Character Earliest Appearance Notes Black kitten who eats human flesh Cat's Eyes by Lee Jordan: A mild horror story in which a black kitten becomes an abnormally large black cat, who haunts the isolated house of the heroine, Rachel.

These cats went above and beyond the call of duty to help others in need. The first to come to his rescue was the family cat, Tara, who body-slammed the dog, followed closely by Erica Triantafilo. Tara is one brave cat! Erica tried to chase the dog off, and she was bitten, too. Jeremy was taken to a hospital where he received ten stitches. The family appeared on The Today Show this morning. The heroics displayed by Tara, a stray adopted by the family six years ago, surprised everyone. She just loves them right back anyway. Jung was not planning to adopt one, but went home with two. Pudding, a pound cat, stood out and seem drawn to Jung. She took him and another cat named Wimsy home with her. Later that night, Jung suffered a diabetic seizure in her sleep. Pudding jumped up on her and woke her up enough to call out to her son Ethan, but he was asleep. Ethan was able to get his mother medical attention, but she might have sunk into a coma without intervention. Since the incident, Jung has registered Pudding as a therapy animal. Doctors at the hospital found that she had suffered a heart attack! Surgery followed and Nelson had two stents implanted. When she returned home, Rusty was back to his normal self, but would not leave her side. Nelson credits him with saving her life. Pwditat As Terfel, a dog who lives in Wales, aged, his eyes became blurred by cataracts. Eventually he became completely blind. When Godfrey-Brown invited a stray cat into her home, it was like the answer to a prayer. The new cat, named Pwditat this is in Wales, remember immediately became a guide for Terfel. The cat uses her paws to guide Terfel around the house and into the garden for some fresh air. The two animals became inseparable, and even sleep together. Watch Pwditat in action in a video. Lorcan Dillon is affected by Selective Mutism, which makes it difficult for him to express himself. The condition is often confused with autism. But Lorcan received the most valuable therapy from his pet cat, Jessi-cat. The cat accepts Lorcan unconditionally and gives him a patient ear. Scarlett In, a fire broke out in a suspected crack house in Brooklyn. A cat later named Scarlett was observed carrying her kittens out of the building one by one. She was severely burned, and blinded by blisters. She touched each kitten with her nose to make sure they were all safe from the fire, then collapsed. The League received applications to adopt Scarlett and her kittens! Three families were selected, and Scarlett made a full recovery, albeit with damaged eyelids and ears. Simon Simon was born in Hong Kong. As a half-grown cat, he was taken aboard the HMS Amethyst to control rats. In, the ship was attacked on the Yangtze River in China by communists. Simon was wounded, but not found for days. As Simon recovered he resumed rat catching, but also added the duty of visiting sick and wounded sailors. Upon his return to Hong Kong, Simon was presented with a campaign ribbon and news that he would receive a Dicken Medal, an award for animal gallantry. When the Amethyst reached England, Simon had to go into quarantine. He developed an infection and died just before his planned formal medal ceremony. Simon was buried in a specially-made casket with full naval honors. See more pictures of Simon. She was named Faith and adopted by the rector and parishioners. She would sit at the pulpit while Father Henry Ross preached. In, Faith gave birth to a single kitten named Panda. On September 6, Faith demanded access to the church basement. When a door was opened for her, she carried her kitten down to the dark cellar. Father Ross retrieved the kitten twice, but Faith carried him back downstairsâ€”twice. She even missed a church service, which was unusual. The next day, air raids began in the Battle of London, and by September 9, people had been killed and eight churches were destroyed by bombs. Father Ross returned to the church to find it ruined. He called for Faith and heard faint meowing in return. He retrieved both Faith and Panda from the rubble just before the roof collapsed. Faith was nominated for a Dickin Medal, for which she was not eligible as a civilian, but she was awarded a special medal for bravery anyway. Faith was presented with the medal in a special ceremony in attended by the Archbishop of Canterbury. When Faith died peacefully at the age of 14, the church was again packed for her funeral.

