The consistent ethic of life: the challenge and the witness of Catholic health care, Catholic Medical Center, Jamaica, New York, May 18, Address to the consistent ethic of life conference, Portland, October 4,

A fireworks display to remember graced the skies above Rockhurst University, providing a grand finale to a day of celebration Saturday, Sept. Opinions expressed in Rockhurst magazine are those of individual authors and not necessarily those of the University. Rockhurst welcomes letters and comments. We celebrated the centennial of our charter with special events and commemorations throughout the year. In this issue of Rockhurst magazine, we depart from our usual format to relive the excitement of Centennial Weekend through photos and to take a deeper look at several aspects of the University that make Rockhurst what it is today: As always, you can catch up on news from the Rockhurst community in Class Notes. Caring for Rockhurst, Caring for You The history of Rockhurst is a story of successes, modest and significant, contrasted with periods of challenges and uncertainty. As with many Jesuit institutions, the foundation of Rockhurst was based upon a community need and a link to an existing Jesuit institution. The need was for Catholic higher education, at the beginning of the 20th century, in Kansas City, a growing urban community in the Midwest. The link was with Creighton University through the Rev. Dowling purchased 25 acres at the corner of 53rd and Troost. In , a charter was granted by the state of Missouri enabling the institution to award degrees. Four 2 centennial issue years later, high school students were admitted. And in , the first collegians began their classes. Today, Rockhurst University continues living in the balance between cura apostolica and cura personalis. In many respects and throughout these first years, our care for the work has positioned us to care for the person. The first decade of our second century has us sequencing priorities from our five-year strategic plan and our year campus master plan. These priorities include a new academic building, more housing and a parking structure. Parking did not require much attention in Complementing these concerns are plans for more scholarship dollars, faculty and staff development programs, and resources for international education. In many respects, this balancing act has been a trajectory throughout our history. The stories you encounter in this magazine provide convincing evidence for how personal transformation and leadership education in the Jesuit tradition have been the result of life in that tension. It appears to be a winning formula and a great way for us to proceed into the next century. If there is one thing that Shirl Kasper discovered while writing Rockhurst University: The First Years contains an overarching theme on the sacrifice that was necessary in order to make the University possible, said Bill Stancil, Ph. The page book, a result of seven years of research and writing, features almost color and black-and-white photographs, illustrations, historical documents, and sidebars. If you guessed billionaire philanthropist Bill Gates, you would be correct. Students were surveyed earlier this year regarding their views on a host of topics reflective of popular culture, politics and society. The answers became part of the TimeBox contents when it was resealed in early December to signify the close of the yearlong Rockhurst Centennial celebration. Brainchild of the Rev. During , the TimeBox was opened and items were on display for all to view during Centennial Weekend with the idea that additional items signifying the life and times of Rockhurst and its students from to the present would be added. Among the original treasures were a Rockhurst freshman beanie from the days when first-year students were required to wear them or suffer at the hands of upperclassmen. New items included a current student handbook and a Centennial lapel pin. How did students 25 years ago answer their survey questions for TimeBox 75? The most admirable American male was John F. Kennedy and they overwhelmingly predicted a woman would be president or vice president by And the favorite professional sport? In both surveys baseball took the lead. Rockhurst President the Rev. From left The Rev. More than 2, alumni, parents and friends traveled from more than 17 states to attend. The weekend was rich with memories. Relive them here and enjoy additional photos at www. award. A huge turnout of former and current soccer players came to wish head coach Tony Tocco center well at a reception held in honor of his 40th anniversary at Rockhurst. They assembled more than backpacks filled with food. The class of held its 40th reunion during the weekend. A new statue of St. Ignatius Loyola seated by the Cardoner River, representing the Rockhurst core value of reflection and discernment, was dedicated following Mass. Weiss celebrated after lighting sparklers on a ceremonial cake. Our devotion to this Jesuit tradition helps us grow in faith. To find out, we asked several students, faculty and staff to share their views. For me, it means God is present everywhere. Waldo is always in the picture, but can you find him? Finding God in all things requires only that we look. It motivated our founders. It inspires us today. It goes beyond the Roman Catholic heritage that establishes our foundation. It speaks to all people – those alive in the practice of their traditions, as well as those searching and learning about traditions. The answers are as varied as they are inspiring. As students get into the rhythm, they begin to look for God in the smallest places of their lives, realizing that God is one who often speaks in whispers rather than by shouting. But when it is too dark to find much of anything, let alone God, it may mean falling back and allowing ourselves to be caught up in mystery and grace, that is, found. Sharing the moment we felt closest to God each week allows us to hear the way other people experience God in their lives. The important thing is to just be open, every minute of every day. This is why the value-based education at Rockhurst University is appreciated. It addresses our intentional integration of faith into learning, leading, serving and celebrating in the Jesuit tradition. Our faith calls on us to consider the wholeness of who we are: By integrating faith and reason, we become critical thinkers. With valuebased leadership, we become skilled at drawing people together. To serve in generosity, we become advocates for and with those in need. Each of us has been blessed; therefore, we need to share our blessing with others. Every day, there are grace-filled moments. We celebrate them with Jesuit traditions. We are grateful for a good meal, a good book, good art, good friends and good conversation. We may practice our faith differently than how it was lived years ago. But the same values exist. The beliefs are real. Our rituals may have changed or been adapted, but our way of proceeding is the same: Today, we remain a faith-filled community. Let us continue to walk by faith and reason into the next years. Can I see it in the wholeness and still see it as good? I was with Bob Miller, a wonderful friend to Rockhurst, a couple of weeks before he died from cancer. Being with him, on campus, reminded me that when it comes down to the final moments, we realize how special a Catholic, Jesuit education is. We realize how much the Rockhurst values mean to us. A moment closest to God could be the homily at Mass, walking across campus and feeling the wind, or receiving an unexpected letter in the mail that makes you feel special. How is God showing me He loves me at this time? God shows His love in so many different ways. It was ice cream. I fell in love with it. The homily really hit home. Madigan says Rockhurst students benefit in this area from the range of courses in theology and religious studies, as well as intersecting core and major classes. The entire campus community, including alumni, is invited to Mass of the Holy Spirit each September to prayerfully begin the new academic year. There are so many ways to connect, and we meet them wherever they are spiritually. This approach places great value on developing students to be well-rounded people, instead of encouraging immediate specialization in one subject. A broader perspective prepares you for life. One defining characteristic is the commitment to a strong foundation in the liberal arts and sciences, particularly through the core curriculum.

