To explain what happened shortly before the flood we go first back to the story of other creatures that the Bible, the book of Jubilees and the book of Enoch are talking about The Nephilim Genetically there was nearly no difference between Satana and his companions and the Daughters of Men this was also the same by "The Watchers" Children of Seth and the Daughters of Men, otherwise they were unable to make children together. It is obvious that their Genetic structure was nearly the same because they were all "Angels" and relatives at the beginning. Roots of the Nephilim There is another enigma contained within the lines of Genesis 6, for it appears to embody two entirely different traditions. Look again at the words of Genesis 6: That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose. There were Giants in Hebrew bible Nephilim in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown. The meaning seemed clear enough: Both offspring were Giants or, named in the Bible "men which were of old, men of renown". And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, Gn: And the Lord said, My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: By "sons of God" the text means heavenly angels, the original Hebrew being Bene ha-Elohim. In Verse 3 of Chapter 6 God unexpectedly pronounces that his spirit cannot remain in men for ever, and that since humanity is a creation of flesh its life-span will henceforth be shortened to "an hundred and twenty years". Yet in Verse 4 the tone suddenly reverts to the original theme of the chapter, for it says: As we discussed the meaning of Genesis 6: The meaning of this clause must be clear when we see what is written in Genesis 6: God meant that man was granted to come back of their evil ways for years. The reader can see that the writers of the Bible made errors on purpose to have a way to explain the lifetime of modern mankind, or not on purpose, Nevertheless they made mistakes. Theologians are aware of this dilemma, and get around the problem by suggesting that the angels fell from grace twice, once through pride and then again through lust. It seems certain that the term Nephilim was the original Hebrew name for the fallen race, while bene ha-Elohim was a much later term, plausibly from Iran, which entered Genesis 6 long after its original compilation. In spite of the contradictions surrounding Genesis 6, its importance is clear enough, for it preserved the firm belief among the ancestors of the Jewish race that at some point in the distant past a Giant race had once ruled the earth, from the time of Jared until the time of David, the second King of Israel, with other words the offspring of the Anakim existed until historical times. The same story as in the Bible. You can imagine that when the offspring of the daughters of men and the Angels of God were Giants, then their "elders" must have been Giants too. We read further in The book of Jubilees: For owing to these three things came the flood upon the earth, namely, owing to the fornication wherein the Watchers against the law of their ordinances went a whoring after the daughters of men, and took themselves wives of all which they chose: Noah told his children, after the flood, why the Flood had been brought to the Earth. Here we can read also about the Nephilim Naphidim even as in the Bible, even we found a new name for the Giants, namely the Eljo. Even the Giants Naphidim, Naphil, Eljo sinned against the beasts and birds, you can imagine that the enormous number of stories in Myths and Legends about half Men-half Beast and half Men-half bird could be true, and it was true, they lived indeed a long ago and even until historical times. Chapter 6 1 And it came to pass when the children of men had multiplied that in those days were born unto them beautiful and comely daughters. In Enoch we see the most extensive version of the same story. In chapter 4 we have already discussed that at least three of the Angels, children of the heaven were close relatives of the last three earth-fathers. We read in The book of Enoch: Chapter 7 1 And all the others together with them took unto themselves wives, and each chose for himself one, and they began to go in unto them and to defile themselves with them, and they taught them charms and enchantments, and the cutting of roots, and made them acquainted with plants. We will read that the Sumerian Anunnaki came to Earth to do the work for the leader

Gods in groups of , with a total of The similarity with Enoch is obvious. This is not the only place where is spoken of their enormous length, as we will see in later chapters. In most Myths, Legends and Sages it speaks of Giants with a length of about 6 to 90 meters. Cyclops with one eye was one of these Giants but there were many more. In verse 5 we read a dazzling story that the "Nephilim" began to sin against birds, beasts and reptiles and even they began to eat their flesh and drink their blood. Reading this story makes it more understandable what is written in Legends and Myths where is told that the most "strange" beings once existed on Earth. There are countless stories of Fallen Angels and Gods of the Bible, and also in many myths and legends from all over the world. Many of these Gods were worshipped in ancient times and they were abundant as well as exceedingly mysterious. Playing the harlot and whoring after other Gods brought destruction to early man. I have already more than necessary proved that these three different Angels were one and the same and we will call them from now on "The Nephilim" If you have read the story carefully you know that all Creatures that sinned were Angels, but I will use the word Angels to mean Fallen Angels. Judgment of the "Nephilim" We can read in the Bible: And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; both man, and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them. But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth. In Jubilees and Enoch we can find more information. First we read further in Jubilees: Chapter 5 4 And He said that He would destroy man and all flesh upon the face of the earth which He had created. Then finally comes verse 12 were we can read: In the same verse we can also read that this new creation shall be judged as written down in the heavenly tablets. Now we know that Homo Sapiens was created shortly before or shortly after the Flood. We will see that the Flood took place about 30, years BCE. We discussed the punishment of the "Nephilim" in the book of Jubilees but the book of Enoch is also very clear about this judgment and as we will see the Gods and the "Good Angels" were extremely wrath to their leaders. We read further in The book of Enoch: Chapter 8 1 And Azazel taught men to make swords, and knives, and shields, and breastplates, and made known to them the metals of the earth and the art of working them, and bracelets, and ornaments, and the use of antimony, and the beautifying of the eyelids, and all kinds of costly stones, and all coloring tinctures. And as men perished, they cried, and their cry went up to heaven. In chapter 4 we could read about Genun and how he was instructed by Satana and his companions to make weapons. And again we can read about the uncle of Lamech, "Baraqijal" the brother of his father Methuselah who taught Mankind the knowledge of Astrology. In case of keeping this secret for Mankind he, in contradiction, learned Mankind to make weapons and make war. And Azazel and the other "Nephilim" revealed the eternal secrets which were preserved in heaven. In The book of Enoch we can read about the judgment of the Fallen Angels: But in spite of the great sins the "Nephilim" made, the Gods told the Angels that their offspring, the Anakim, still would live for years but they should lose their eternal life. In the "age" prediction lies concluded that the Flood should not come directly or that several "Nephilim" and "Anakim" should survive the Flood. We will see later in this chapter that a great amount of the Children of The Anakim still lived in the time of Moses, Joshua, Saul and David. Though they were degenerated in thousands of years and were only a "shadow" of their powerful forefathers. In the next chapters we will see that most of the offspring of the "Anakim" were Kings and they ruled over the human population after the flood. Most of them were worshipped as Gods and Demi-Gods. Also in the book of Enoch is spoken of a "new" period with a "new" creation because in verse 16 the Gods predicts "the "plant" of righteousness that will appear". Demons and Monsters The "Anakim" and the daughters of men, The Giants, "produced" all kinds of Demons and Monsters, from the knowledge of their "Fathers" the "Nephilim" and they created what ever they liked and so were born the most "Strange Creatures" that ever existed on Earth. Chapter 19 1 And Uriel said to me: Bringing forth many Evil Spirits from within physical bodies. These demonic hybrids began to completely corrupt and destroy the human race, they sinned not only with the daughters of men, they began to sin against the animals, beasts, birds, and reptiles, bringing forth the half human half animal creatures, which are so widely known throughout ancient cultures and civilizations and many were worshipped as gods. Which also brought an end to inner breeding between nations. Many of these "children", Creations were also of Giant stature and many were barbaric and cruel, after these beings inhabited earth for a time they corrupted their ways even further by mating with the animals, bringing forth the incredible creatures we view in ancient myths and legends. Many of them were worshipped as Gods. In most Scrolls and ancient legends we see there were beings of a half human half fish nature; DAGON half human and half Lion was once worshipped as a god by the Philistines. In later chapters I will come back with other stories about Giants, Demons and Monsters from all over the world. Can you imagine what strength these Giant "Nephilim" had when their body was to meters tall. The same conclusion can also be drawn for most great structures build all over the world, on Land and at present time under Sea level. More proof of the above we can find in Museums in the form of giant tools and even giant skulls of which the origin is unknown.

