This is once again a piece of crumbled bread for the youngsters. Truly as he writes for the youth, this story is mixed up with some serious incidences, which provoke Govind to kill himself. The plot of the story is based on the familiar ground of Gujarat where people love to be in the business and respect business than any other place in India does. No doubt his protagonist is an educated freak, who knowingly wants to land himself in business. Ishaan is talented and well aware of his abilities he never tries to negotiate with the kind of stuff he does not believe in. And that is how he quits army and comes back home. This ex-cricketer of Ahmadabad, had represented the district a number of times in cricket matches, yet he failed to make it big. The habitual defects of being glued to the TV, whenever India played Cricket is the recall of his nostalgia towards the game and he can not do away with that. Omi is a simple fellow who is neither headstrong nor intelligent like Govind and Ishaan. He does believe that he is not at par with his friends but still, his dedication towards his friends makes him inseparable part of the trio. Omi belongs to a pundit family who are the temple priest in the City. Omi, hates being a priest and wants to break the tradition of being priest in the temple, what his forefathers have been doing for long. For him, agreeing to the business proposal of Govind is the inner drive to get away from the family tradition. However, for Ishaan, the business was more of being away from the sight of his father and console his mind and being attached to cricket too. Life begins on the small note. Guys get down to the basic and work really hard. They open a Cricket shop in the temple campus. Quite odd place to start with, but that is the place from where their innovation teaches them to be good marketing guys. They show brilliant appetite for the business and make it to a level where they can dream big. Little difficulties in the business where they lose money, help them bond closer to each other and resurrect the business with even better vigour. All three of them have their dream in life to fulfill. Govind is vocal about it whereas Ishaan and Omi hardly speak their mind in public. Quite common, business interest get mixed with personal interest and there starts the problem. Outside factors is another thing one always has to battle in any business. By most Indians, it is not the understanding of two minds, which can come to a conclusion to decide about each other. Omi rightly says, there is something called protocol, which Govind has violated. Govind has agreed to teach mathematics to Vidya, instead could not control the chemistry between themselves. Godhra rights put them all into the real challenge of life where Govind and Ishaan lose their loved friend Omi, but could guarantee the life of Ali, which was the major challenge at the time of crisis. Nothing can bring Ishaan and Govind closer again rather drive Vidya away from Ahmedabad. Looks like bollywood movie script. The three mistakes, what are sighted are naturally the common mistakes any one commits, yet there is a message. Only if some of the protocols we follow and become little disciplined, we can tame our life better. But most of us forget that. We Indians are driven by emotions and not by practical thought, even in business. Altogether the narrative has been very juicy and content suited the choice of youngsters. But even for the older guys like me, it just looks like the story of gone days. You will enjoy reading the book if you have not set high expectation from the writer. Apart from this, Chetan Bhagat have always been famous amongst youth. This book, though not much different from the other two, provides stuff to keep his fan following intact.

She is a rebel at heart and dreams to break free from the constraints of a typical middle-class family and society, to go to Mumbai , do a course in PR and become independent. She, however, despises maths which is required for her medical entrance exams. Hence, Ish asks Govind to take her mathematics tuition. In between their tuition they fall in love which is kept a secret. He is a Muslim and respects Ish like a Guru. He, like Ishaan, is patriotic at heart. She cares about Govind a lot and supports him well through his hardships and struggles. He is a devout Muslim and works for a secular party. He is a very kind-hearted person who wants Ali to take his education seriously despite his mediocre financial condition. He treats the three friends very well when they go to visit Ali in his house. Overall he is a good person. He is an Australian Cricket Team member and a fast bowler. But he is not currently playing because of back problems. He spots talent in Ali and wants to help him getting a chance to be trained in his academy in Australia. Loosely based on Brett Lee. The Three Mistakes[ edit ] Govind had paid a huge amount for buying a shop in Navrangpura shopping mall even though his friends tried to stop him. The mall later got destroyed due to Gujarat earthquakes.
