Delta One to Paris Celebrating the While planning an anniversary and birthday trip to Paris, I noticed that Delta had scheduled a on the route from Detroit to Paris when we hoped to travel. What could make a trip to Paris more awesome? Flying Delta One on the upper deck of a to Paris! A Delta One review was definitely in order. In the end, I was spending a few more miles than my previously booked SkyMiles partner award, but I believed the experience would be worth it. After a visit to one of the Atlanta Sky Clubs, we boarded our flight to Detroit, which arrived just a few minutes early. After a friendly greeting from the flight attendants, we proceeded to our seats. While I was tempted to book one of the adjoining seats downstairs since I was traveling with my wife, I am glad we booked adjacent seats on the upper deck. This was a different kind of flight. Front of the upper deck looking aft. My wife was across the aisle in 77A. My favorite thing â€” a handy Tumi pen. Power outlets and lighting were sufficient, the video monitor was large and easy to view, and the space just felt right for both working and relaxing. For international business class, the number one factor for many, including myself, is whether or not the seat is comfortable enough for sleeping. Perhaps that is the only Delta One review that matters! The verdict for the product â€” a resounding win! Here are more photos of the entire Delta One cabin. This slideshow requires JavaScript. Delta One Dining While I am not one to be excited about airline catering, meals are an important feature of a premium cabin product. Menus were waiting at our seats when we boarded, and some orders were taken prior to takeoff, including mine. Feel free to peruse the menu. The Argentinian red I ordered was not catered, but a wonderful Bordeaux was featured in its place. I was not disappointed. I enjoyed the shrimp and avocado appetizer very much. The salad was fresh and tasty and the soup was delicious. I chose the beef tenderloin for my main course. I loved everything about the main course except the steak. I am almost always disappointed. To put it simply, the steak was as hard as a rock. Other than that, the meal was very good. I skipped the ice cream dessert and went with a fruit and cheese plate as my meal was more than enough. But I did cap things off with a bit more of that wonderful Bordeaux! Food photography is not a strength of mine, but I tried. As is my custom, I opted out of the pre-arrival meal and just enjoyed a cup of coffee to prepare for arrival. Upon landing, we made the long walk to immigration and followed the Sky Priority signs to a very short queue to clear formalities and begin our Parisian adventure. I am looking forward to my next Delta One flight.

Chapter 3 : Delta Vacations

High wind and heavy rain was a threat. There was talk from a few teams about bagging fishing altogether. To be honest with you, bad weather gets me fired up. However the wind was strong so I knew it was coming. I met LeighAnn for breakfast at 6 and soon we were with Capt. Scott launching from the Venice, Louisiana marina. As we pushed off it started to rain. Our tactic was go back to the exact spot we left off last night. Unfortunately water conditions changed. So with the rain coming down and the murky water, Scott suggested I blind cast my Clouser to the bank and had LeighAnn chuck the popping lure on the spin rod. Blind casting in the mud is not my favorite thing. But this is competition and one must do what needs to be done. Lo and behold, five minutes of casting and my fly got drilled! Heck, we all like a tug on the line. LeighAnn and I went right back to work. I kid you not, three cast later as I was lifting my fly for the next cast a giant redfish face appeared and smeared my fly! The massive redfish caught me by surprise. Luckily the fish was so aggressive there was no way to screw it up. I braced myself for battle. This big bull red was angry! The fish ripped me a new one. He steamed to the deep then through an acre of weeds. LeighAnn asked if she could help. I usually frown on anyone touching my line when a big fish is on, but this was my partner. Reach down in the water and start tearing weeds off the line. It was a good call for me anyhow. LeighAnn was on her belly in the rain wet to the elbows tearing weeds off the line. As fast as she cleared weeds new ones stuck on. Finally the big redfish slowed and I got the leader in sight. Scott came off his poling platform and relieved LeighAnn of weed duty. This fish was a big ugly warrior of a redfish. He had hacked fins, missing scales and crossed eyes, but also length. Our boat was kicking butt! All we saw was rain and wind. We cracked a few Sweetwater brews because the redfish bite was over. At noon things got weird. First was the end of the wind. Not the rain but the wind stopped. It was eerie but real. Then the tidal currents stopped. All bad signs for ocean fishing. LeighAnn and I kept fishing and Scott kept polling. But I had absolutely zero confidence. At 1 even the rains stopped. There were no leaping mullet, birds singing or anything. You could only assume that all the redfish were sleeping too. But I tossed into a nook and the second my fly hit the water I was tight with a small redfish. This was our third red of the day and our score sheet was full. I knew fishing was tough everywhere in Louisiana so we were doing well as a team. In this area it was nearly impossible for LeighAnn to toss the spin rod. There were too many weeds. I looked at her and said you can do this. LeighAnn gave me a funny look but I handed her my Winston before she could say no. No doubt she wanted a redfish on fly and yesterday she stood on the bow for hours without a cast she deserved one. LeighAnn can make a decent 30 foot cast. But the classic redfish cast is shorter. Where we were was more like 10 feet. These under-length casts can be hard. We worked on it a few minutes and soon she mastered the short plunk of the fly. I talk about persistence in fishing all the time on this blog. When the going gets tough they chill out. LeighAnn kept it in the water and she hooked up! He was a cute little bugger too so LeighAnn got him in quick. It seems the two redfish from deep in the marsh were gifts from the fish gods. We never got another back there. The sun actually came out and Scott took us to a new spot for the last hour of the tourney. My rod went quiet until there were less than ten minutes. This fish was another spectacular looking one! It was a heck of a fun two days fishing with my teammates LeighAnn and Scott. For those of you ever wanting to catch redfish on the fly in Louisiana, Capt. We had only an inch lead on them starting today and unfortunately they barely got us. But we got 3rd place which I think is incredible. Furthermore, we won biggest fish each day hence the big fish of the tourney. The Yeti folk and all we Ambassadors closed down the summit party like pros to the wee hours. It was so much fun hanging with old friends and new. I ended up drawing on several packs and a couple Panga Duffels. This has been an incredible week. Thank you Yeti for putting on such a fantastic and enjoyable Ambassador Summit!
