Fight, Team, Fight! by R. L. Stine. Random House Childrens Books, Mass Market Paperback Mass Market Paperback. Used Good. We carry new and used books in our storefront.

Back in episode two I liked Jade. And from the black and white photographs it also seemed like she was the hottest senior in the class! She seemed nice enough and dated a total brain, etc. But in this book she was an absolute witch. I actually wanted her to get it, because she had it coming. And I actually mean that literally. Jade is so jealous of Phoebe she pays her cousins friends to fake kidnap the cheerleaders in hopes it will scare Phoebe off the squad so she can be captain. Had no fake kidnapping taken place, Phoebe would have been the only one nabbed by the psycho. He said so himself. It also had the first and second male student deaths. Until this point it has been nothing but poor white females. Of course, just like what happened with Bobby, it turns out to be a big joke and all of the girls knew about each other and decided to give him a taste of his own medicine. Too bad he dies right after the big reveal! But there was still thirty pages left in the book. Time to find out who killed Ty. Why is Gary still breathing? See if a senior goes psycho they should be killed off. It adds to the body count and makes the whole thing more impressive. You were never in these books so I always knew you were a goner. Yes, someone dies though that is a sore subject to me. This is broken into two storylines: The Shadyside storyline was ridiculously lame. No one died so there is nothing else to say. The Arizona storyline was incredibly stupid and also not all that. But it did result in one death: If it is supposed to be a Super Chiller it should mean at least two bodies. In the original series, a Super Chiller meant a longer book, but also more deaths. I mentioned in the last recap how all of the missing seniors would wind up crazy or dead or both. Well not to say I told you so, but! Mira Block: There were seven seniors out of twenty-four that I cared about. So seven seniors I wanted to see make it to graduation and not die right after! I know how you work Stine. Two of those seniors have already been offed! So here are the remaining seniors I care about.

