockingly tactile quality that hits you right between the eyes with its brazen probing of the human heart. The play's protagonist, Elle, is a seductive, witty, and immediately recognizable character.

Some of them have additional beats and horn sounds thrown into the original mix. In his review of the single, Jose F. Dennis Mitchell and Robin Hancock were the recording engineers for the track while George Karras was the mixing engineer. Ted Jensen did the mastering for the song with Mark Goodman as assistant engineer. In order to achieve that, they used a Pultec HLF filter. Shimkin recalled that the vocals for "Bye Bye Baby" were from the first take. He added that the filtered vocal effect were applied during recording and played with while Madonna was in front of the microphone singing. The vocals also sound as if coming from an antique radio due to using filters on them. Problems playing this file? Guitar sounds are spread throughout occasionally with shouting voices being heard in the background. The song ends with the sound of an explosion. I think it does", she affirms. Considine from The Baltimore Sun praised the song by saying: Smith from The Daily Vault found the track to be "defiant" and "in-your-face". He realized that Madonna directed the lyrics to her past relationships with actor Warren Beatty and comedian Sandra Bernhard. He added that her singing did not sound "assertive" and that "[Madonna] could be a drag queen toying with a pop hit of the past. However, it peaked at number seven on the Italian Singles Chart despite not being officially released as a single in that country. It became the fifth single from the Erotica album to place within the top 10 there. The next week, it peaked at number 15 on the chart. On February 6, , after eight weeks, it fell off the chart. It re-entered the chart week of January 23, , ultimately peaking at number She cavorted on stage with three scantily clad women in a brothel-style setting, dressed in tuxedos and top hats, in a choreographed, highly sexual routine. Nevertheless, "Bye Bye Baby" was chosen and performed with the choreography they had been practicing for The Girlie Show World Tour , since it represented the whole idea behind the tour. A voice-alteration similar to the single was used in the performance. The dance routine revolved around three chairs. The female strippers seduced Madonna and the backup singers, by rubbing against them, holding sexual poses and dominated them, before they took control again. He added that on a mere glance the performance might appear to be a "typical provoking one" from the singer, but underlying it was a "more complex queer perspective". The butch roles are played by white and African-American women, while the strippers were played by Asian-American women. There are simulations of masturbation and sexual penetration in the performance, while the butch females control the femmes.