You can help by adding to it. April In redlip blennies , only the male fish develops an organ at the anal-urogenital region that produces antimicrobial substances. Catasetum orchids are one interesting exception to this rule. Male Catasetum orchids violently attach pollinia to euglossine bee pollinators. The bees will then avoid other male flowers but may visit the female, which looks different from the males. Some plants, such as some species of Geranium have what amounts to serial sexual dimorphism. The flowers of such species might for example present their anthers on opening, then shed the exhausted anthers after a day or two and perhaps change their colours as well while the pistil matures; specialist pollinators are very much inclined to concentrate on the exact appearance of the flowers they serve, which saves their time and effort and serves the interests of the plant accordingly. Some such plants go even further and change their appearance again once they have been fertilised, thereby discouraging further visits from pollinators. In effect the strategy ensures that the pollinators can expect a reward every time they visit an appropriately advertising flower. Females of the aquatic plant Vallisneria americana have floating flowers attached by a long flower stalk that are fertilized if they contact one of the thousands of free floating flowers released by a male. This can be seen in Cannabis sativa , a type of hemp, which have higher photosynthesis rates in males while growing but higher rates in females once the plants become sexually mature. The seed actually is the offspring of the haploid generation of microgametophytes pollen and megagametophytes the embryo sacs in the ovules. Each pollen grain accordingly may be seen as a male plant in its own right; it produces a sperm cell and is dramatically different from the female plant, the megagametophyte that produces the female gamete. Anthocharis cardamines male is brightly coloured. Anthocharis cardamines female Insects display a wide variety of sexual dimorphism between taxa including size, ornamentation and coloration. This is seen in the bee species Macrotera portalis in which there is a small-headed morph, capable of flight, and large-headed morph, incapable of flight, for males. The selection for larger size in males rather than females in this species may have resulted due to their aggressive territorial behavior and subsequent differential mating success. Andrena agilissima is a mining bee where the females only have a slightly larger head than the males. Copris ochus also has distinct sexual and male dimorphism in head horns. In butterfly genera Bicyclus and Junonia, dimorphic wing patterns evolved due to sex-limited expression, which mediates the intralocus sexual conflict and leads to increased fitness in males. In the size dimorphic wolf spider , food-limited females cannibalize more frequently. All Argiope species, including Argiope bruennichi , use this method. Fairbairn notes that "females are generally larger than males but males are often larger in species with male-male combat or male paternal care An example is Lamprologus callipterus , a type of cichlid fish. In this fish, the males are characterized as being up to 60 times larger than the females. If she grows too large, she will not fit in the shells and will be unable to breed. Another example is the dragonet , in which males are considerably larger than females and possess longer fins. Larger shells, although preferred by females, are often limited in availability. The larger the male, the larger the shells he is able to collect. This then allows for females to be larger in his brooding nest which makes the difference between the sizes of the sexes less substantial. Male-male competition in this fish species also selects for large size in males. There is aggressive competition by males over territory and access to larger shells. Large males win fights and steal shells from competitors. Sexual dimorphism also occurs in hermaphroditic fish. These species are known as sequential hermaphrodites. In fish, reproductive histories often include the sex-change from female to male where there is a strong connection between growth, the sex of an individual, and the mating system it operates within. Social organization plays a large role in the changing of sex by the fish. It is often seen that a fish will change its sex when there is a lack of dominant male within the social hierarchy. The females that change sex are often those who attain and preserve an initial size advantage early in life. In either case, females which change sex to males are larger and often prove to be a good example of dimorphism. In other cases with fish, males will go through noticeable changes in body size, and females will go through morphological changes that can only be seen inside of the body. For example, in sockeye salmon, males develop larger body size at maturity, including an increase in body depth, hump height, and snout length. However, selection for ornamentation within this species suggests that showy female traits can be selected through either female-female competition or male mate choice. The sexual dimorphism in amphibians and reptiles may be reflected in any of the following: Anole lizards show prominent size dimorphism with males typically being significantly larger than females. For instance, the average male Anolis sagrei was 1.5 times larger than females. Male coloration appears to reflect innate anti-oxidation capacity that protects against oxidative DNA damage. Sexual dimorphism in birds can be manifested in size or plumage differences between the sexes. Sexual size dimorphism varies among taxa with males typically being larger, though this is not always the case, e. Plumage polymorphisms have evolved to reflect these differences and other measures of reproductive fitness, such as body condition [61] or survival. Sexual dimorphism is a product of both genetics and environmental factors. An example of sexual polymorphism determined by environmental conditions exists in the red-backed fairywren. Red-backed fairywren males can be classified into three categories during breeding season: Migratory patterns and behaviors also influence sexual dimorphisms. This aspect also stems back to the size dimorphism in species. It has been shown that the larger males are better at coping with the difficulties of migration and thusly are more successful in reproducing when reaching the breeding destination. If these are the result for every migration and breeding season the expected results should be a shift towards a larger male population through sexual selection. Sexual selection is strong when the factor of environmental selection is also introduced. The environmental selection may support a smaller chick size if those chicks were born in an area that allowed them to grow to a larger size, even though under normal conditions they would not be able to reach this optimal size for migration. When the environment gives advantages and disadvantages of this sort, the strength of selection is weakened and the environmental forces are given greater morphological weight. The sexual dimorphism could also produce a change in timing of migration leading to differences in mating success within the bird population. This timing could even lead to a speciation phenomenon if the variation becomes strongly drastic and favorable towards two different outcomes. Sexual dimorphism is maintained by the counteracting pressures of natural selection and sexual selection. For example, sexual dimorphism in coloration increases the vulnerability of bird species to predation by European sparrowhawks in Denmark. Reproductive benefits arise in the form of a larger number of offspring, while natural selection imposes costs in the form of reduced survival. This means that even if the trait causes males to die earlier, the trait is still beneficial so long as males with the trait produce more offspring than males lacking the trait. This balance keeps the dimorphism alive in these species and ensures that the next generation of successful males will also display these traits that are attractive to the females. Such differences in form and reproductive roles often cause differences in behavior. As previously stated, males and females often have different roles in reproduction. For example, in the blue-footed booby, the female chicks grow faster than the males, resulting in booby parents producing the smaller sex, the males, during times of food shortage. This then results in the maximization of parental lifetime reproductive success. The males of these species will molt into a less bright or less exaggerated color during the off breeding season. However, sexual dimorphism is not only found in birds and is thus important to the conservation of many animals. Such differences in form and behavior can lead to sexual segregation, defined as sex differences in space and resource use. Hormones significantly affect human brain formation, and also brain development at puberty. A review in Nature Reviews Neuroscience observed that "because it is easier to manipulate hormone levels than the expression of sex chromosome genes, the effects of hormones have been studied much more extensively, and are much better understood, than the direct actions in the brain of sex chromosome genes. Pinnipeds are known for early differential growth and maternal investment since the only nutrients for newborn pups is the milk provided by the mother. The pattern of differential investment can be varied principally prenatally and post-natally. The large sexual size dimorphism is due to sexual selection, but also because females reach reproductive age much earlier than males. In addition the males do not provide parental care for the young and allocate more energy to growth.

Fish Ichthus , cross and crucifix Sponsored link. The history of the Christian fish symbol: The fish outline is a logical symbol for the early Christian church to adopt. Fish are often mentioned in the gospels. This is what one would expect, if Jesus did most of his teaching in the Galilee. The synoptic gospels state this, although the Gospel of John denies it. Fish were a staple in the diet of Galilee. Some gospel verses which mention fish are: Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the great fish, so will the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. Iota Chi Theta Upsilon Sigma. That is an acrostic which has many translations in English. Alternative meanings in order of decreasing popularity on the Internet are: Followers of Christianity were called Pisciculi; the root of this Latin word is "fish". The symbols of "sacramental fish, with wine and a basket of bread represents the Eucharist and the Last Supper in Christian art. If two strangers met and were unsure whether each other was a Christian, one would draw an arc in the earth like: If the other were a Christian, they would complete the symbol with a reverse arc: It is commonly seen in the form of a bumper sticker or casting mounted on the trunk lids of cars. This has inspired some Secularists, Atheists and promoters of the theory of evolution to mimic the Christian fish symbol with one of their own. This has prompted "fish wars" between supporters of the secular and religious symbols. Reference 3 contains a humorous expose of the battle between the Darwin and Christian fish. We were asked by a visitor to our web site whether the orientation of the fish symbol was important. He was about to have it inlaid into a very expensive instrument. We surfed a few dozen web sites on the Internet and found dozens of Ichthus symbols:

Chapter 4 : What does it mean to be "fishers of men"?

"For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them."

There are other interesting parallels. It suggests that our proclivity to make distinctions with our intellect obscures the unity of existence. Although this proclivity allows us to create "the world" but only in our imagination, it also makes us miserable in it. It also leads us to do some very stupid things. There are no conceptual distinctions in the Kingdom of God. There is only life. We must find our own way. The daily evidence of God in us can be seen around us. He does not sit in heaven or hell. And my personal favourite verse. Then you will know yourself. Knowing yourself entails overcoming your lower nature [cf nafs], one becomes impoverished of its contaminants so to say - Thief³⁷ "When you know yourself then you will be known" Here lies the link between Christianity and all religions of the world. Another point worth mentioning is that about "being known"; to truly know yourself will make you known to others as this is the most difficult spiritual task known to man, and other seekers will wish to know how you got there For further reading check what Buddha has to say on self knowledge, and even spiritualists such as Gurdjieff or Ouspenski. Anything outside of that realization has no value. The way to get there is to live a good life, not to travel. It also has implications about churches--why would one piece of land be considered holy when the Kingdom itself, the Holy of Holies, is inside us? In Buddhism the source is named nothing, which in it contains everything and the infinite. When we mutually acknowledge His presence, we take a step individually and as collectively toward peace, brotherhood, and equality. Has anyone returned with her from the clouds? Has anyone crossed the sea and discovered her? Has anyone purchased her with gold coin? If we believe in it, we shall live in it for ever. The Hidden Sayings of Jesus, p. Grant and David Noel Freedman write: In any event, it is not future, but present. It is used here to refer to the self as an entity that has descended from God - a central gnostic concept. They set up a hypothetical question of a woman who marries a man, who then dies childless. Following the practice commanded in Deut. The point of this complicated scenario is to ridicule the idea of the resurrection of the dead by asking whose wife the woman will be in the resurrection. As in Thomas 3, the syllogism is designed to provoke mockery of the position that is attacked, and it depends on the prior acceptance of what it is reasonable to say and of how logic should be used. Those who would attribute the form of Thomas 3 to Jesus reveal only their own uncritical attachment to a source that is fashionable in certain circles simply because it is not canonical. Gospel of Thomas Saying 3.

