Eastwood portrays a struggling western singer Red Stovall who suffers from tuberculosis, but has finally been given an opportunity to make it big at the Grand Ole Opry. He is accompanied by his young nephew played by real-life son Kyle to Nashville, Tennessee, where he is supposed to record a song. Only Time gave the film a good review in the United States, with most reviewers criticizing its blend of muted humor and tragedy. Based on a novel with the same name written by Craig Thomas, the film was shot before but released after Honkeytonk Man. Russian filming locations were not possible due to the Cold War, and the film had to be shot in Vienna and other locations in Austria to simulate many of the Eurasian story locations. It was quoted by President Ronald Reagan in a speech to Congress, and used during the presidential elections. It received very positive reviews, with many critics praising the feminist aspects of the film through its explorations of the physical and psychological consequences of rape. A period gone by, the pioneer, the loner operating by himself, without benefit of society. It was hailed as one of the best films of and the best western to appear for a considerable period, with Gene Siskel of the Chicago Tribune remarking, "This year will go down in film history as the moment Clint Eastwood finally earned respect as an artist". Production and filming were marred by internal disagreements between Eastwood and long-time friend and producer Fritz Manes, as well as between Eastwood and the United States Department of Defense who expressed contempt for the film. It co-starred Patricia Clarkson, Liam Neeson, and a young Jim Carrey who plays Johnny Squares, a drug-addled rock star and the first of the victims on a list of celebrities drawn up by horror film director Peter Swan Neeson who are deemed most likely to die, the so-called "Dead Pool". The list is stolen by an obsessed fan who, in mimicking his favorite director, makes his way through the list killing off celebrities, of which Dirty Harry is also included. It is generally viewed as the weakest film of the series, though Roger Ebert thought it was as good as the original. Always interested in jazz, he directed Bird, a biopic starring Forest Whitaker as jazz musician Charlie "Bird" Parker. Alto saxophonist Jackie McLean and Spike Lee, son of jazz bassist Bill Lee and a long time critic of Eastwood, criticized the characterization of Charlie Parker remarking that it did not capture his true essence and sense of humor. DeMille Award for his lifelong contribution, and the Best Director award. They have given him the presence of some fierce force of nature, which may be why the landscapes of the mythic, late 19th-century West become him, never more so than in his new Unforgiven. This is his richest, most satisfying performance since the underrated, politically lunatic Heartbreak Ridge. Scripts existed for the film as early as under titles such as The Cut-Whore Killings and The William Munny Killings but Eastwood delayed the project because he wanted to wait until he was old enough to play his character and to savor it as the last of his western films. Horrigan is a guilt-ridden Secret Service agent haunted by his failure to save John F. Set in the s, Eastwood plays a Texas Ranger in pursuit of an escaped convict Costner who hits the road with a young boy T. Thalberg Memorial Award at the 67th Academy Awards. Based on the novel by Robert James Waller, the film relates the story of Robert Kincaid Eastwood, a photographer working for National Geographic, who has an affair with a middle-aged Italian farm wife, Francesca Streep. Despite the novel receiving unfavorable reviews and a subject deemed potentially unsuitable for film, The Bridges of Madison County was a commercial and critical success. Streep was also nominated for an Academy Award and a Golden Globe. In, Eastwood directed and starred in the political thriller Absolute Power, alongside Gene Hackman with whom he had appeared in Unforgiven. Eastwood played the role of a veteran thief who

Chapter 8 : Clint Eastwood | Revolv

Clint Eastwood may also refer to: Clint Eastwood (album), an album by The Upsetters Clint Eastwood (musician), Jamaican reggae deejay Clint Eastwood (song), a song by Gorillaz "Clint Eastwood", an alias used by Marty McFly in the film Back to the Future Part III Clint Eastwood is an American filmmaker and actor.

