Early life[edit] Although Kara Zor-El was the first character to use the name "Supergirl," DC Comics tested three different female versions of Superman prior to her debut. Art by Curt Swan. The first story to feature a female counterpart to Superman was "Lois Lane Superwoman," which was published in Action Comics 60 May. In the story, a hospitalized Lois Lane dreams she has gained superpowers thanks to a blood transfusion from the Man of Steel. In Smallville, Clark claims to be Claire Kent, an out-of-town relative who is staying with the Kents. At her insistence, Jimmy wishes the dying girl out of existence. DC used this story to gauge public response to the concept of a completely new super-powered female counterpart to Superman. When the city is doomed by a meteor shower, Kara is sent to Earth by her parents, Zor-El and Alura unnamed until later issues, to be raised by her cousin Kal-El, known as Superman. Supergirl adopted the secret identity of an orphan "Linda Lee", and made Midvale Orphanage her home. She shared Action Comics with Superman until transferring to the lead in Adventure Comics at the end of the s. In she finally moved to her own short-lived eponymous magazine, before DC merged its Supergirl, Lois Lane and Jimmy Olsen titles into a single anthology title named The Superman Family. In Supergirl was relaunched into her own magazine. Death during Crisis on Infinite Earths[edit] Main article: In , the maxi-series Crisis on Infinite Earths was conceived as a way to reduce DC continuity to a single universe in which all characters maintained a single history. Before Crisis it seemed that half of Krypton had survived the explosion. Our goal was to make Superman unique. We went back to his origin and made Kal-El the only survivor of Krypton. That, sadly, was why Supergirl had to die. By the way, I miss Kara, too. He later said he has never had any regrets about this, explaining, "Supergirl was created initially to take advantage of the high Superman sales and not much thought was put into her creation. She was created essentially as a female Superman. With time, writers and artists improved upon her execution, but she never did really add anything to the Superman mythos" at least not for me. Legion of 3 Worlds 5, along with an entire army of Legionnaires gathered from alternate worlds, times, and realities, to battle the Time Trapper. The then-current Supergirl series, at the time starring Linda Danvers, was in danger of cancellation and Peter David thought a story arc involving Kara Zor-El would be enough to revitalize the series. In an interview with Cliff Biggers of Newsarama, David states: Then in issues 75 to 80, "Many Happy Returns", a young Kara appears from an earlier time long before the Crisis. This story arc is usually cited as one of the best Supergirl stories ever written. Revival[edit] Cover of the debut issue of Supergirl volume 5 Oct. Art by Michael Turner. It was the convergence of two trains heading on toward each other. I was working on the Superman monthly when Superman Group Editor Eddie "Extravaganza" Berganza and I were kicking around an Armageddon type story where this giant asteroid from Krypton was making its way toward Earth, and somewhere out past Neptune Superman was beginning to feel it. We figured we could tie it into "The Fall of Luthor" since DC was very kind to let me both put Lex in the White House and figure out how to get him out. Eddie and I started giggling over the possibilities of there being "something" in the asteroid. Or "someone" in the asteroid" neither of us daring to speak her name, but we both knew who [we] were talking about. Kara takes the mantle of Supergirl at the conclusion of the storyline. The first arc of the new series was written by Jeph Loeb and illustrated by Ian Churchill. Loeb would later describe the appeal of writing for Supergirl: I love that she has all this power and has to learn what it is to be a superhero in the DCU," said Loeb. One of the new titles was a new Supergirl series Volume 6 that featured a new origin for Kara and was published between and Artist Mahmud Asrar designed a new costume for the character which strongly deviated from her classic, "cheerleader" suit, a change generated criticism from some readers. Rebirth, written by Steven Orlando. Art by Ed Hannigan and Dick Giordano. Graduating from high school in , Linda Lee goes to college on a scholarship and stays in Stanhope College until she graduates in During this era, she is helped by her pet cat Streaky , her Super-Horse pet Comet , and befriends Lena Thorul , who had first appeared in the Lois Lane series. Kara is also a member of the Legion of Super-Heroes, where she becomes close to Brainiac 5. In , Supergirl left Action Comics and became a featured character in Adventure Comics beginning with issue June. In her secret identity as Linda Lee Danvers, Kara Zor-El took a variety of jobs including graduate student in acting, television reporter, and student counselor, and finally became an actress on the TV soap Secret Hearts. Bronze Age[edit] After long-time Superman family editor Mort Weisinger retired in , the character underwent revitalization under editor Joe Orlando and artist Mike Sekowsky. Wearing a series of new outfits, leaving her adopted foster home with the Danvers family, Linda goes on to San