In one word, it is "power" by privilege or right in perpetuity over the lesser beings in human society. This concept of an arbitrarily "chosen people" is marked bold. It identifies the true authors of Nazi philosophy whom British Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli described as, "the hidden hand behind government". These people have two things in common. Carnality and human wisdom in place of the faith of Jesus, and the Babylonian religion, or learning. Perhaps the majority of these people are related to the serpent by blood, as well as by cunning. Computer genealogies of dynastic families uncover interesting links with other families in the past, disclosing hidden criminal interests that continue to represent the main source of income of these pillars of society to the present time. The opium trade and usury are two such examples. And looking at the natural, over ninety percent of those "who say they are Jews", are not. And certainly not by faith. True Israelites who are Hebrews call them Ashkenazim or Khazars. These people earned the title of "Black" Nobility from their ruthless lack of scruple. They employed murder, rape, kidnapping, assassination, robbery, and all manner of deceit on a grand scale, brooking no opposition to attaining their objectives. These all have immense wealth. And money is power. Their roots may be traced back to the Venetian oligarchs who are of Khazar extraction. They married into these royal houses in the early part of the twelfth century. Many of these royal families no longer have kingdoms, and not all Black Nobility are royal houses. Documentary proof as to the existence of the "Committee of " is not forthcoming, and it may be no more than a convenient phrase to describe certain key players. Socialist politician and financial adviser to the Rothschilds, Walter Rathenau, writing in the Wiener Press 24 December, said, "Only men, each of whom knows all others govern the fate of Europe. They select their successors from their own entourage. These men have the means in their hands of putting an end to the form of State which they find unreasonable. Whereas the English have a long history and are very aware of their ancestry, there are certain families of "blue-bloods" in the United States that have historic ties with the British through blood and money. These "noble" families are behind most if not all of the so-called pro-environmental movements that are actually intended to curb the population growth of ALL nations. Prince Philip and Prince Charles are the most visible symbols of this movement, and are a true part of this conspiracy to destroy industry and take the world back to a New Dark Age. Most if not all the crowned and uncrowned heads of these dynasties enjoy huge incomes from ground rents. All oppose nuclear power that can produce clean cheap electricity, the key to economic development and prosperity in the Third World. They ardently desire a return to the feudal system where they will once again be absolute rulers. While professing Christianity, the oligarchical families, for the greater part actually despise it in secret. Masonry provides their religious fulfillment. And without faith, they have no belief in reward or punishment and a world to come. They live for the here and now. Many of these oligarchies are in the drug and arms trade through well-distanced intermediaries like so many of the large banks. The Masonic-controlled Swiss banks owe their existence to these families. In the Jesuits and their Freemason allies among the crowned heads of Europe held the Congress of Vienna, whereby Swiss neutrality already sanctioned by the Peace of Westphalia in was forever guaranteed; and no matter how many wars are provoked in which the common man has to do the fighting, the money of the Nobility in Switzerland should always be free from plunder. Since Gregory XVI conferred a Papal decoration on Kalman Rothschild for loaning the Vatican five million pounds in a period of difficulty, the Rothschilds have been the fiscal agents of the Vatican. With Vatican interests at heart, the Rothschilds extended their financial and political dominion in the United States. As Senator Robert Owen pointed out to the US Senate in , the prime target to which the Vatican and the "Holy Alliance" directed the subversive and destructive activities of the Society of Jesus , in the United States, and other republics in the Western hemisphere. This plot, he claimed, was the target at which the Monroe Doctrine was directed. They were established under emergency powers granted to the President by the Constitution, as temporary institutions to tide the country through the periods of financial stress occasioned by the Revolutionary and Wars. But the aims of the conspirators to establish a banking monopoly were thwarted by the Constitution. And that Russia promised to see that all royal houses are restored to the rightful heirs if they decouple Europe from the American Alliance. Imperial nobility enjoy a more elevated status than the nobilities of the German successor states and, indeed, of the Italian states. The descendants of Italian Holy Roman Empire titles have formed an Association to which all male line descendants of someone ennobled by Imperial Patent is entitled to belong. And the Principality of Liechtenstein has also claimed the ability to confirm a succession to Imperial titles, and has confirmed the right of a Spanish noble man to heir such a title for purposes of the Spanish law requiring the successor state to confirm that the claimant to a particular title is in fact the heir. Thus there is a remaining jurisdiction, even though no Imperial titles have been conferred since It also includes a number of honorary members. This I have been unable to confirm but in general, this is what will happen. This was foretold in Daniel 7: They are the royal houses into which the old Roman Empire was divided after the fall of the last emperor Romulus Augustus, in AD Although their thrones will not be returned, their royal authority as kings will be recognized by Rome so long as she rules the NWO. She is controlling the last, or fourth empire. This Roman Church is doing that. Thus all the