

Chapter 1 : Ear, Nose and Throat at a Glance : Ray Clarke :

Ear, Nose and Throat at a Glance is the ideal companion for anyone about to start the ENT attachment, or 'special senses' rotation, and will appeal to medical students and junior doctors, as well as nurses, audiologists and other health professionals.

All application forms will be checked to decide whether they are eligible to go forward to the shortlisters. The longlisting will look to see that you meet the following areas of the relevant person specification: You possess the qualifications required 2. You have the correct amount of experience in the specialty you are applying to 3. You have fully completed all the relevant sections of the application form and 4. As the RLMT will not be deemed to have been satisfied in Round 1 of the recruitment to this specialty, applicants in this category are asked to consider applying during Round 2. Evidence of immigration status should normally consist of a date stamped passport and accompanying letter from the Home Office. Application forms will be scored by two trained assessors against a set of shortlisting criteria that will have been agreed in advance. Application forms will be anonymised. If you score highly enough you will be invited to attend a selection centre. Questions asked at the selection centre will map to the person specification. Programme details Last updated: The curriculum will involve the acquiring of generic competencies in the first 2 years and full details of the curriculum can be viewed on the ISCP website www.iscp.nhs.uk. Part of CT1 will be spent in related specialties e.g. Trainees will participate in the ARCP interim and final appraisal processes organised by the Deanery. Educational Opportunities Trainees in CT1 and CT2 will be expected to attend local educational programmes which are held in the hospital where they are working. There is a comprehensive core teaching programme which takes place on Wednesday afternoons at Wythenshawe Hospital. Attendance is mandatory and an attendance register is kept and monitored. The timetable for teaching can be viewed at www.iscp.nhs.uk. All trainees should be actively involved in audit on an ongoing basis and be in a position to demonstrate this at annual appraisal and ARCP interviews. Teaching of less experienced medical colleagues, medical students, nurses and other paramedical staff is an integral part of the post and all trainees are expected to be involved in this.