Rockhurst was first school in the Kansas City area to receive this honor. Housing The campus is home to three residence halls and the Townhouse Village, offering housing for interested students, as well as university-owned houses on two streets adjacent to campus. McGee Hall typically houses only freshmen women, while Corcoran Hall houses primarily freshmen men. Xavier-Loyola Hall is a co-ed residence hall for upper-class students, mainly consisting of sophomores and juniors, with male and female students living in separate wings. The Townhouse Village houses upper-class students in apartment-style living, with a full kitchen, dining room, living room, and two or three bedrooms. Upper-class students can also apply to live in university-owned houses on residential streets adjacent to campus, giving them the opportunity to live more independently. These houses are deemed "on-campus" and hold groups of 3 to 6 residents. The quad The main area of campus, including all classroom buildings, surrounds the quad with the monumental Rockhurst bell tower and adjacent pergola flanking one end. In the quad has been renamed the Kinerk Commons by the university, in honor of Edward Kinerk, the thirteenth president of the university. The recently renovated Conway Hall is home to the Helzberg School of Management, the university finance office, and university computer services. The science center, built in , holds the science classrooms and labs, as well as the doctoral program in physical therapy and master program in occupational therapy. VanAckeren Hall holds the education department, the learning center open to all students for free tutoring and writing help , and career services, which helps students find jobs and internships across the Midwest. Massman Hall is the center of the campus, both physically and organizationally. The admissions, business, student development, and administrative offices are all in Massman, as well as the cafeteria, the student pub, a coffee shop, Mabee Chapel, a fully equipped fitness and workout facility, and the Rock Room, which is a hour recreational lounge for students. Arrupe Hall A major addition to the Rockhurst campus was Arrupe Hall, opening in August , a classroom and faculty office building which includes a seat auditorium. It features versatile classrooms accommodating modern teaching methods and technologies and has a variety of small gathering spaces along the corridors to facilitate sharing and friendship among the students. It was also built with a view to energy conservation and openness to natural light. His call clearly resonates with the message from Jesuit Pope Francis. The Mason-Halpin Fieldhouse holds the basketball and volleyball court, and the adjacent Convocation Center contains a multipurpose court, racquetball courts, and a workout facility. Within Massman Hall is the Mabee Chapel, where daily mass is held each school day, and where student devotional prayer and praise-and-worship groups meet weekly. Across the street from campus is St. Francis Xavier Church, a Jesuit parish church, used by the university for student masses every Sunday evening. The Community Center serves as a physical link between the university and the surrounding neighborhood. Academics Rockhurst University offers over fifty graduate and undergraduate programs, serving over 3, students annually. The core undergraduate curriculum is designed to shape students into leaders who are engaged in the world around them in whatever path they choose, and the graduate programs aim to prepare professional leaders with a hands-on curriculum, nationally recognized faculty and flexible schedules. Rockhurst University operates under one president, but has the following schools with their own deans or directors: They offer daily mass in the Mabee Chapel every weekday at noon, as well as a student mass every Sunday at 6: Campus ministry also offers RCIA to any interested students. Christian Life Communities CLCs are student-led faith-sharing and reflection groups that meet for an hour each week as small groups. Unity, a gay-straight alliance that meets weekly for prayer, support and service, is open to students of all faith traditions and sexual orientations. Voices for Justice is a student-led social justice group that explores the justice implications of Christianity and raises awareness of social justice issues on campus and beyond. People for People is a group of students exploring issues relating to the respect for life. Retreats Campus Ministry runs several different retreat programs during the academic year. The Frosh Getaway, offered annually on a September weekend, is an opportunity for freshmen, led by sophomore leaders, to get to know their new classmates and to adjust to college life with a fun stress-free weekend. The Retreat on the Rock is designed as a college adaptation of Kairos-style retreats. The Fifth Week Retreat is intended as a follow-up to Kairos, Search, TEC, Retreat on the Rock, or similar style retreats, offering ample time for personal reflection and group discussion. The Busy Persons Retreat, offered annually in the spring, is an opportunity for spiritual guidance and reflection within the context and schedule demands of daily college life. In it moved to the Great Lakes Valley Conference. In July the Mid-Atlantic Intercollegiate Athletics Association rejected a proposal for Rockhurst to join the conference to compete with geographically closer teams. The MIAA said it currently did not want to expand beyond 12 teams. The school also offers two club sports: It is a popular joke around campus that the Rockhurst University football team has remained undefeated since the year that the team was dissolved. Since joining the NCAA in , the soccer team has played in 19 national tournaments, advancing to the Final Four 3 times , , and In , Rockhurst University added three varsity athletic teams: There is also an intramurals program on campus, with many students participating in a event program throughout the school year. To receive the award, a team must achieve a grade point average of 3. Some general campus organizations include:
