

Cyprus travel guide About Cyprus The legendary birthplace of Aphrodite, Cyprus is every inch the Mediterranean - sandy beaches, ancient monasteries, classical ruins, thyme scented mountains, terracotta houses and, of course, the obligatory party resorts full of sun-seeking twenty-somethings.

There have been reports of an increase in holidaymakers being encouraged to submit a claim for personal injury if they have experienced gastric illness during their stay. You can find more information about the action you can take if you have suffered a personal injury on the Citizens Advice website. You should only consider pursuing a complaint or claim if you have genuinely suffered from injury or illness; if you make a false or fraudulent claim, you may face legal proceedings in the UK or Cyprus. Around a million British nationals visit Cyprus every year. Most visits are trouble-free. You can use ATMs, debit and credit cards as normal. If you need to contact the emergency services call 999. Cyprus has a strict zero tolerance towards drugs. Driving standards are poor. You should drive with great care. Safety and security Crime Crime against tourists is not common, but you should keep passports, money and other valuables safe. Room safes and hotel safety deposit boxes have been targeted previously. Personal attacks, including sexual assaults, are infrequent but they do occur. Buy your own drinks and keep sight of them at all times to make sure they are not spiked. Female travellers should be particularly watchful. If you drink, know your limit; drinks served in bars are often stronger than those in the UK. Local travel It is possible to travel to the north of Cyprus from the south and back again, including via the Ledra Palace and Ledra Street checkpoints in central Nicosia where you can cross by foot. If you intend to take a hire car to the north, the main crossing in Nicosia is Agios Dometios. You can take a hired car through some of the checkpoints. Many cars hired in the south are not insured for use in the north. Check with your insurance company - you will not be allowed through a crossing without the correct insurance documents. At some of the crossing points it is possible to buy car insurance for the north. There are controls on the quantities and types of goods that can be bought in the north and brought into the south, including from the bicomunal village of Pyla in the buffer zone. Goods, including cigarettes, may be confiscated at the checkpoint and you may be fined. The Republic of Cyprus currently imposes a limit of 40 cigarettes per person on crossing the Green Line from north Cyprus. Anyone with documents relating to the purchase of property in northern Cyprus when crossing the Green Line could face criminal proceedings. British and other foreign nationals who have entered Cyprus through the north such as via Ercan airport are considered by the Government of the Republic of Cyprus to have entered Cyprus through an illegal port of entry. The Government of the Republic of Cyprus reserves the right to fine you for illegal entry if you cross into the south, or decline you entry into or exit from the Republic. Road travel Short-term visitors and tourists can drive using a UK driving licence. Cypriot driving regulations are similar to those in the UK and driving is on the left. In there were 46 road deaths in Cyprus source: This equates to 5. You may be fined if you drive without a seat belt or ride a motorbike without a crash helmet. Heavy fines also apply if you use a mobile telephone or are under the influence of alcohol while driving. When hiring a vehicle, check that it is roadworthy and that you have appropriate insurance cover and safety equipment. Swimming Bathing is generally safe, but you should be aware of strong seas and undertows. Always comply with warning signs and swim only from approved beaches. Adventure sports If you intend take part in any adventure sports, water sports or diving, make sure you have the right travel insurance. Only use properly licensed and insured operators and satisfy yourself that adequate safety precautions are in place. You should avoid all demonstrations and follow the advice given by local security authorities. Attacks could be indiscriminate, including in places visited by foreigners. You should be vigilant at this time. Find out more about the global threat from terrorism, how to minimise your risk and what to do in the event of a terrorist attack. Local laws and customs Cyprus has a strictly enforced zero tolerance policy towards drugs. If you are caught with any type of narcotic you will receive either a prison sentence or a hefty fine. The rules against possession of drugs are stricter than in the UK. Avoid taking photographs near potentially sensitive areas like military establishments. Although not generally as widely accepted as in the UK, homosexuality is legal in the Republic of Cyprus and legislation passed in now allows for civil partnerships to be carried out. Homosexuality was also decriminalised in the northern part of Cyprus in , but it is still not very widely accepted and some discretion is advised. See our information and advice page for the LGBT community before you travel. Dual nationals British nationals of Cypriot descent, irrespective of whether they hold Cypriot ID papers, may be considered eligible by the Cypriot authorities for military service. If this happens, you may face difficulties when exiting Cyprus, and you may have to prove that you live outside Cyprus. If you think you may be eligible for any local obligations or duties that apply to dual nationals, contact the Cypriot authorities or a local lawyer before you travel. You should also consider checking with your transport provider or travel company to make sure your passport and other travel documents meet their requirements. If you intend to stay for longer than 3 months, you should check entry requirements with the Republic of Cyprus High Commission in London. Paphos airport to Limassol On the Turkish side, buses are more frequent and smaller. In Nicosia, they depart from stops at the street north of the northern gate. Prices are similar to prices on the Greek side of Cyprus. Beware that return tickets may not be valid on all buses on the Turkish side. By shared taxi[edit] Services run every half-hour or so from You can book a taxi to pick you up anywhere and ask to be dropped off anywhere in city limits; the flip side is that it will often take you longer to get in or out of the city than the journey itself! Figure on GBP for a taxi ride on any of these, with an increased price on Sundays and holidays. Also known as a service taxi. By car[edit] Car hire is the easiest but the most expensive way to get around the island. Cypriots drive on the left side of the road, in keeping with most Commonwealth practice. However, driving standards are poor. Drivers attack their art with an equal mix of aggressiveness and incompetence and view road rules as mere guidelines. Some main roads do not even have road markings and people often sound their horn, especially in Nicosia. Take care when crossing the roads, and even greater care when driving on them. By bicycle[edit] Bicycle road network is well-established and quite popular between major coastal cities. In winter there is the chance to ski there and the ski resort is being developed Pitsilia area on Troodos mountains, where agricultural life and some of the finest wineries can be experienced while staying in small agrohoteles in Agros, Kyperounda, Pelendri, Potamitissa and more. Commandaria area is the region where the legendary Commandaria sweet dessert wine is produced. A visit to Commandaria Museum is worthy the time. Hamam Omerye, Nicosia Hamam Omerye in Nicosia, Cyprus is a 14th century building restored to operate once again as a hammam for all to enjoy, relax and rejuvenate. Stone-built, with small domes, it is chronologically placed at around the time of Frankish and Venetian rule, approximately the same time that the city acquired its Venetian Walls. In , Mustapha Pasha converted the church into a mosque, believing that this particular spot is where the prophet Omer rested during his visit to Lefkosia. Most of the original building was destroyed by Ottoman artillery, although the door of the main entrance still belongs to the 14th century Lusignan building, whilst remains of a later Renaissance phase can be seen at the north-eastern side of the monument. The hamam is still in use today and after its recent restoration project, has become a favourite place for relaxation in Lefkosia. Talk[edit] The official languages of Cyprus are Greek and Turkish. Greek is spoken predominately in the south and Turkish is spoken predominantly in the north. English is very widely spoken in south by locals of all ages - partially because of previous British rule and partially due to the tourism industry. In the north, English is spoken much less than in the south. Other common languages spoken on the island are Russian, French and German. These 24 countries are: Together, these countries have a population of more than million. One euro is divided into cents. While each official euro member as well as Monaco, San Marino and Vatican issues its own coins with a unique obverse, the reverse, as well as all bank notes, look the same throughout the eurozone. Every coin is legal tender in any of the eurozone countries. In Northern Cyprus, the "official" currency is the Turkish lira. There are many ATMs in the North too. Things to buy[edit] Cypriot