Francisco where she works for KSF-TV as a camera operator and develops a crush on her boss, Geoffrey Anderson. Linda worked as a student advisor at New Athens Experimental School, before leaving for New York to follow a career in acting with daytime soap Secret Hearts. In Supergirl received a second monthly solo series titled The Daring New Adventures of Supergirl, relocating the character to Chicago as Linda became a mature student of Psychology. With issue 13 the title was revamped, with a new costume design sporting a red headband and the title shortened to just Supergirl. When Superman comes face to face with the Anti-Monitor and is knocked unconscious, Supergirl rushes to save him before he is killed. She is able to fight him off long enough for Dr. Light to carry her cousin to a safe distance, but is killed by the Anti-Monitor. In her remarks she states "Kara is a hero. She will not be forgotten. A Superman issue the next month reveals that Kara had experienced a premonition about her own passing. However, when the universe is rebooted, the timeline is altered. Kara Zor-El and all memory of her is erased from existence. A warmly-dressed blonde woman approaches Brand, startling him. We do it because it needs to be done. Even if no one knows we exist. Even if no one remembers we ever existed. As the woman leaves, Brand asks her who she is, to which she replies, "My name is Kara. Though I doubt that will mean anything to you. Linda acknowledges she has been helped three times by her phantom-friend, and when she asks her name she is told by the smiling figure: Still, Supergirl sometimes saw Superman as a child, due to last carrying him as a baby. DC Comics relaunched the Supergirl, the first story arc of which was written by Loeb. During the company wide crossover series Infinite Crisis, [38] a sequel to Crisis on Infinite Earths, Supergirl is transported to the 31st century, where she is revered as a member of the Superman family and joins the Legion of Super-Heroes. Beginning with issue Supergirl returns to the 21st century during the course of In, Supergirl appeared in the miniseries Amazons Attack! That same year, she joined the Teen Titans [41] for five issues. Art by Ed Benes. Conversations with other heroes who maintain secret identities lead Kara to the conclusion that she needs to make a deeper connection with human beings. Cry for Justice, and the "Blackest Night". Supergirl subsequently appears in the "Brightest Day" storyline, the follow up to "Blackest Night". Kara has no memory of the destruction of Krypton, and believes it is only three days since her spacecraft was launched. She finds the city in ruins, with no explanation of how it met that fate, and is attacked by a female Worldkiller named Reign before the city plummets into the sun. When Reign and her fellow Worldkiller plan to enslave the Earth, Supergirl returns there to defeat them, and thus adopts Earth as her new home. Her desire to restore Krypton results in her being manipulated into nearly destroying the Earth by another Kryptonian whom she falls in love with. Upon realizing his manipulation, she kills him by driving Kryptonite through his heart, and succumbs to Kryptonite poisoning. Following her poisoning, Supergirl departs the Earth to die alone. While adrift in interstellar space, she encounters a planet under attack by monsters, and quickly intervenes to save them, unaware that the entire planet is a trap by Brainiac. She is captured and restrained by Cyborg Superman, but after a struggle, manages to escape both Brainiac and Cyborg Superman. Back on Earth, she encounters the assassin Lobo. Driven insane by rage, Kara wanders space, attacking everyone in her way, until captured by several Green Lanterns and brought to Hal Jordan. Immediately recognizing a Kryptonian and unable to remove the power ring without killing her, he brings her to Guy Gardner, the leader of one of the two Red Lantern factions, who manages to restore her sanity. He attempts to assimilate Kara as his host, but she voluntarily subjects herself to Kryptonite poisoning in order to stop him, and eventually flies into the Sun and removes her power ring, killing her and removing him from her body. She later helps Guy against Atrocitus and his Red Lantern splinter group. Convergence and return of the Pre-Crisis version[edit] During the Convergence story arc, the original Kara Zor-El who had sacrificed her life during Crisis on Infinite Earths makes an appearance on the amalgamated planet of Telos. Her fate as of that story arc is yet to be revealed. As part of her civilian identity, Kara receives special glasses that darken her blond hair when posing as Kara Danvers. Supergirl defeats them but vows to help her father regardless of his actions. Powers and abilities[edit] Like all Kryptonians under a yellow sun, the current version of Kara Zor-El possesses vast superhuman strength, speed, and stamina; invulnerability; flight; super breath; x-ray vision; telescopic and microscopic vision; freeze breath; heat vision; and super hearing. She also could create entire new powers on a whim and could sneeze entire solar systems away. She also could break infinity and hold her own against the entire DC Universe and win casually. Kryptonite was the only way to actually harm her, though she was still susceptible to magic.