Stewart August No! I felt the importance to address this issue from a Biblical perspective, because many heresies have crept into our churches as a result of misinterpretations over Genesis 6: There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown. And GOD saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. I agree with the mighty Bible teacher, J. Vernon McGee on this matter, who states And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose [Gen. This matter of "the sons of God" and "the daughters of men" is something that has caused no end of discussion. There are a great many good men who take the position that "the sons of God" were angels. I personally cannot accept that at all. Most of my teachers taught that the sons of God were angels, and I recognize that a great many of the present-day expositors take that position. However, I cannot accept that view, because, if these were good angels, they would not commit this sin, and evil angels could never be designated as "sons of God. I do not know why it is assumed by so many that the offspring were giants. We will look at this more closely when we come to verse 4. And the Lord said, My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: We believe that Noah preached for years, and during that time the Spirit of God was striving with men. Peter makes it very clear that it was back in the days of Noah that the Spirit of God was striving with men in order that He might bring them to God—but they would not turn. By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison" 1 Pet. These spirits were in prison when Peter wrote, but they were preached to in the days of Noah. How do we know that? During the long-suffering of God in the days of Noah—during those years. There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown [Gen. It says, "There were giants in the earth in those days," but it does not say they are the offspring of the sons of God and the daughters of men. It does say this about the offspring: The record here makes it very clear that the giants were in the earth before this took place, and it simply means that these offspring were outstanding individuals Then what do we have here in verse 4? As I see it, Genesis is a book of genealogies—it is a book of the families. The sons of God are the godly line who have come down from Adam through Seth, and the daughters of men belong to the line of Cain. What you have here now is an intermingling and intermarriage of these two lines, until finally the entire line is totally corrupted well, not totally; there is one exception. That is the picture that is presented to us here. I recognize, and I want to insist upon it, that many fine expositors take the opposite view that the sons of God are actually angels. If you accept that view, you will be in good company, but I am sure that most of you want to be right and will want to go along with me. Regardless of which view you take, I hope all of us will be friends, because this is merely a matter of interpretation. It does not have anything to do with whether or not you believe the Bible but concerns only the interpretation of the facts of Scripture. Vernon, Thru the Bible with J. Thomas Nelson Publishers , c I agree with Dr. I cannot accept the popular view that fallen angels i. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: This Scripture passage plainly states that men are men, animals are animals, fish are fish, birds are birds, and angels are angels. There is not one Scriptural reference which would even remotely lead us to believe that angels and humans ever had sex. Jesus plainly stated in Mark Carefully notice that Genesis 6: Clearly there would be a serious contradiction in the Scriptures here IF the sons of God were angels. The idea that angels had sexual relations with earthly women is preposterous. As one can imagine, such speculation in the Scriptures provides ample opportunity for the heathen world to exploit the Scriptures. Countless books, movies, documentaries, and false religions have exploited such misinterpretations of Genesis 6: Without a doubt, the primary claim of the Book of Enoch is that fallen angels had sex with human women and produced feet tall giants upon the earth. This teaching is ridiculous, unscriptural, and has no solid evidence to support it Biblically or scientifically. This is another good reason why the Book of Enoch should continue to be rejected. DeHaan , angels did have sex with earthly women, then why has it not occurred since Genesis 6: The Scriptures are not silent on this matter, as we have read in Mark Of course, this is not a Scriptural teaching. Angels cannot marry, nor be given in marriage. Surely God would have been very angry with a group of angels that defiled his creation, bringing it to ruin. In addition, the entire suggestion that God allowed angels, which would have possessed FULL knowledge of divine realities, to tempt mankind is against the plainest teachings of the Scriptures. Carefully notice Genesis 6: Clearly, even from reading the Bible at a childlike level, it is obvious that the "giants" were not the same people as the "mighty men which were of old, men of renown. DeHaan, on pages , he states Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil? Judas is called devilâ€”not a devil. In the original it is: Diabolis is the devil and Satan. He does not say that Judas is a demon, but devil Judas then, will be the Antichrist. The spirit of the Antichrist when the Spirit of God, which now hindereth, will be taken away will enter once more into mankind and cause to be born another freak half man and half devil who will be the incarnation of the devil. I do not agree with Dr. DeHaan on this issue, although I have tremendous admiration for him as a Bible teacher, and certainly as a genuine man of God. I do not believe that Judas was a "freak half man and half devil. This is not possible, nor Scriptural. Neither will the Antichrist be without an earthly father. Jesus Christ is the only human being ever born, or that ever will be born, without an earthly father Isaiah 7: DeHaan attempts to use Revelation He states on page He is said to give life to the image of the beast Rev. The Beast will not give life to a human being, nor to a living organism; but rather, to a mere object made by men. I simply do not believe that this Scripture can rightfully be used to imply that the Devil can give human life. DeHaan is correct, then Satan will be allowed by God to create a human life. Satan will simply give "movement" to the image, but he will not be able to create actual life, which only Jesus Christ can do Acts Satan has been trying to imitate Christ in every way throughout history, but he has failed. Keep in mind that Jesus performed the works He did, as no other man ever did, to prove to mankind that He was God in the flesh But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They hated me without a cause" John Only Jesus can create life, and heal amputees. Only Jesus Christ can give real and genuine life John In contrast, the "life" which the Beast gives in Revelation The "life" which the Beast gives to the image built by men in Revelation Even now, Homeland Security in the U. Remember, the Bible states that men will build this image. Certainly this will be some sort of electronic micro-implant, which can be easily scanned, as part of a cashless society. As frightening as this all may sound, the technology is here, and the monsters controlling the world are drooling over it. There are many such men in the world today, with no conscience, no morals, no concern for the poor, no regard for God, no loyalty to anyone except them self. There are millions of men alive today who could easily be the Antichrist, for their hearts are already completely possessed of the Devil. After centuries of "hiding" which is what "occult" means , Satan is inspiring his followers to come out of hiding, evidenced by the plethora of occult symbols we see today everywhere we look. The Church is fast asleep, false prophets are everywhere, and apostasy has set in like rigor mortis.

Ai mai ka ia o ka ulua makele, He mele no Kualii, c. Engulfed from the lofty Kauiki. Its bait the red billed Alae, The bird made sacred to Hina. It sinks far down to Hawaii, Struggling and painfully dying. Caught is the land under the water, Floated up, up to the surface, But Hina hid a wing of the bird And broke the land under the water. Below, was the bait snatched away And eaten at once by the fishes, The Ulua of the deep muddy places. The great fish-hook of Maui, Manaiakalani, The whole earth was the fish-line bound by the knot, Kauiki bound to the mainland and towering high. The alae of Hina was the bait of the fish-hook let down to Hawaii. Tangled with the bait into a bitter death, Lifting up the very base of the island; Drawing it up to the surface of the sea. Hidden by Hina were the wings of the alae. But broken was the table of Laka. And the hook carried far down to Kea. The fish seized the bait the fat large ulua. The sky was too low and people were not able to stand upright. Thus, they saved mankind. He then traveled to the different islands and realised that they were all inhabitable. There were kapa houses but with no one living inside of them. Hina encountered the Long Eel Tuna at the bank, and Tuna struck her and covered her with slime. Then Maui buried Tuna, causing a palm tree to grow and creating the first coconuts. Abandoned by his human parents as a baby, the gods took pity on him and made him a demigod and gave him a magic fish hook that gives him the ability to shapeshift. He went on to perform miracles to win back the love of humanity, each of which earned him an animated tattoo. He is fabled to have stolen the heart of Te Fiti, a powerful island goddess who creates life. The protagonist of the film, Moana, persuades him to help her return it.