wine - the iconic local variety known as Commandaria is strong, sweet and somewhat akin to Porto wine Lacework of an intricate nature - from the village of Lefkara. Zivania - is a strong spirit based alcoholic drink Leather goods such as shoes and handbags Jewellery Miscellaneous[edit] Best time for shopping is from 10am to 4pm otherwise shops could easily be found closed. Generally cheapest prices could be found in big cities. Pharmacies[edit] Pharmacies in Cyprus are open from 8am to 6: On Wednesday and Saturday pharmacies are closed after lunch break. Overnight pharmacies are obliged to be open until 10pm and be reachable by phone until 8am of the next morning, although in fact owners usually keep pharmacies open all the night. Overnight pharmacies change daily, you can always find pharmacies that are currently on duty on http: Eat[edit] [add listing] Cypriot meze appetizers akin to Spanish tapas are an art form, and some restaurants serve nothing but. Meze are available in a meat variety or fish variety but quite often come as a mixed batch, which is rather pleasing. Hard and salty when raw, it mellows and softens when cooked and is

hence often served grilled. Taramosalata is traditionally made out of taramas, the salted roe of the cod or carp. The roe is either mixed with bread crumbs or mashed potatoes. Parsley, onion, lemon juice, olive oil and vinegar are added and it is seasoned with salt and pepper. Dolma , Turkish stuffed bell peppers. Tahin Sleep[edit] [add listing] There are countless hotels and hotel apartments of varying degrees of luxury within Cyprus. Alternative self-catering accommodation is offered in restored traditional houses in picturesque villages all over Cyprus through the government Agrotourism initiative. Popular agrotourism holiday destinations can be found in the Troodos Mountains. Perhaps the biggest change that has occurred in recent years has been the accession of Cyprus to the European Union on 1 May , opening up new employment opportunities for European citizens. The burgeoning Cypriot tourism industry, however, means that there is a huge seasonal demand for temporary workers of most nationalities during the summer months, with a definite preference for English-speaking workers in order to service the very large numbers of British tourists. The Greek Cypriot South remains the best overall bet for jobs, as the South is where the majority of the tourist trade is located. The Turkish North is much harder to get work in as a traveller, as the local economy is in a precarious position and high local unemployment means competition for work is fierce. Seasonal employment will most probably involve working in one of the countless bars, hotels and resort complexes of the South. Such work is usually poorly paid, but accommodation is often thrown in as some compensation and the Cypriot lifestyle usually makes up for low wages. Learn[edit] If you are considering an extended stay on the island, there are a number of educational courses that you can take. Popular options include Turkish language courses and arts courses. Most will have a tuition fee attached, and EU nationals should not have any visa problems. Some popular travel and learn programmes include: Tekni Art [2] , also run a one year visual arts programme between September and July. In order to find long-term accommodation, you may also do well to contact one of the licensed real estate agents on the island, such as City Living Real Estate [3]. Steer clear of unlicensed agents in Cyprus, as these dangerous companies cannot offer any legal protection for rental tenants or prospective property purchasers in the event of trouble. In contrast to Western Europe, in the Orthodox church Easter is considered more important than Christmas. On Easter Sunday, many musea etc. Europlug adapters are widely available in local stores. Extreme sports and camping shops do not sell them. Stay safe[edit] Cyprus is a remarkably safe country, with very little violent crime. However, it is wise to be careful when accepting drinks from strangers, especially in Paphos , since there have been numerous occasions of muggings. Note also that the numerous Cypriot "cabarets" are not what their name implies but rather brothels associated with organized crime. Respect[edit] It is best to avoid discussion of the various merits of the Greek-Turkish divide and events beginning in in some quarters. Any sully of Archbishop Makarios will be looked down upon. Contact[edit] Internet access is increasingly available in tourist centres in the guise of internet cafes and side rooms equipped with monitors. Prices vary, so shop about. Many cafes now offer free Wi-Fi access. Most hotels and resorts now offer internet access to their guests under various arrangements.