people have to belong to the world church system or be at the mercy of the elements for they cannot buy or sell without the mark of the beast in the hand or head" Church Ages, The Prince has veto power because his family, the Habsburgs, are descended directly from the last Roman emperor. Prince Bernhard is leader of the Black Families and he also claims descent from the House of David through the Merovingian dynasty, a claim that was acknowledged to be valid by the Carolingian dynasty that supplanted them, by other monarchs and by the Roman Church of that time. Thus he can truly say that he is "related to Jesus". The Habsburgs are related through marriage with the Merovingians, who are said to have descended from the Tribe of Benjamin who went into exile following war with the other eleven Tribes. Exile took them to Arcadia in the central Peloponnese, Greece. Here they aligned with the Arcadian royal line and towards the advent of the Christian era, migrated up the Danube and Rhine, through marriage engendering the Sicambrian Franks - the immediate forebears of the Merovingians, who were ultimately of Semitic or Israelite origin, and descendants of King Saul. They are identified with the Spartans, and both books of Maccabees link the Spartans with the Jews. I Maccabees 12 tells of Jonathan sending a letter to the Lacedemonians Spartan Greeks asking for their help, since they were brethren. The Spartans replied, "It is found in writing, that the Lacedemonians and Jews are brethren and that they are of the stock of Abraham" verse It is assumed by some writers that this means the Spartans were Israelites, but the Spartans were not Israelites they were Edomites descended from Bela son of Beor and brother of Baalim, and king of Edom Genesis Edom was the son of Isaac and grandson of Abraham who sold his birthright, and bred his posterity off the Book of Life. Early in the fifth century the Merovingians established themselves in what is now Belgium and northern France. There they adopted the Cabalistic pseudo-Christianity of the Cathars, a dualistic religion that holds there are two eternal gods, the god of Good and the god of Evil. It is revealing that this Luciferian belief is held by those who would be Masters of this world today, and who claim that Lucifer will ultimately be victorious. Through him, Rome began to establish undisputed supremacy in Western Europe. In return for being the sword of Rome whereby the church would manifest her power and impose a spiritual dominion, Clovis was granted the title of "New Constantine" and to preside over a unified "Holy Roman Empire" based on the church and administered on the secular level in perpetuity by the Merovingian bloodline. Like "the sure mercies of David", this was a pact that could be modified, but not revoked, broken or betrayed. They believe Jesus survived the cross and married Mary Magdalene who bore his son then lived in seclusion in the south of France. During the fifth century this lineage is said to have married with the royal line of the Franks engendering the Merovingian dynasty. When in the church pledged itself in perpetuity to the Merovingian bloodline it was presumably in full knowledge of their claimed identity. This would explain why Clovis was offered the status of Holy Roman Emperor, and why he was not created but only "crowned" king. In the church clandestinely betrayed its pact. The Priore de Sion is the name of the secret order which created the Knights Templars as its military and administrative arm. The Priore de Sion continues to function through the centuries, acting in the shadows, and has orchestrated certain critical events in Western history. It exists today and is still operative. Its declared objective is the restoration of the Merovingian dynasty and bloodline - to the throne not only of France, but of other European nations as well - a restoration that is sanctioned and justifiable, both legally and morally. There is strong evidence to suggest that this Jewish order was the author of Freemasonry, and "The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion", as well as the Rosicrucians. There is abundant evidence to suggest that Nostradamus was one of their secret agents, and there is no question that numerous quatrains which refer to the advent of "Le Grand Monarch" indicate that this sovereign will ultimately derive from the Merovingian dynasty. Implying a double hegemony of the Papacy and the Empire, of the Vatican and of the Habsburgs. He frequently referred quite explicitly to the Knights Templars and to the house of Lorraine which is now synonymous with the Habsburgs. Although deposed in the eighth century, the Merovingian bloodline did not become extinct. By dint of dynastic alliances and intermarriages, this line came to include Godfroi de Bouillon, who captured Jerusalem in 1099, and various other noble and royal families, past and present - Blanchefort, Gisors, Saint-Clair Sinclair in England, Montesquieu, Montpezat, Poher, Luisignan, Plantard and Habsburg-Lorraine. At present, the Merovingian bloodline enjoys a legitimate claim to its heritage. The crown of Charlemagne - a replica of which is now part of the imperial Habsburg regalia - is said to have borne the inscription "Rex Salomon" Encyclopaedia Britannica, 14th Ed. History and Culture I, The Priore de Sion claim to hold the lost treasure of the Temple of Jerusalem plundered by Titus in AD 70 which would be returned to Israel "when the time was right". This might explain why Rome must defer to the "kings of the earth" and how she will seal a covenant with the Jews who have long hidden behind the shield of baptism. Prince Bernhard is in fact related to the Khazars, and therefore a Gentile. Established in 1934, its headquarters is 1 Smidswater, Den Haag, Netherlands. At the heart of the Bilderberg Group are 39 members of the Illuminati chosen from three committees drawn from the members of all the secret groups that comprise the Illuminati:

1 review of Peter Ryan "I have been attending Dr Ryan for the past 3 years and find him very thorough and pleasant to deal with. He performed my surgery and explained every detail of it to me in a caring and no-nonsense way.

The treaty provided for a self-governing Irish state, having its own army and police. However, rather than creating the independent republic favoured by most nationalists,[citation needed] the Irish Free State would be an autonomous dominion of the British Empire with the British monarch as head of state , in the same manner as Canada and Australia. Furthermore, the partition of Ireland , which had already been decided by the Westminster parliament in the Government of Ireland Act , was effectively confirmed in the Anglo-Irish treaty. All these issues were the cause of a split in the IRA and ultimately civil war. Michael Collins , the republican leader who had led the Irish negotiating team, argued that the treaty gave "not the ultimate freedom that all nations aspire and develop, but the freedom to achieve freedom". However, anti-treaty militants in believed that the treaty would never deliver full Irish independence. Many of the leaders on both sides had been close friends and comrades during the War of Independence. This made their disagreement over the treaty all the more bitter. He said that he felt deeply betrayed when de Valera refused to stand by the agreement that the plenipotentiaries had negotiated with David Lloyd George and Winston Churchill. Most of the IRA units in Munster were against the treaty. Its authority under the Treaty was to provide a "provisional arrangement for the administration of Southern Ireland during the interval" before the establishment of the Irish Free State. In accordance with the Treaty, the British Government transferred "the powers and machinery requisite for the discharge of its duties". Before the British Government transferred such powers, the members of the Provisional Government each "signified in writing [their] acceptance of [the Treaty]". De Valera continued to promote a compromise whereby the new Irish Free State would be in " external association " with the British Commonwealth rather than be a member of it the inclusion of republics within the Commonwealth of Nations was not formally implemented until During the tour, de Valera made controversial speeches at Carrick on Suir , Lismore , Dungarvan and Waterford , saying at one point, "If the Treaty were accepted, the fight for freedom would still go on, and the Irish people, instead of fighting foreign soldiers, will have to fight the Irish soldiers of an Irish government set up by Irishmen. He also tried to reach a compromise with anti-treaty IRA leaders by agreeing to a republican-type constitution with no mention of the British monarchy for the new state. IRA leaders such as Liam Lynch were prepared to accept this compromise. However, the proposal for a republican constitution was vetoed by the British as being contrary to the terms of the treaty and they threatened military intervention in the Free State unless the treaty were fully implemented. A further , people voted for other parties, most of whom supported the Treaty. According to Hopkinson, "Irish labour and union leaders, while generally pro-Treaty, made little attempt to lead opinion during the Treaty conflict, casting themselves rather as attempted peacemakers. De Valera is quoted as saying, "the majority have no right to do wrong". In practice, this meant that by the summer of , the Provisional Government of Southern Ireland controlled only Dublin and some other areas like County Longford where the IRA units supported the treaty. Fighting ultimately broke out when the Provisional Government tried to assert its authority over well-armed and intransigent Anti-Treaty IRA units around the country â€” particularly a hardline group in Dublin. The building was occupied by anti-treaty forces during the Civil War, whom the National Army subsequently bombarded into surrender. The Irish national archives in the buildings were destroyed in the subsequent fire. The building was badly damaged but was fully restored after the war. However, for those who were determined to make the Free State into a viable, self-governing Irish state, this was an act of rebellion that would have to be put down by them rather than the British. Arthur Griffith was in favour of using force against these men immediately, but Michael Collins, who wanted at all costs to avoid civil war, left the Four Courts garrison alone until late June However, on the advice of General Nevil Macready , who commanded the British garrison in Dublin, the plan was cancelled at the last minute. This attack was not the opening shot of the war, as skirmishes had taken place between pro- and anti-treaty IRA factions throughout the country when the British were handing over the barracks. The anti-treaty forces in the Four Courts, who possessed only small arms, surrendered after three days of bombardment and the storming of the building by Provisional Government troops 28–30 June. Shortly before the surrender, a massive explosion destroyed the western wing of the complex, including the Irish Public Record Office PRO, injuring many advancing Free State soldiers and destroying the records. Government supporters alleged that the building had been deliberately mined. Among the dead was Republican leader Cathal Brugha, who made his last stand after exiting the Granville Hotel. In addition, the Free State took over Republican prisoners. The civilian casualties are estimated to have numbered well over 100. When the fighting in Dublin died down, the Free State government was left firmly in control of the Irish capital and the anti-treaty forces dispersed around the country, mainly to the south and west. Supporters of the treaty came to be known as "pro-treaty" or Free State Army, legally the National Army, and were often called "Staters" by their opponents. The latter called themselves Republicans and were also known as "anti-treaty" forces, or Irregulars, a term preferred by the Free State side. As well as rifles they had a handful of machine guns and many of their fighters were armed only with shotguns or handguns. They also took a handful of armoured cars from British troops as they were evacuating the country. Finally, they had no artillery of any kind. As a result, they were forced to adopt a defensive stance throughout the war. By contrast, the Free State government managed to expand its forces dramatically after the start of the war. Michael Collins and his commanders were able to build up an army that was able to overwhelm their opponents in the field. British supplies of artillery, aircraft, armoured cars, machine guns, small arms, and ammunition were of much help to pro-treaty forces. The British delivered for instance, over 27,000 rifles, machine guns and eight 18 pounder artillery pieces to the pro-Treaty forces between the outbreak of the Civil War and September. In the new National Army, they were known as the Dublin Guard. Many others were raw recruits without any military experience. Prout, and W. The Republicans made much use of this fact in their propaganda – claiming that the Free State was only a proxy force for Britain itself. However, in fact, the majority of Free State soldiers were raw recruits without military experience in either World War I or the Irish War of Independence. There were also a significant number of former members of the British Armed Forces on the Republican side including such senior figures as Tom Barry, David Robinson and Erskine Childers.

Irish Free State offensive With Dublin in pro-treaty hands, conflict spread throughout the country. The war started with the anti-treaty forces holding Cork, Limerick and Waterford as part of a self-styled Munster Republic. He hoped simply to hold the Munster Republic long enough to force Britain to re-negotiate the treaty. Cork and Fenit, the port of Tralee, in Co. Another seaborne expedition to Mayo in the west secured government control over that part of the country. While in some places the Republicans had put up determined resistance, nowhere were they able to defeat regular forces armed with artillery and armour. The only real conventional battle during the Free State offensive, the Battle of Killmallock, was fought when Free State troops advanced south from Limerick. Guerrilla phase of the Irish Civil War Government victories in the major towns inaugurated a period of guerrilla warfare. They held out in areas such as the western part of counties Cork and Kerry in the south, county Wexford in the east and counties Sligo and Mayo in the west. Sporadic fighting also took place around Dundalk, where Frank Aiken and the Fourth Northern Division of the Irish Republican Army were based, and Dublin, where small-scale but regular attacks were mounted on Free State troops. August and September saw widespread attacks on Free State forces in the territories that they had occupied in the July–August offensive, inflicting heavy casualties on them. Arthur Griffith, the Free State president, had also died of a brain haemorrhage ten days before, leaving the Free State government in the hands of W. For a brief period, with rising casualties among its troops and its two principal leaders dead, it looked as if the Free State might collapse. However, as winter set in, the republicans found it increasingly difficult to sustain their campaign, and casualty rates among National Army troops dropped rapidly. For instance, in County Sligo, 54 people died in the conflict, of whom all but eight had been killed by the end of September. Despite these successes for the National Army, it took eight more months of intermittent warfare before the war was brought to an end. By instituting martial law, the first democratically elected Free State had in effect suspended most, if not all civil rights of the Irish population for the duration of the conflict. The legislation, commonly referred to as the Public Safety Bill, empowered military tribunals with the ability to impose life imprisonment, as well as the death penalty, for a variety of offences. By allowing appointed courts martial to execute any Irish citizen found in possession of firearms or ammunition, the Free State prevented Republican sympathizers from storing any arms or ammunition that could be used by Republican forces; possession of even a single sporting or civilian firearm or round of ammunition could result in execution by firing squad. Offences included attacks on state policy or military forces, donning army or police uniforms, publication of "seditious publications", and membership in the Republican Army. The final phase of the Civil War degenerated into a series of atrocities that left a lasting legacy of bitterness in Irish politics. They were followed on 24 November by the execution of acclaimed author and treaty negotiator Erskine Childers. In all, the Free State sanctioned 77 official executions of anti-treaty prisoners during the Civil War. In addition, Free State troops, particularly in County Kerry, where the guerrilla campaign was most bitter, began the summary execution of captured anti-treaty fighters. The most notorious example of this occurred at Ballyseedy, where nine Republican prisoners were tied to a landmine, which was detonated, killing eight and only leaving one, Stephen Fuller, who was blown clear by the blast, to escape. The Catholic Church also supported the Free State, deeming it the lawful government of the country, denouncing the Anti-Treaty IRA and refusing to administer the Sacraments to anti-treaty fighters. On 10 October, the Catholic Bishops of Ireland issued a formal statement, describing the anti-treaty campaign as: All who in contravention of this teaching, participate in such crimes are guilty of grievous sins and may not be absolved in Confession nor admitted to the Holy Communion if they persist in such evil courses. Although the Catholic Church in independent Ireland has often been seen as a triumphalist Church, a recent study has found that it felt deeply insecure after these events. Tom Barry proposed a motion to end the war, but it was defeated by 6 votes to 5. It is often suggested that the death of Lynch allowed the more pragmatic Frank Aiken, who took over as IRA Chief of Staff, to call a halt to what seemed a futile struggle. On 24 May, Aiken followed this with an order to IRA volunteers to dump arms rather than surrender them or continue a fight that they were incapable of winning. Soldiers of the Republic. Legion of the Rearguard: The Republic can no longer be defended successfully by your arms. Further sacrifice of life would now be in vain and the continuance of the struggle in arms unwise in the national interest and prejudicial to the future of our cause. Military victory must be allowed to rest for the moment with those who have destroyed the Republic. Many of their candidates and supporters were still imprisoned before, during and after the election. In July, de Valera had recognised the Republican political interests lay with the prisoners and went so far as to say: The whole future of our cause and of the nation depends in my opinion upon the spirit of the prisoners in the camps and in the jails. A total of "stately homes" of the old landed class and Free State politicians were destroyed by Republicans during the war. In October, a deputation of Southern Unionists met W. Bagwell was kidnapped and held in the Dublin Mountains, but later released when reprisals were threatened. Many, but not all of these people, had supported the Crown forces during the War of Independence. This support was often largely moral, but sometimes it took the form of actively assisting the British in the conflict. Such attacks should have ended with the Truce of 11 July, but they continued after the truce and escalated during the Civil War.

On 25th February the Warsaw Pact votes to dissolve its military structure. The next day President Bush declares that the Gulf War is over. The war does not formally end until 11th April when the UN Security Council declares a permanent cease-fire. Mar On 3rd March Latvians and Estonians vote for independence. An amateur photographer films four white Los Angeles police officers beating a black motorist, Rodney King. Charges are brought against the officers on 15th March. On Thursday, 14th March the "Birmingham six" are released from prison in England, after their convictions for the Birmingham pub bombings are quashed by the Court of Appeal. Apr All military actions of the Warsaw Pact officially cease on 1st April. Steve Marriott, the former lead vocalist with the Small Faces and founder of Humble Pie, dies in a fire at his home on 20th April. On 29th April a Category 5 tropical cyclone hits Bangladesh. May Winnie Mandela is sentenced to six years in jail on Tuesday, 14th May for her part in the kidnap of four youths. Her sentence is later reduced to a fine. A year-old from Sheffield, Helen Sharman, joins two cosmonauts aboard the Soviet Soyuz TM space capsule to become the first Briton to travel in space. The year-long civil war in Angola is formally ended on 31st May. June David Ruffin of the Temptations dies of a drug overdose on 1st June. Berlin is once again to be the capital of Germany. On 20th June members of the Bundestag vote in favour of Berlin over Bonn by a majority of 17 votes. Sega releases a new computer game, Sonic the Hedgehog, on Sunday, 23rd June. Croatia and Slovenia declare independence on 25th June. Within 48 hours Yugoslav tanks and troops advance on both republics. On 28th June Margaret Thatcher announces that she is to give up her seat in the House of Commons at the next general election. Whitney Houston and Bobby Brown get married on 18th July. Italian tenor Luciano Pavarotti gives a concert in Hyde Park to celebrate 30 years in opera. Although the number of people attending is kept down by heavy rain, it is nonetheless the biggest outdoor music event in Hyde Park since the Rolling Stones performed there in Tanks roll into Moscow as it is announced on the radio that he has been relieved of his duties. However, thousands gather in protest and the coup collapses three days later. Gorbachev