Which is your favourite? Ocean Dream Transport yourself to a dream-like world with this gorgeous illustration This beautiful book illustration is part of a series for a picture book by Vietnamese illustrator Khoa Le. The imagery instantly transports you to a dream-like world, using bright, shining colours to show the contrast of light and shadow. The illustrations are packed full of gorgeous colour and inspirational character design. He regularly uses ink and china marker on embossed paper to add that extra special effect to all his creations. Drawing since her school years, Barton is a pro when it comes to inspiring book illustrations. Here the eye colour was eventually changed to green for the book but we think it looks great either way! The talented creative not only had the gift of words but of images too. And he put both to good use in this classic book. The Arrival tells the story of an immigrant who leaves his home in search of a better life for family purely through pictures. The combination of photorealistic humans in various abstract environments shows off the true extent of his talents. This beautiful picture book was the first that Dahl and Blake collaborated on in the mid 70s. Due to short deadlines, Pidgeon has had to adapt her working approach. First published in , Briggs created the picture book images using pencil crayons. But the inked line is always deader than the pencil line. The feeling has gone out of it. Using pencil crayon, these three stages can merge together. You can draw lightly in colour, then gradually make it sharper, clearer and darker, while colouring it at the same time. Furthermore, for this book, crayon has a softer quality, ideally suited to snow. Joseph-Armand Bombardier Jacqui Lee mainly uses inks and watercolours to create her illustrations Jacqui Lee is a freelance illustrator based in Calgary, Alberta. This beautiful example is part of Cloth in the Clouds by Michael Catchpool.
