List of winners of the Chicago Marathon The former logo before the current sponsor The first marathon at the Games of the I Olympiad generated interest in the sport which led to similar races throughout most western countries and across the United States. While marathons sporadically occurred in New York City and St. Louis , [11] the Boston Marathon had established an annual marathon in , soon to be followed by Chicago. Louis Marks in the lead. The First Chicago Marathon was run on September 23, In a stunning upset, a reported , or more spectators watched Rhud Metzner come from behind to steal a late-race victory from the favored Louis Marks. Michael Bilandic, a runner, and his wife actually passed out medals at the first marathon on September 25, He again footed the bill in when the race was again called the Mayor Daley Marathon. In , however, Beatrice Foods became the first race sponsor. Evans Cheruiyot follows the course car with clock during his victory. The lead course car carries the current race time. In the early years the Chicago Marathon was held in August. The running was second only to New York. By , the race finally had sufficient prize money to attract world class athletes. The was the first with world class times such as the 2: The race was spectacular with Steve Jones breaking his own course record 2 seconds short of the world record and Joan Benoit Samuelson the Olympic Champion, two-time defending Chicago Marathon Champion and Olympic Bronze Medalist, Rosa Mota and the fourth place Olympic finisher and world record setting Ingrid Kristiansen. Benoit set a record that stood nearly a generation. At that time, it was considered the premier marathon in the United States, if not the world. Because of this only a half-marathon race was held that year [5] and the marathon was moved to the spring of [25] and attracted Heileman Brewing Company to sponsor the Old Style Chicago Marathon. Marathon owner and sponsor Bank of America , which had just acquired LaSalle Bank, has denied culpability. Similar hot conditions have been experienced in other city center races. North, West, and South. Eventually, they head north along LaSalle Street. Runners are supported by over 12, volunteers [44] spread throughout the course including at 20 aid stations [45] located approximate every 1â€³3 miles. Digital timers are positioned every 5 kilometers, as well as the halfway point.

Share on LinkedIn Share In an effort to learn and understand what is going on with all the different trends in running over the last few years, I have purchased a lot of books. Lots of them have been a waste of money. Chi Marathon, by Danny Dreyer was certainly one of them. I already have a copy of his previous book, Chi Running. The combination of the two books certainly gave me an insight into Chi Running, but also convinced me to be more trusting of the one star reviews at Amazon. They are more likely to be on the mark, especially if the faithful start attacking the one star reviews see the 1-star reviews. If you are going to make claims like that, then it should be expected that you have the evidence to back it. I already knew that they had none. When the book arrived a few months back, I eagerly opened the box. The cover should have been another red flag: They fell for the natural fallacy. That is just a marketing ploy. Like you normally do when you first pick up any new book, you generally open up a random page to have a look. The first random page I looked at was discussing the Lieberman et al article that appeared in Nature. The author stated that Lieberman et al compared a group of barefoot Kenyan runners to shoe wearing runners at Harvard University. That is not what they did. In reality, if you read the paper, they actually eliminated the Kenyan runners from the analysis! This book is off to a really bad start with that red flag! The next random page I turned to was a comment about plantar fasciitis, that picked up my interest to see what he says. Essentially he said that plantar fasciitis was due to heel striking! The bad start with this book is still going with yet another red flag! I had to put the book down after that. How can an author get some of this so wrong? It does not auger well for believing what you read in the rest of the book. It took me a while to pick it up after that. When I finally did, I had to concur that those 1-star reviews on Amazon. Books like this read like a manifesto from a political party. The party faithful love them. Chi Runners will love this book. The rest of us will wonder why they are so gullible to fall for it. In case, you are so inclined, here are links to the book:

The Chicago Marathon has been held in the city of Chicago, Illinois since . It is considered to be one of the six World Marathon Majors. The Chicago Marathon is usually held on a Sunday in the month of October. Since Sunday is a non-working day in the United States, most government offices and schools are closed. Businesses may be closed or have reduced opening hours. Check with the public transit system directly to find out how the marathon will affect their schedules. Many city streets and roads may be closed or partly cordoned off to make space for marathoners and spectators. A major Chicago event, the marathon attracts many runners and spectators from all parts of the world. The running course that traverses 29 Chicago neighborhoods begins and ends at Grant Park. Because of this, it is now called the Bank of America Chicago Marathon. Awards for Illinois Residents One of the most prestigious marathons in the world, the Chicago Marathon has a hefty award purse for the winner. Street Parties Countless Chicago residents use this day as an excuse to come out on the streets and enjoy music and dance. Many neighborhoods organize street parties and have DJs play music to cheer on runners as they pass through the area. What Is the Chicago Marathon? The Chicago Marathon is a competitive marathon and winners are awarded money. Anyone above the age of 16 can apply to participate in the race, though only those who finish the race within 6 hours and 30 minutes are officially timed. Runners can participate by either meeting a qualifying requirement to gain guaranteed entry, or they can be put on a lottery list. International runners also sometimes opt to enter the race as part of a tour group package organized by local travel agencies. In recent years, many runners have used the marathon as a way to raise money for charities around the world. History of the Chicago Marathon While the city of Chicago has hosted a marathon since , the Chicago Marathon in its current version was first held in as the Mayor Daley Marathon.