If you think that was enough to wet his appetite, think again. This is a longer-than-usual post but with multiple kidnappings, meat hooks, meat grinder conveyer belts and more—it is so worth it. Which cheerleader dies next? Read on and find out! In the past I have been great about not giving away spoilers, but with this series being about a small group of characters and their trials and triumphs not to mention who gets offed next I kind of think that I should retire that way of doing things, at least for this series. So here we go, but reader beware, spoilers are here. But if Phoebe is so perfect—why does someone want her dead? Will the seniors die one-by-one —” until there is nobody left to graduate? This book opens in the mind of the soon-to-be killer. Moving on—Phoebe Yamura is on fire wait for it, later. She is pretty, popular, head cheerleader, super smart and everyone likes her. Even though Phoebe is nice and a great cheerleader, fellow cheerleader and senior Jade Feldman is a total bitch to her. Jade wanted to be head cheerleader and she just sees Phoebe as an obstacle standing in her way. Also, what was the point of this? Bell comes out afterward and does a whole lot of nothing. Even though Jade is so awful to her, Phoebe offers to help Jade with her chemistry. Dana chimes in about how Phoebe is failing as captain. In the locker room a girl named Gina Quinlan approaches Phoebe. Phoebe tells her that tryouts were months ago but Gina convinces her to talk to Ms. Bell and give her a chance after showing off what she can do. Phoebe confronts them, which is also lame. Just typical high school drama but since Phoebe is so nice, it all falls a little flat. When Phoebe gets to her locker she finds her uniform is shredded along with a note: Give me an H-E-L-P! Phoebe talk to Ms. Bell about Gina and Gina gets herself a tryout the squad needs an alternate apparently. Jade and Dana are the only ones who bully Phoebe and without Jade, Dana is actually not so bad, at least tolerable. Oh please, the fact that the teacher has no idea what happened means they should be fired. Jade switched the tests and Phoebe is furious. She is about to tell the teacher when Dana, Samantha and Joey other girls from the squad beg her not to. Jade is the only one of them who can do a triple backflip and I guess that is a really big deal for this state competition coming up. And Phoebe caves because she is an idiot. If I were her, I would have gone to Gina and see if she could do a triple back flip. She is so good, she probably could, and then out with the old and in with the new. Instead of this making Jade nicer, she and Dana are worse than ever before. I HATE mean girls. I know exactly how to get you. See, Phoebe, this is why you should have never covered for Jade. When Gina opens it a locket falls out. How did she die? We do not know. I seriously wish it had been brought up, even if it was something like a car accident because keeping the information from us makes it seem like it matters, later. But it does not. When Phoebe opens her locker, she is horrified to see a doll hanging by a meat hook in a bloody cheerleader uniform. A note is pinned to it: Bell gets the Vice Principal involved. If it were me, I would want Witness Protection. Anyway there is a game that Friday and everyone seems pumped. Phoebe is watching her own back when it comes to Jade and Dana, which has to be awkward with all the cartwheels and flips and such—or maybe that actually makes it easier. Anyway, it is time for the halftime show and you know something is about to go down. Phoebe feels like her skin is being eaten alive and finds that she has hundreds of fire ants on her hands, moving up her arms. They were in her pom-poms! Gina was inexplicably absent even though she was in charge of the equipment. Hmmm—After the game, Phoebe tries to talk to Jade and Dana about everything that has been happening. Jade acts like a total witch and threatens Phoebe. Dana is a soundless, mindless ornament. Phoebe walks away on the verge of tears. The only thing this really makes me think is that they need to get some better cheers. At practice on Monday afternoon, Phoebe messes up the pyramid so Dana falls. The getting back at Dana part. Anyway after practice, Ty takes Phoebe to the Fear Street Cemetery because not only is he a dog, but a creep who likes to get down with dead people. Then she gets up to her room and notices muddy tracks from her bed to the window, and a picture of her with the other cheerleaders is missing! If you know anything, you know what happens next. Remember my comment earlier about waiting for it, when I said Phoebe was on fire! you can stop waiting now. Phoebe passes out and wakes up in the hospital. Samantha is there and tells her that they think her baton was rigged to burn the way that it did. And Gina gave everyone their batons "do the math. Phoebe is okay, her hand is burned and she has to keep it bandaged for a week, but barring no complications will be able to participate in the state cheerleading competition in a week. Jade and Dana are at the hospital and come in. They actually seem mildly concerned. Jade is still a bitch mind you, but she says point-blank that she would never do something during a game because like Phoebe, she takes what they do seriously. The girl needs to learn some strategy, seriously. It might help if they had called the right school in the right state. Bell catches them and calls a squad meeting. Bell is sick of all the backstabbing and incidents. One more petty argument or one more accident and there will be no state competition for them. But this does the trick and they all act like decent okay maybe not decent, but at least civil human beings. Samantha has the flu, so Gina is actually on the squad just like she always wanted to be. Depends on if Samantha is actually dead or the killer assuming someone actually dies in this book. Gina and Phoebe are roommates and call a truce. It looks like everything is going to work out insert hysterical laughter here when Jade knocks on the door. She tells them that Dana fell into the empty pool and is hurt badly. I understand that Phoebe is a good person, but her room overlooks the empty pool, so! and also how does someone who is the epitome of grace fall into a sectioned off, tarp-on-top pool? Gina and Phoebe follow Jade and when they get there "shocker" no Dana. Gina and Jade go one way and Phoebe goes another. Suddenly someone grabs Phoebe from behind, covers her mouth and eyes and throws her into a dirty van. Dana is already inside and looks hurt so maybe the pool story was legit? But I do hope one of them dies before this book is over. Gina is second, and possibly the strongest contender. Still a new girl with a dead twin sister who is desperate to be a cheerleader! he has to do something with that, right? This is who I think it most likely is. He is hardly in the book at all so no reason to suspect him other than my spider sense is tingling. After awhile the van stops outside of a cabin in the middle of nowhere. He handcuffs Dana and Phoebe together as well as Jade and Gina. Phoebe sees an opportunity and the girls run towards the nearby woods. Seems like an inside job. Jade hired the kidnappers who were friends of her cousin to kidnap them to scare Phoebe off the squad. And even more, who the fuck does that? I mean that is just too much "seriously twisted.

Chapter 5 : Fear Street | R.L Stine Wiki | FANDOM powered by Wikia

R. L. Stine has written more than two hundred thriller and horror books for children, teens, and adults. His Goosebumps series, which was the bestselling series of all time for many years, is widely considered the consummate horror series for kids, with more than four hundred million copies sold.

Come visit Fear Street Although you may have noticed he dates everyone. Her parents are super strict. Also, both Jade Feldman and Dana Palmer had wanted to be captain, so they decide to make her life hell until she quits. Evil pranks start happening to Phoebe. She figures she just has to wait for Jade to fail her upcoming chem exam and that will be it. Jade, after all, can do a triple backflip. A new cheerleader has joined the squad, Gina, as an alternate. She just transferred from another school and is choked she only gets to be alternate. She reveals that she had a twin sister who died, who was also a cheerleader. That has definite potential to turn into something evil. Phoebe finds a bloody cheerleader doll in her locker. The note this time reads Score: That night at the game, Phoebe goes to take her pom-poms from Gina, and starts screaming in pain. The pom-poms are full of biting red ants. That is quite the difficult prank to arrange. Where does one find red ants, and how do you set them to attack? But Phoebe will stay as cheerleading captain if it kills her. At night she starts getting obscene phone calls, someone playing a recording of her cheering. That would creep me out for sure. Phoebe is convinced Jade is stalking her now. She tries to talk to Ty about it, but whenever she mentions talking he drives her to the Fear Street Cemetery to make out. Is that what kids are into these days. The next night, the cheerleaders decide to do the flaming baton routine. Okay, Phoebes, not a smart idea, okay? In a stunning lack of priorities, her first concern is whether she can compete in the state championships this weekend. She can, so things are cool. They discover that she never went to the high school she said she did. They take this damning evidence to the cheer coach, who informs them that they were looking in the wrong state. Gina finds out and is powerfully pissed they were investigating her. The morning of the competition, one of the girls gets a cold, so Gina has to take her place on the squad. And share a bunk with Phoebe. The girls go running out, only to find no Dana. Phoebe starts to get angry, and then all the girls, Gina, Dana, Jade and herself, are grabbed and handcuffed together by some guys who shove them in a van. They are taken to a cabin in the woods. The kidnappers immediately wander away from the girls, who make a break for it. They run down the road, then hide in the bushes when the van comes by. Dana falls into some mud and screams, tipping them off to where they are. Only Griffin drives them deeper into the woods. Phoebe realizes that Griffin is her stalker when he starts to chant some of her cheers. He was the one who had been playing all the evil pranks on her. Of course it was the janitor! How could I have missed that incredibly random bad guy? Jade and Dana confess they arranged the kidnapping to scare Phoebe off the squad, but that they had nothing to do with Griffin. Griffin went insane because he had a sister on the cheerleading squad when she was in high school. The other girls laughed at her. Then one day they got her to climb to the top of the mount. So he hates all cheerleaders. He takes them to an abandoned meatpacking plants. Of course, perfect horror book setting. Lots of chainsaws and old machinery around to maim and disfigure. He takes a chain saw and cuts off their handcuffs. If anyone messes up, they die. What an exciting game! They run through a few cheers, and Jade at one time uses the wrong foot. Phoebe ends her cheer by cartwheeling into him, knocking him down. She tells the girls to run. They scatter through the factory. Gina immediately gets her foot caught in a conveyor belt. Griffin turns the belt on, carrying her towards a meat grinder. Phoebe manages to get her out, but they here a chain saw and a scream coming from somewhere else in the plant. The girls are almost free when Griffin catches up with them. He brings them back to finish their routine for him. Phoebe also finds a smoke detector. She takes a book of matches and burns them, trying to get enough smoke to set it off. Nothing happens, but points for effort there. Griffin is about to kill Gina with a butcher knife when she interrupts him. He goes after her and is interrupted by the fire department! My, they got to the middle of the woods in a hurry. The story ends with Gina being put on the squad to replace Jade, and Phoebe introduces Ty to her parents. And Jade was such a bitch that not too many people missed her. I thought this book was going to be ridiculous, but it was kinda okay. Point definitely for the classic horror ending at the meatpacking plant, and for killing off a main character. I give it 12 triple backflips out of
