We rarely leave negative feedback. To receive negative feedback from us, you really must earn it. The best way to earn negative feedback is to snipe an auction from another bidder at the last second, then ignore our invoices and requests for payment. On the other hand: We always leave positive feedback for those who pay promptly and communicate with us. As we write this, we have received over 4, positive feedbacks and very few negative feedbacks. Our negative feedbacks are usually from newbies with "0" feedback ratings. A simple email or phone call and he would have received a full refund, and we would have had the damaged item returned to us at our own expense. Instead, he received reciprocal negative feedback from us, and he now owns a broken guitar. Moral of the story: Do not leave negative feedback before contacting us or any other seller.