We know that the name of this cat is Gizmo and he belongs to Nick and Scarlet. Gizmo was mesmerised by the toilet flush, and somehow discovered for himself how to operate the lever. One afternoon Scarlet was as far as she knew, alone in the house. Then the toilet flushed, seemingly of its own accord. When Scarlet discreetly investigated she discovered that it was Gizmo who was discharging the cistern. Their owner, Cai, of Jiangmen, China said he has been raising cats and dogs together for more than 10 years, and they all got along together well, however, this was the first time he had ever seen kittens being nursed by a dog Will and Guy have learned. It volunteered to take over and feed the kittens of its old friend. She lost all of her own children. Many of the big cats, for example tigers, lions, jaguars, ocelots, and jaguarondi [weasel cat] who frequent hot climates are particularly partial to a dip in a pond, stream or river. Cats are natural swimmers in the wild, and Asian varieties have been known to fish in rivers and lakes. Cats bred near Lake Van in Turkey are raised around the water; the breed [The Turkish Van] has an affinity for water, and really likes to swim. An old breed, this cat has been a household pet for centuries. Its water prowess is well known in Turkey, where they been known to swim into the harbour to greet the arriving fishing boats. However, cats from colder regions avoid water as much as possible. Snow leopards, lynx, bobcats, and cougars for example have little interest in getting wet. Most domestic cats, however, dislike getting wet. They do not enjoy water sports and if bathed, become upset. The emphasis here is on most cats because some domestic animals will tolerate water if they are accustomed to bathing or showering. The large, short-haired brown dog was not leaving. He still was barking, jumping, and stretching his front paws across the bathroom sink in an effort to attack me. He panted constantly, exposing a mouth full of his own sharp teeth, and a black tongue that hung out. I think I will try using my most fierce hiss, instead. He jumped at me anyway. Good thing I backed off. I moved my eyes around my surroundings, checking every which way. I was stuck on the top of the sink with no place to jump--except down into his waiting jaws. Whimpering like a puppy, he jumped down and slowly left the room. Now I must get out of here and hide fast before he comes back. I quickly surveyed the distance between the floor and the top bunk, so I would know exactly how high to jump. Extending my body, up I went with no problem. I was a good jumper, never missing my mark. I snuggled up on the top bunk, which was close to the ceiling. I grabbed the small blue cotton blanket, inhaling the fragrant odor of my young human friend, before tossing it around to feel its soft, fluffy texture next to my body. I rubbed it under my chin in order to leave my scent on it. I perked up my ears, as my keen hearing detected the dog running back into the adjacent bathroom. I crouched down low and put myself into silent mode, while that trouble-making dog, with his battered nose, sniffed around the sink and the floor. I mentally grinned, knowing he had no idea where I had gone. And if he should find out, he would have no way to reach me. Time for a nap! Will and Guy appreciate being able to publish this story from an author who knows how to craft words. See more work by Charlene Wexler. The saucer, he realised with a start, was a rare and precious piece of pottery. He strolled into the store and offered two pounds for the cat. I prefer cats that way.

The best classic cat stories. Previously, we've offered our pick of classic cat poems, and that post proved so popular that in this post we've set ourselves the task of compiling a top ten list of the best cat stories.

Currently sharing her RV travel with two cats, Stephanie is a lifelong cat lover, enjoying their independence, intelligence and quiriness. Source Cats Are Amazing! Most cat owners are convinced that cats, especially their cats, are truly amazing. Cats are endearing, mysterious, loveable and kooky; their owners often wonder what goes on in those fuzzy little heads. Read on for true stories about remarkable cats who adopted bunnies, played the piano, chased a bear and predicted death. Cats will Adopt Baby Bunnies or Squirrels Apparently, it is not unusual for cats to adopt baby animals of another species. Sadly, within a very short time, both newborns died. It was heartbreaking to hear Missy crying and calling for her babies as she searched the house for her kittens. Mama Cat Kidnaps Baby Bunnies One afternoon, she came through her basement cat door carefully carrying a very tiny baby bunny by the scruff of its neck. I happened to see her and took it away unharmed, putting it in a box lined with soft cloth until I could figure out what to do with it. Meanwhile, she went outdoors again and in a few minutes was back with another baby bunny. She brought back four of the babies before deciding that was enough. Then she climbed into the box next to them and started grooming them and purring, turning on her side trying to entice them to nurse. Unfortunately, she no longer had milk to feed them. Bunnies Returned to Birth Mother We could see that these babies would not survive the adoption, so we set out to see if we could find the nest and return the bunnies to their birth mother. Eventually we found the nest and set the four adoptees back with their siblings. We kept Missy indoors for the rest of the day and night. The next day when we checked the nest, the babies were gone. We believe the mother rabbit moved them to a safer place. Our poor frustrated mama cat never tried adopting baby bunnies again. Daisy Source A cat can make over vocal sounds dogs can make 10 A cat sleeps 14 hours a day Americans spend more annually on cat food than on baby food. In cats overtook dogs as the number one pet in America. Cats are the only animal that walk on their claws, not the pads of their feet. A cat has 32 muscles in each ear. A group of youngsters kittens is called a kindle; those old-timers adult cats form a clowder. The average cat food meal is the equivalent to about five mice. People who are allergic to cats are actually allergic to cat saliva or to cat dander. If the resident cat is bathed regularly the allergic people tolerate it better. A cat can jump even seven times as high as it is tall. It has been scientifically proven that owning cats is good for our health and can decrease the occurrence of high blood pressure and other illnesses. Stroking a cat can help to relieve stress, and the feel of a purring cat on your lap conveys a strong sense of security and comfort. They would find the cat door in our basement, enter and hide there, terrorizing our own cats. One November, a shy tiger cat became a regular, sneaking up the basement stairs to help himself to the cat food on our basement stair landing, but scooting away if we tried to lure him closer. Knowing that the oil or whatever he had gotten into would not come off by itself, we cornered the cat in our basement and wrapped him in old t-shirts while we gave him a bath – no easy task, let me tell you! Because he was soaking wet and sickly looking, we locked him in our bathroom with food, water and a litter box for a few hours until he dried off. Try as we might, we could not get him to trust us, and ended up letting him go back down into our basement where he found his way back out into the cold November night again. A Surprise Thanksgiving Visitor But the most interesting part of this story was yet to come. A few days later, our family gathered in our dining room for Thanksgiving dinner. It was our first family dinner together since our son and his family moved to our town, and our grandson was telling us how much he missed his cat that had been gone for more than a month in spite of all their efforts to find him. But somehow this remarkable cat knew that we were a safe haven and that it would only be a matter of time until his master came to claim him. Some Cats are Fearless! After about 15 minutes, the bear came down and tried to escape only to be chased once again by a hissing and spitting mad