For man also knows not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falls suddenly on them.

Volume I [56] The depravity of mankind, which began to show itself in the time of Enosh, had increased monstrously in the time of his grandson Jared, by reason of the fallen angels. When the angels saw the beautiful, attractive daughters of men, they lusted after them, and spoke: Under the leadership of twenty captains they defiled themselves with the daughters of men, unto whom they taught charms, conjuring formulas, how to cut roots, and the efficacy of plants. The issue from these mixed marriages was a race of giants, three thousand ells tall, who consumed the possessions of men. When all had vanished, and they could obtain nothing more from them, the giants turned against men and devoured many of them, and the remnant of men began to trespass against the birds, beasts, reptiles, and fishes, eating their flesh and drinking their blood. Then the earth complained about the impious evil-doers. But the fallen angels continued to corrupt mankind. Azazel taught men how to make slaughtering knives, arms, shields, and coats of mail. He showed them metals and how to work them, and armlets and all sorts of trinkets, and the use of rouge for the eyes, and how to beautify the eyelids, and how to ornament themselves with the rarest and most precious jewels and all sorts of paints. The chief of the fallen angels, Shemhazai, instructed them in exorcisms and how to cut roots; Armaros taught them how to raise spells; Barakel, divination from the stars; Kawkabel, astrology; Ezekeel, augury from the clouds; Arakiel, the signs of the earth; Samsaweel, the signs of the sun; and Seriel, the signs of the moon. None among men knew his abode, or what had become of him, for he was sojourning with the angel watchers and holy ones. Once he heard the call addressed to him: Go and proclaim unto them that they shall find neither peace nor pardon. For every time they take joy in their offspring, they shall see the violent death of their sons, and sigh over the ruin of their children. They will pray and supplicate evermore, but never shall they attain to mercy or peace. They all were filled with fear. Trembling seized upon them, and they implored Enoch to set up a petition for them and read it to the Lord of heaven, for they could not speak with God as aforetime, nor even raise their eyes heavenward, for shame on account of their sins. Enoch granted their request, and in a vision he was vouchsafed the answer which he was to carry back to the angels. It appeared to Enoch that he was wafted into heaven upon clouds, and was set down before the throne of God. Verily, it is you who ought to plead in behalf of men, not men in behalf of you. Why did ye forsake the high, holy, and eternal heavens, to pollute yourselves with the daughters of men, taking wives unto yourselves, doing like the races of the earth, and begetting giant sons? Giants begotten by flesh and spirits will be called evil spirits on earth, and on the earth will be their dwelling-place. Evil spirits proceed from their bodies, because they are created from above, and from the holy watchers is their beginning and primal origin; they will be evil spirits on earth, and evil spirits they will be named. And the spirits of heaven have their dwelling in heaven, but the spirits of the earth, which were born upon the earth, have their dwelling on the earth. And the spirits of the giants will devour, oppress, destroy, attack, do battle, and cause destruction on the earth, and work affliction. They will take no kind of food, nor will they thirst, and they will be invisible. And these spirits will rise up against the children of men and against the women, because they have proceeded from them. Since the days of murder and destruction and the death of the giants, when the spirits went forth from the soul of their flesh, in order to destroy without incurring judgment--thus will they destroy until the day when the great consummation of the great world be consummated. And now as to the watchers who have sent thee to intercede for them, who had been aforetime in heaven, say to them: You have been in heaven, and though the hidden things had not yet been revealed to you, you know worthless mysteries, and in the hardness of your hearts you have recounted these to the women, and through these mysteries women and men work much evil on earth. Say to them therefore: You have no peace!

Ecclesiastes (ASV) For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare, even so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them.

Chapter 9 : Giants Nephilim and Anakim

The posts on here that state 'sons of God' in the OT means one thing and in the NT means another would be contradicting the term. We do see 'son of Man' in the OT ascribed to Elijah and 'son of man' in the NT ascribed to Jesus and that is because in the Humanity of Christ he was given that title.
