Contact Author There are many kinds of celebrations in Britain - from royal to religious and from traditional to more modern. This great country has been around for almost 1, years and has had influences before that, all helping to make rich and vibrant celebrations that many enjoy every year. At this time, Big Ben rings in the new year. Many people celebrate by either having parties at home, or by going out and partying with friends. Many people also make new years resolutions as is customary in many other countries in the world. This is known as "First Footing," and the friend that enters usually gives a small ceremonial gift. Twelfth Night and Epiphany - January 5 - 6 It is considered bad luck to have Christmas celebration up past the day of Epiphany, so many people used January 5 Twelfth Night to take them down. Some people host parties and serve Twelfth Night cakes which have had one dried pea and one dried bean baked into them. If you are the one of the lucky party-goers who receive one of the other in their slice of cake, you will be crowned "king" or "queen" of the evening. Epiphany is a Christian holiday which celebrates the coming of the Magi after the birth of Christ. Some people attend a church service on this day. He is best known for writing the song, "Auld Lang Syne. Candlemas Day - February 2 This day marks the middle of the winter season - from the shortest day of the year to the Spring Equinox. This day also celebrates the cleansing of Mary. Many couples will spend the evening celebrating with a special meal. Occasionally, children will send valentines to one another in celebration. Purim varies Purim is a Jewish holiday that is celebrated on the 14th day of Adar a month of the Jewish calendar. This is the traditional day where Queen Esther saved the Jews from the decree of death in Babylon. Many gather together to read the story of the queen. Many will attend church services held in his honor. Some communities also hold "pancake races" in which people run a distance while flipping pancakes in a frying pan. In order to win, a person must cross the finish line without burning breakfast. Many people give up something they enjoy during lent. Two small pouches are given out. This day is also celebrated by the giving of eggs, decorating eggs and Easter egg hunts, where eggs are hidden for children and playful adults to find. George who is said to have defeated a dragon. The day is celebrated with parades and parties and flags with "St. May Day - May 1 This day is celebrated beautifully with may poles and flowers. It is traditionally a celebration of spring and fertility. Trooping the Colour Trooping the Colours - Sometime in June Trooping the Colours is celebrated every year with the British Army and the regiments of the Commonwealth performing a ceremony that originated in the seventeenth century AD. Swan Upping - Third Week of July Many celebrate this day by going to the River Thames and watching a procession of swans and traditional boats. Notting Hill Carnival - Last Monday in August On this day, there is a street festival that millions go to see and participate in every year. The parade include colorful floats, bands and many other attractions. Halloween - October 31 A day where people dress up, bob for apples and have bonfires. Many attend themed parties and children will occasionally go trick-or-treating though this traditions was started elsewhere, despite halloween having British origins. Bonfire Night Guy Fawkes Day - November 5 This day is in celebration of the failed gunpowder attempt to blow up the house of Parliament in It is celebrated with fireworks at night. Many families will make effigies of Guy Fawkes and burn them in a bon fire either in their own back yards or with other members of the community. Since the day is so close to Halloween, many will combine the two holidays maybe that is why there are so many Guy Fawkes masks available. Many people wear a poppy in their pocket in remembrance. Many Scots celebrate with special dances and festivals and the Scottish flag is flown throughout the country. On this day, Muslims celebrate the birth of their prophet Muhammad. Many use the day to remember the prophet and reflect on stories about his life. Some will even fast during the day. Christmas - December 25 This day is celebrated by friends and family by giving gifts and going to a special Sunday service at church. Many celebrate the tradition of "Father Christmas" by giving gifts that he delivered during the night. Many families also share in a Christmas feast that may involve ham, minced pies and Yorkshire pudding! At the beginning of the meal, each member of the family will cross arms and together pull
