

Chapter 1 : How to Eliminate Monsters Under the Bed (with Pictures) - wikiHow

Smith's body was stuffed under the bed and left there. It was found four days later, on 27 December During the intervening four days, the room had been rented to others each night.

The Body Under the Bed A vacationing couple staying in a foul-smelling motel room discovered a body hidden under their bed. Updated 26 August Published 13 June Claim A vacationing couple staying in a foul-smelling motel room discovered a body hidden under their bed. Every version that came to him mentioned a Las Vegas hotel, but the lack of checkable details led him to believe this was an apocryphal tale. Okay, so we can date the appearance of this legend to In each of the following cases not only were bodies discovered under hotel beds, but it was investigations of the smell of decomposition that led to their discoveries. On 10 July , a man checked into the Capri Motel, just east of downtown Kansas City, and began complaining about a foul odor in his room. Management told him nothing could be done about the problem, and he spent three nights in his room before checking out because he could no longer stand the smell. There were two stashed-and-smelly body cases in Florida in In August in Fort Lauderdale, hotel staff discovered the body of year-old Bryan Gregory tucked under a platform bed. Though the staff had themselves noticed the strange smell for days, they only set about looking for its source after a German couple spent the night in that room and afterwards complained about the odor. Again, the discovery was prompted by an aggrieved German tourist upset about a foul odor in his room. In Virginia in , Jerry Lee Dunbar disposed of the remains of two victims this way: In Mineola, New York, motel in , a body turned up in a box spring. Again, the body was discovered days later and only after other patrons complained about the smell. At least two other guests unknowingly cohabited with the body before it was found, and at least one guest refused to stay in that room because of the smell. His partner stashed the corpse under their motel bed, then split. Kuklinski and Deppner decided to kill Smith, and they accomplished this by feeding him a cyanide-laced hamburger in a North Bergen, New Jersey, motel room. Kuklinski finished off Smith by strangling him when watching Smith die of poisoning proved tiresome. It was found four days later, on 27 December During the intervening four days, the room had been rented to others each night. Guests had wrinkled their noses at the smell, but none thought to look under the bed. That case has seemingly been topped by one in which Sony Millbrook of Memphis, Tennessee, was reported missing on 27 January after she failed to pick up her children from school. Forty-seven days later, on 15 March , homicide investigators were called to the room of a Budget Inn motel where Millbrook had been living just prior to her disappearance, her body having just been discovered inside the frame of the bed there " even though the room had reportedly been cleaned and rented several times since her disappearance almost seven weeks earlier. That clearly happened in at least some of the cases mentioned here and perhaps in others where the news reports stated only that hotel guests had complained without specifying which guests. Urban legends tend to localize to where we believe they likely would have happened. Much easier to believe that the unsuspecting traveler shared his room with a moldering corpse in Las Vegas than it is to rightly place that occurrence in small-town New York, Virginia, or Maryland. One, after all, does not let a lack of certainty stand in the way of a good story. Look for this legend in the film Four Rooms. This legend was also the subject of a July Sources Boccella, Kathy. When cleaning, changing bedding, or staying away from home, look for: Rusty or reddish stains on bed sheets or mattresses caused by bed bugs being crushed. Dark spots about this size: Where Bed Bugs Hide Canvas strap of old box spring covering that is housing adults, skin castings, feces, and eggs. Photo courtesy of Dr. Louis Sorkin When not feeding, bed bugs hide in a variety of places. Around the bed, they can be found near the piping, seams and tags of the mattress and box spring, and in cracks on the bed frame and headboard. If the room is heavily infested, you may find bed bugs: In the seams of chairs and couches, between cushions, in the folds of curtains. In electrical receptacles and appliances. Under loose wall paper and wall hangings. At the junction where the wall and the ceiling meet. Even in the head of a screw. Since bed bugs are only about the width of a credit card, they can squeeze into really small hiding spots. If a crack will hold a credit card, it could hide a bed bug. Appear to prefer to feed on humans, but will feed on other mammals and birds as well. Will readily travel feet from established hiding places called harborage to feed on a host. Even though they are primarily active at night, if hungry they will seek hosts in full daylight. Feeding can take minutes. Bed bugs need at least one blood meal before the individual bug can develop to the next of the six life stages. They can feed more than once. Each stage also requires the molting of skin. To continue to mate and produce eggs, both males and females must feed at least once every 14 days. Each female may lay 1 to 3 eggs per day and eggs per her lifetime months but could be longer. Egg-to-egg life cycle may take four to five weeks under favorable conditions. To kill bed bugs with heat, the room must be even hotter to ensure sustained heat reaches the bugs no matter where they are hiding. Common bed bugs are found almost anywhere their host can live. Tropical bed bugs Cimex hemipterus require a higher average temperature than the common bed bug and are found in tropical and subtropical areas.