These roles, among others, have made Eastwood an enduring cultural icon of masculinity. In addition to directing many of his own star vehicles, Eastwood has also directed films in which he did not appear, such as the mystery drama Mystic River and the war film Letters from Iwo Jima, for which he received Academy Award nominations, the drama Changeling, and the South African biographical political sports drama Invictus. The war drama biopic American Sniper set box office records for the largest January release ever and was also the largest opening ever for an Eastwood film. Eastwood received considerable critical praise in France for several films, including some that were not well received in the United States. Since 1969, Eastwood has run his own production company, Malpaso Productions, which has produced all but four of his American films. Starting in 1965, Eastwood served for two years as Mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, a non-partisan office. Ruth later took the surname of her second husband, John Belden Wood "Sam", whom she married after the death of Clinton Sr. Eastwood was nicknamed "Samson" by the hospital nurses because he weighed 11 pounds 6 ounces 5. He has one younger sister, Jeanne Bernhardt born Eastwood is of English, Irish, Scottish, and Dutch ancestry. He is descended from Mayflower passenger William Bradford, and through this line is the 12th generation of his family born in North America. His family moved often as his father worked at jobs along the West Coast, although they did not move at all between 1913 and 1920. Settled in Piedmont, California, the Eastwoods lived in a very wealthy part of town, had a swimming pool, belonged to the country club, and each parent drove their own car. Clint attended Piedmont Junior High School. Instead, he attended Oakland Technical High School, where he was held back due to poor academic scores and scheduled to graduate in January as a midyear graduate, although it is not clear if he ever did. I think that was his major," joked classmate Don Kincade. Biographer Patrick McGilligan notes that high school graduation records are a matter of strict legal confidentiality. Eastwood worked at a number of jobs, including lifeguard, paper carrier, grocery clerk, forest firefighter, and golf caddy. Eastwood has said that he tried to enroll at Seattle University [in 1950] but was then drafted into the United States Army during the Korean War. Don Loomis recalled hearing that Eastwood was romancing one of the daughters of a Fort Ord officer, who might have been entreated to watch out for him when names came up for postings. While returning from a prearranged tryst in Seattle, Washington, he was a passenger on a Douglas AD bomber that ran out of fuel and crashed into the ocean near Point Reyes. Using a life raft, he and the pilot swam 2 miles 3. Early career struggles According to the CBS press release for Rawhide, the Universal known then as Universal-International film company was shooting in Fort Ord when an enterprising assistant spotted Eastwood and invited him to meet the director. While in Los Angeles, Hill became reacquainted with Eastwood and managed to sneak Eastwood into a Universal studio, where he showed him to cameraman Irving Glassberg. After signing, Eastwood was initially criticized for his stiff manner and delivering his lines through his teeth, a lifelong trademark. After many unsuccessful auditions, he was eventually given a minor role by director Jack Arnold in Revenge of the Creature, a sequel to the recently released The Creature from the Black Lagoon. Although he continued to develop as an actor, Universal terminated his contract on October 23, 1955. Eastwood joined the Marsh Agency, and although Lubin landed him his biggest role to date in The First Traveling Saleslady and later hired him for Escapade in Japan, without a formal contract Eastwood was struggling. Upon the advice of Irving Leonard, his financial advisor, he changed talent agencies to the Kumin-Olenick Agency in 1956 and Mitchell Gertz in 1957. In 1958, he played a Navy lieutenant in a segment of Navy Log and in early 1959 made a notable guest appearance on Maverick opposite James Garner as a cowardly villain intent on marrying a rich girl for money. Eastwood had a small part as an aviator in the French picture Lafayette Escadrille and played a major role as an ex-renegade of the Confederacy in Ambush at Cimarron Pass, a film which Eastwood viewed disastrously and professes to be the lowest point of his career. Publicity photo for Rawhide, In , Eastwood was cast as Rowdy Yates for the CBS hour-long western series Rawhide, the breakthrough in his career he had long been searching for. However, Eastwood was not especially happy with his character; Eastwood was almost 30, and Rowdy was too young and too cloddish for Clint to feel comfortable with the part. Filming began in Arizona in the summer of It took just three weeks for Rawhide to reach the top 20 in TV ratings and although it never won an Emmy, it was a major success for several years, and reached its peak at number six in the ratings between October and April By late Rawhide was beginning to decline in popularity and lacked freshness in the script; it was canceled in the middle of the "66 television season. Eastwood made his first attempt at directing when he filmed several trailers for the show, although he was unable to convince producers to let him direct an episode. Richard Harrison suggested Eastwood to Leone because Harrison knew Eastwood could play a cowboy convincingly. Eastwood thought the film would be an opportunity to escape from his Rawhide image. Eastwood later spoke of the transition from a television western to A Fistful of Dollars: The hero who kisses old ladies and dogs and was kind to everybody. I decided it was time to be an anti-hero. As the Man with No Name in A Fistful of Dollars A Fistful of Dollars proved a landmark in the development of spaghetti Westerns, with Leone depicting a more lawless and desolate world than traditional westerns, and challenging American stereotypes of a western hero with a morally ambiguous antihero. The storyline involved the search for a cache of Confederate gold buried in a cemetery. During the filming of a scene in which a bridge was blown up, Eastwood urged Wallach to retreat to a hilltop. I wanted to play it with an economy of words and create this whole feeling through attitude and movement. It was just the kind of character I had envisioned for a long time, keep to the mystery and allude to what happened in the past. It came about after the frustration of doing Rawhide for so long. I felt the less he said, the stronger he became and the more he grew in the imagination of the audience. Stardom brought more roles for Eastwood. Shooting began in November , before the script had been finalized. The film was controversial for its portrayal of violence. Eastwood was also cast as Two-Face in the Batman television show, but the series was canceled before filming began. Eastwood then branched out to star in the only musical of his career, Paint Your Wagon The film follows an American mercenary, who gets mixed up with a prostitute disguised as a nun, and ends up helping a group of Juarista rebels during the reign of Emperor Maximilian I of Mexico. Eastwood once again played a mysterious stranger"unshaven, wearing a serape-like vest, and smoking a cigar. Filming commenced in July on location in Yugoslavia and in London. The film received mostly a positive reception and its anti-war sentiments were recognized. Before Irving Leonard died, he and Eastwood had discussed the idea of Malpaso producing Play Misty for Me, a film that was to give Eastwood the artistic control he desired, and his debut as a director. When Dave ends their relationship, the unhinged Evelyn becomes a murderous stalker. But, being as this is a. His lines quoted above are regarded by firearms historians, such as Garry James and Richard Venola, as the force that catapulted the ownership of. During filming, Eastwood suffered symptoms of a bronchial infection and several panic attacks. In , Eastwood directed his first western, High Plains Drifter, in which he also starred. The film had a moral and supernatural theme, later emulated in Pale Rider. The plot follows a mysterious stranger Eastwood who arrives in a brooding Western town where the people hire him to protect them against three soon-to-be-released felons. There remains confusion during the film as to whether the stranger is the brother of the deputy, whom the felons lynched and murdered, or his ghost. Holes in the plot were filled with black humor and allegory, influenced by Leone. The revisionist film received a mixed reception, but was a major box office success. During casting for the film Eastwood met Sondra Locke for the first time, an actress who would play major roles in six of his films over the next ten years and would become an important figure in his life. Kay Lenz got the part of Breezy because Locke, at age 29, was considered too old. Breezy was not a major critical or commercial success and it was only made available on video in In , Eastwood teamed up with Jeff Bridges and George Kennedy in the buddy action caper Thunderbolt and Lightfoot, a road movie about a veteran bank robber Thunderbolt Eastwood and a young con man drifter,
