Frequently Asked Questions How do I use your affiliate program to make money? How and where you place your affiliate links is up to you. How do I join? I forgot my user name or password, what do I do? Contact us from the Compass Classroom Help Center: When you give your affiliate link to someone and they click on it, a cookie is inserted on their computer which the affiliate program recognizes every time they make a purchase. That cookie lasts 30 days. If they purchase within those 30 days, you are credited with it. Does this apply to your subscriptions products? It is now the driving force behind many of our affiliate partners. When a subscription product is purchased, you will receive a commission payout for every month that subscription renews. That could be a decent monthly source of revenue. Sadly, your account will not be credited for any purchases made by that person. Do you have promotional material that I can use? Yes, we have two places where you can find promotional material that you can copy to your computer and print. The best place for material is in your affiliate account. If you are a bit technical you can take any of our other items and apply your affiliate link to them, thus making a custom banner ad or image. I find my affiliate link very confusing. Is there a way to simplify the link? What and when do I get paid? Some sales will include Tennessee Sales Tax and Shipping. Do I receive a commission on those items? No What if a product is on sale or someone uses a coupon code to get a discount? You will receive a commission on the price of the product at the final moment of sale, not on the listed retail price. What if someone buys a product, then returns it later - do I have to give the commission back? Although refunds are quite rare, they do happen in some instances. If that does happen, we will simply place a debit for the amount of the refunded commission in your account, then balance it out with credits from other sales for that amount.

Each lesson contains five video lessons approximately 10 minutes. So one each week day. Take notes in your American History notebook. There are several orientation videos which guide you through not only note taking but setting up a portfolio. Take a weekly exam. Work on your portfolio throughout the year. My eighth grader is very much a hands on learner. She thrives when she gets to make a scrapbook or present a speech while in costume. Your student chooses the topic they are most interested in from a long list of topic ideas and makes the project as detailed as he or she would like to. Even for my son who would rather type things out than create something, the projects have challenged him to stretch his skills and practice new ways of learning. And you know that any way we can enjoy history learning AND do an art project is always a winner for us. But I thought you used Tapestry of Grace? Yes, we love Tapestry of Grace! We love the topic of American History SO much that we jumped at the chance to learn even more. Yes, my high schoolers are taking this course this year as an elective. How awesome is that? And I have to mention that even Dad wants us to wait until evening to watch the lessons because he enjoys them so much. Yes, that is family learning, night school style! If you want your kids to know more words than their friends, understand Latin, and master English grammar, get Visual Latin. They'll love it.

I think in a homeschool setting, you could easily break this down and use it as a 10 week unit study, watching just a portion of the DVD at the time. For a more advanced child, I would have them make flash cards to go along with their studies, or, just use the included quizlet links for each chapter. Overall, Bug and the other kids have really enjoyed watching Word Up!. I do wish there were worksheets available to use along with this program, but the quizlets are a great compromise to give the kids extra practice without Word Up! In addition to Word Up! This video series covers many topics- such as the philosophy of education, how kids develop, reading and how to make kids love books , the difference between boys and girls, how to customize your curriculum, classical literature, history and books kids should be read before leaving your homeâ€¦. I wrote the book okay, the blog on how to homeschool. Little did I knowâ€¦ I needed this series. I felt energized to take a closer look at our home, and my goals and long term plan for the kids schooling. I tend to turn it on while doing other things, like the dishes, or while I work on printables or crafts, so I can listen and keep my hands busy. As I listened, I realized how many little things I have let slip in my quest to get it all done. This little nugget is so true. This year I have struggled with Bug and issues of the heart. The entire series was full of little tidbits and actionable advice just like this. Another thing I love about this video series is that it will really appeal to frugal homeschoolers. The ideas can be implemented with nothing but a bible, a library card, and plenty of time and patience. I think this series would be a fantastic edition to your homeschool co-op, or for a mothers group. Meet once a week, and watch the videos. These are the the kinds of lectures I want to get when I am at a homeschool convention, and the type of advice I want my mentors to hand down to me. I really think most of us could find something to take away from the series. Good news- Compass Classroom will be having a sale November 27thth, so bookmark the page to remind you to go back and check it out this weekend! I found Homeschooling Made Simple so helpful, I am sure you all will love it too! Enter to win your own copy using the widget below:
