Prompt from Hawkstout for Fluff Week. For fluff week Robin! April Fools Day was always one of those holidays, the kind that should be fun but never was because of the criminals in Gotham. This holiday always belonged to the Joker. Last year, Dick had found himself suspended above a vat of piranha while dozens of fake teeth chewed at the rope holding him. This year, he was twelve and no longer a newbie. And this year, Dick was determined to have an actually fun April Fools Day. Dick started with an old classic, one he used to pull on his parents and any adults he could find at the circus-- the April fish. Right after breakfast, Bruce went to do some work in his study. He gave Bruce thirty minutes before he followed him up, bringing a stack of homework to hide his prank. It was easy with Bruce leaning forward over the desk. It looks really confusing. Dick hummed and moved away from Bruce, gathering up his homework. He whipped around and, sure enough, Bruce was fish-less and giving him a Look. Dick gave him a weak smile. He had a whole slew of others, an army of other pranks waiting. OK, he had one. But it was a really good one! Like Batman would put nipples on his suit. Dick had to force himself to stay calm all day until patrol, fighting back the urge to insist they go out and start patrol early or do a suit check or anything that could throw off his plan. By the time Bruce said it was time to patrol, Dick nearly jumped out of his skin from eagerness. He ran down first and waited in the changing area for Bruce to come get his suit. Bruce seemed to be taking extra long to come down to the point that Dick was already dressed by the time Bruce finally joined him at the lockers. Finally, Bruce opened his locker. Bruce hummed in thought. Maybe I should use a different suit tonight. Hours ago, it had been full of cheap Halloween costumes. He seemed to pointedly ignore Dick pouting on the bench. Batman was the worst! They both sprang up at once. Frustrated and now benched, Dick kicked the roof and flopped back against the building. Before Dick could turn around, something heavy came down on his head, and everything went black. Someone was singing a strangely upbeat version of "Fool on the Hill", only they seemed to be replacing the words as they went. Suddenly, it stopped, and the bag was pulled off of his head. Dick scrunched his mouth to the side. Or, really, his Robin is cooked. Dick wiggled his arm free and caught the Joker straight under the chin, whipping the chair around to catch him about the legs. Bruce gave him a Look, but the slight smirk on his face said it all. After all, I did just catch the Joker for you. Maybe I should go out on my own. Dick let the silence hang a moment longer before grinning. You really thought I was gonna go out on my own! Are you really upset? You need to learn better material.

On this program we explore common words and expressions in American English. In the United States April 1 is a day when you need to be a little careful. We did a program on fool expressions a couple of years ago. We explained how to use foolhardy and foolproof. So, here we are again talking about fools! It is very easy to trick a fool. He was in perfect health. They both describe someone who is easily tricked or deceived. Or sometimes, we play the fool because we fall deeply in love and cannot think clearly. If that is too wordy, you can simply say he is no fool. If you make a fool of yourself, you do something that makes you look foolish or silly. For example, imagine you are at a party. Suddenly your best friend sees a young woman who he really likes. He wants to get her attention. So, he starts dancing. But, no one else is dancing. In fact, there is no music playing. You are making a fool of yourself. That is just mean. If a person tries to make a fool of you by yelling at you in public, just walk away. He will end up making a fool of himself. Now, if you are fooling yourself you are unwilling to accept the facts of a situation. In other words, you are in denial. If you think that you can learn perfect English in a very short time without studying or practicing, you are really fooling yourself. One is to spend time without any purpose. If you have the day off from work, you might decide to fool around all day. Another meaning is to behave playfully. The two friends were fooling around near the train tracks when they heard a call for help! For example, the husband and wife were fooling around in the kitchen when their friends and family walked in for dinner. In these three example, you could also say mess around. It has the same meaning and we use it in the same situations. You will break it. And this will be the last Words and Their Stories â€¦ ever. Caty Weaver was the editor.