Jack who treed the bear once again. Finally, the owner took pity on the poor bear and called her watch cat indoors so the bear could be on its way. Oscar lives on the third floor, an advanced stage dementia unit that allows pet therapy. Like other conscientious staff, he makes rounds of the patients each day, sniffing each one and sometimes choosing to curl up with certain ones. The patients he stayed with would often die within a few hours. Oscar would offer comfort and attention to the dying patient and family members who were in attendance. Once the patient died and he was no longer needed, he would leave the room. Although nursing home staff say that Oscar is not friendly to most people, his mission in life seems to be to give comfort to the dying. New England Journal of Medicine 4: He has become famous through Dr. The Extraordinary Gift of an Ordinary Cat. Source Holly, the Cat, Travels Miles Home There are many stories of cats who have managed to travel long distances to return to their homes. Recently, a little tortoise shell cat named Holly was lost in Datona Beach, Florida. She managed to navigate almost miles and showed up two months later near her home in West Palm Beach, Florida. Although the cat was half starved, weak, and had very sore paws from walking on concrete, an implanted microchip confirmed that it was indeed the missing Holly. They had a cat. Once, in the spring season, the cat was lost. The children could not find it anywhere, though they looked for it everywhere. One day, they heard many soft meows from the roof of the barn, while they were playing nearby. Vasya climbed onto the roof, and found to his great joy that their cat had given birth to four five lovely kittens. They look so sweet. They fed the mother cat very well so that she will have enough milk to feed her babies. The barn roof had become the home of the cats. The five kittens grew very fast. When they were big enough to crawl, Vasya and Katya took one of them with them to their house. It was grey and had white paws. One day, the children decided to take the kitten to the meadow in front of their house, to play with it. The tall grass was stirring in the wind and the kitten happily played with it. Then Vasya and Katya saw some strange-looking leaves and began to pick them, forgetting all about the kitten. Suddenly, they heard some sounds. The dogs were getting close, and the kitten, instead of running away, stiffened and crouched, ready to face the dogs. It looked so tiny in front of the big dogs. Katya screamed, and Vasya ran to the kitten as fast as he could, and fell on the kitten just as the dogs were about to pounce on it. Luckily, the hunter galloped up at that same moment, and drove the dogs away. The children took the kitten home and they decided to never bring it out with them to the meadow. Adapted from a short story by Leo Tolstoy.

Since opening, it has cared for more than 10, underage, orphaned kittens in need of around-the-clock feedings and specialty care – each with their own unique story of survival. A humane officer was sent to a neighborhood park after meowing was heard coming from a trash can. The officer found a sealed garbage bag that contained a tiny, barely alive kitten. Under the care of the Kitten Nursery, Oscar was stable within two days. He is thriving in his new home! Sophia arrived at the nursery with her umbilical cord tightly wrapped around her leg, leaving her with a severely infected back paw that needed to be amputated. Pie was undernourished but determined to care for her babies. The program matches special outdoor cats with adopters who have a barn, shed, warehouse or other secure structure to offer as a safe home. These kitties were sent to a specialized foster home with another blind cat who could help the tiny kittens acclimate. Found stuck in the engine of a car, Miss B Haven was undersocialized and scared. She became an office kitten to help her get better accustomed to people and come out of her shell. After a few months, she finally learned to trust and was adopted by a loving couple! Davey arrived at the Kitten Nursery emaciated with his nose crusted over, eyes bulging and fighting for his life against a severe respiratory infection. In the midst of Hurricane Harvey, a family showed up to an emergency shelter in Beaumont, Texas with a box of kittens. She went right to work creating a makeshift nursery to care for these tiny babies and provided them with around-the-clock feedings to nurse them back to health. When this cross-eyed kitty named Bum came into the Kitten Nursery, he made everyone smile. He looked worried all the time, but he was actually super playful and silly! When Fuego was in the Kitten Nursery, he was diagnosed with a condition called megaesophagus, which meant that he struggled to move food down into his stomach. Kitten Nursery staff gave Fuego upright feedings in a baby carrier and carried him wrapped up like an adorable burrito after each feeding. Staff also got creative with elevated feedings, often using a little doll chair to prop up his food tray while he ate. He found a loving home with a special adopter who continued his specialized care. These sweet little kitties came to the nursery with markings that resembled facial hair.
