Columbia Pictures "Sic semper tyrannis! After that, the abuse rapidly changes gears and becomes disturbingly psychological. Scrappy ties Oopy to a chair and lowers him into a puppet courtroom, where he is interrogated by puppet attorneys with propeller beanie heads and wobbling dildo fingers. Scrappy laughs as he makes him dance, while a second puppet descends from the heavens and continues the hilarious "punching a helpless toddler in the face" gag from earlier. Columbia Pictures This is your life now, Oopy This cartoon was made as an advertising tie-in for a mail-order Scrappy Puppet Theater you could get from the back of a cereal box. And in this cartoon, a baby is punched, tortured, and humiliated during a puppet show. We can only hope everyone involved in the promotion was thrown in prison for child endangerment. The Terrytoon Bully Beef was an animated fountain of war crimes. Continue Reading Below Continue Reading Below Advertisement War breaks out, and the cat and mouse who are inexplicably now friends run off to enlist, stopping at the same house to kiss the same mouse woman goodbye. This immediately raises at least two questions, neither of which are ever answered. However, in case you were worried that this cartoon would gloss over the fear and anguish of a loved one going away to war, rest assured that the news utterly destroys Lady Mouse, and she breaks down in a torrent of inconsolable tears as the mouse skips off to the battlefield. If you filmed a real rat melting to death in a makeup research lab, it would be more lighthearted than this cartoon. It makes him powerfully aroused. Once they finally make it to the trenches on the front line, the cat is immediately decapitated by an artillery shell. It is important to note that, while the cat retains some of his cartoon character abilities and is able to reattach his head, several mice are later chewed up by machine gun fire and their heads remain severed. CBS The two other cats in the tree are too stunned to react. Continue Reading Below Continue Reading Below Advertisement Our mouse hero from earlier tries to surrender, but is pummeled with a barrage of gunfire to the chest and face, because mice do not take prisoners. CBS This technically counts as a Rule 34 bukkake image. He comes back to life in time to see his cat friend? This is somehow the most disturbing moment of the cartoon. Here is the title card: RKO Pictures Now, you would be forgiven for expecting this cartoon to be about a jolly, good-natured snowman having adventures with his new pals. Very few of you read that plot description coupled with that image and thought "A mortal child, joining forces with the soulless creatures of the wilderness to create new life, as though they were gods? Such hubris will cost that child its innocence, and its flesh. Continue Reading Below Continue Reading Below Advertisement It begins with the Eskimo child and his pet seal bedding down for a lengthy hibernation to wait out the bitter winter months. It is important to note that the seal retires to its own private igloo to hibernate completely alone, but when summer rolls around, the seal exits the igloo with five baby seals and an adult pelican. The Eskimo child rallies his arctic critter friends together to build a snowman. If any of them are aware that the snowman can smell their sin, they never let on. But the snowman can. Continue Reading Below Advertisement They perform a joyful summoning dance to bring their new friend to life, and it is at this point that we would like to stress that absolutely nothing we have seen so far has indicated that this cartoon is, in fact, a mind-flaying horror story. Join hand with claw and dance with me! No horror shall come from it! We see it devour a painstakingly animated fish who seems to realize it is experiencing the worst death in recorded history: Adam Koski helped make a creepy cartoon himself which might have made the list if it were fifty years older. He disagrees, and thinks you should listen to his music.
