Piano - Elementary Celebration Series. Composed by The Royal Conservatory Music Development Program. This edition: edition. Celebration Series.

The last revision of the series happened in , so is the year that the materials are due for reissue in revised form. Rather than a small, incremental change, the Celebration Series is a complete reboot of the series, with a huge amount of new and innovative material. Starting in , hundreds of teachers were contacted for their input regarding how the Piano Syllabus could be improved in the next edition. In , the RCM initiated a call for submissions for repertoire to be included in the new syllabus and Celebration Series. A considerable number of compilers and reviewers were assembled, resulting in over 40 sequenced books of repertoire, etudes, technique, and musicianship skills. There are both book and online version of the syllabus. We all work in different ways. Therefore, teachers will have the option of either using the syllabus in book form or as a PDF file. A huge number of new selections have been chosen for the repertoire and etude books of the Celebration Series. There are 22 books of repertoire and etudes in the series, which have been meticulously chosen, levelled, and sequenced for both enjoyment and pedagogical value. Piano Repertoire 1 Edition. Baroque, Classical, Romantic, 20th century and 21st century. All the recordings are brand new. As Artistic Consultant, I had to ensure that all of the pianists adhered to a high level of artistry while maintaining complete faithfulness to the score. This will ensure that pianists learning the repertoire will always have a reference-quality recording to listen to while learning the music. After the first edition is sold out, all subsequent editions of the series will only include download codes. Technical Requirements are streamlined. One of the main complaints about the technical requirements was that they were too complex and arcane Grades 4 and 7 in particular come to mind. With the new series, the RCM listened, and the technical requirements are now streamlined into a much more effective sequencing. Technical Requirements for Piano. Early Intermediate Level 3. Ear Training materials and requirements are revised. The changes to ear tests for are numerous. The clapback exercises from Preparatory A through Level 4 now require the teacher or examiner to identify the time signature and count in one measure before beginning the example. Intervals are also presented differently at different levels: Chord identification is now introduced at the Preparatory Level, and the sequencing of chord identification is considerably different. Cadences have been replaced with chord progressions, with specific chord progression options from Level 5 onwards. For more specific information, please consult the Piano Syllabus. Sight Reading materials and requirements are revised. The new Four Star books stay faithful to the original philosophy, with several changes. Sight clapping exercises now will require that you tap a steady beat for one measure before clapping or tapping the actual rhythm. In addition, sight reading examples at Level 5 and above are now presented as a single example, with a boxed subset of the entire selection acting as the rhythmic example. Online ear training is now available for each level of the Four Star books. One of the genuine benefits of the online ear training is that they are all played on a grand piano in a recording studio, by a human namely, me. Edited by Laura Beauchamp-Williamson. Book and online audio. The substitution policy is expanded. One of the important things that we learned through the development process of the syllabus is that teachers want flexibility to assign students material that they believe is both fun and has pedagogical value. For more specific information, please consult the Substitutions Summary on page 10 of the Piano Syllabus. There are small changes to the marking scheme for most levels. To reflect the changing priorities of the repertoire, the mark totals for some grades are slightly different. From Levels , the current repertoire marking scheme will now be Levels repertoire marks will change from to Memory marks for Preparatory levels will be in line with levels Memory mark deductions for Levels will now be 1 mark each as opposed to 1. For more information, the Piano Syllabus is your best resource. There is a cross-over policy that is in effect from now until August 31, The cross-over plan this time around is different than in previous years. From now until August 31, , students can freely mix and match from the and repertoire and etude books. From September 1, until August 31, , some elements will immediately move to the Syllabus, while others will be in a cross-over period.
