Chapter 1 : College University: Pennsylvania State College University Park

Penn State is a highly rated public college located in State College, Pennsylvania. It is a big institution with an enrollment of 40, undergraduate students. Admissions is fairly competitive as the Penn State acceptance rate is 56%.

They were to be "state" normal schools only in the sense of being officially recognized by the commonwealth. It enrolled just students. All normal school events were held within a single building which also contained a laboratory school for model teaching. Control and ownership of the institution passed to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in 1862. In 1863, by authority of the Pennsylvania General Assembly, it became State Teachers College at Indiana, with the right to grant degrees. As its mission expanded, the name was changed again in 1867 to Indiana State College. This decline in enrollment caused financial difficulties for the university which struggled to cover costs for its dormitory expansion. Cook Honors College was founded to offer a seminar style, discourse-based liberal studies curriculum. Its original building, a Victorian structure named John Sutton Hall once housed the entire school. Stapleton Library boasts 100,000 plus bound volumes and over 2 million microform units. Many alumni recall this spot because of its centrality and the many events that occur there. In January 1991, former President Lawrence K. This group works to furnish the Oak Grove with flora native to the region. It provides skiing, biking, hiking, and disc golfing opportunities. Boat access is also made available through the Cooperative Association. Over the last five years, IUP has demolished most of the era dormitories on campus. Demolition began during summer and facilities are being replaced with modern suites. Construction is ongoing with seven new dormitories completed for Fall 2000. Two more suite-style buildings were completed by Fall 2001. That semester, the ribbon cutting ceremony at Stephenson Hall was considered to have finished the four-year-long "residence hall revival".