resigns as general secretary of the Communist Party and orders the Soviet Parliament to take over all Communist Party property. On 20th August Estonia proclaims its independence from the Soviet Union. US film director Frank Capra dies on 3rd September, aged Oliver North escapes prosecution for supplying arms to Nicaraguan guerrillas when the charges against him are dropped on 16th September. The Republic of Armenia officially declares its independence on 21st September. On 24th September, after more than two years in captivity, Jackie Mann is released by his kidnappers in Beirut. Jazz legend Miles Davis dies of pneumonia and a stroke on 28th September. During the following months thousands of Haitians flee from their homeland aboard small boats. Israel and the Soviet Union restore diplomatic relations on 18th October. The dead body of the millionaire newspaper publisher, Robert Maxwell, is found in the sea off the coast of Tenerife on Thursday, 5th November. The Prime Minister, John Major, calls him a "great character". The satirical magazine Private Eye comments: He lies everywhere else. He arrives at RAF Lyneham the next day. Freddie Mercury, the lead singer of Queen, dies from pneumonia, aged 45, at his home in London on Sunday, 24th November, a day after announcing publicly that he had AIDS. On 27th November the British and US governments demand that Libya hands over two of its intelligence agents who are implicated in the Lockerbie air disaster. Dec The journalist Terry Anderson is freed on Wednesday, 4th December, six years after being kidnapped by an Islamic militant group in Beirut.

Ryan Holiday on Gawker: "These Are Nasty People" The writer talks about his new book, "Conspiracy," an in-depth look at the Hulk Hogan lawsuit that brought down the gossip website.

The top position was lost around , but a leading position has been retained throughout the troubled twentieth century and reinforced during the current mining boom. To explain why, Ian McLean blends economic analysis, historical narrative and counterfactual imagination in ways that, if not unique, are unusual enough to be noteworthy. The economics is unimpeachable, and McLean warns the reader when he is considering possible competing explanations. Unimpeachable economic analysis is tested with strict reference to fact, often as assembled by other economists or historians. Reasonable people sceptical about the value of economic theory in guiding economic development should revise their scepticism after reading this important book. McLean also illustrates how economic theory can be tested rigorously against the facts of historical experience. Bravo, Professor McLean, you have produced a wonderful book, a book that should be enormously helpful to future leaders of this lucky country as well as to students of economics or history. The richest countries over the past years include Australia, the United States and Britain throughout; and the Netherlands, Canada, New Zealand and Switzerland for much, but not all, of this period. Luck played a part, because of extensive resource endowments relative to a small population. Success in overcoming an initial handicap of distance from major trading partners and sources of new technologies must be recognised. The benefits of cultural and institutional legacies of the British settlers, themselves with deep historical roots in British history, were important. This study is not concerned, asserts McLean, with short-term influences such as variations in saving rates, business and consumer sentiment, the rate of immigration and the expected profitability of new investments. The decision to promote immigration immediately after the Second World War is clearly important, as is the dramatic drop in the household saving rate following the inflation and other disturbances of the early s and its partial recovery that began just before the onset of the global financial crisis in . After all, the long run is just a succession of short runs. A chart on page 19 shows variations in growth of GDP per capita in various periods from the decade of when it recorded a rate of 3 per cent. From to GDP per capita grew at just under 1. From to it was less than 1 per cent. From to it fell to almost zero. Then from to it was up again to 2. From to it was around 1. In other terms, in Australian history per capita growth starts high, falls almost to zero, then recovers to be above all previous decades except the first golden age of the s. Another indicator of success or failure of economies is inequality of wealth or income. McLean is well aware that GDP per capita, or growth of real wages and other economic measures, does not tell the whole story of national success. So let us begin: Why were the first European settlements in Australia so successful? The settlers from Europe found a continent whose resources, apart from the thinly populated if rather arid land, were not immediately obvious. Crucially, the Aboriginal inhabitants had not engaged in resource exploitation, except for harvesting in a sustainable way the flora and fauna and carrying out land management using regular burning, the value of which is not yet fully appreciatedâ€”although this is not a point made by McLean. He also does not speculate about whether the cultural norms of the Aboriginal inhabitants helped the new settlers by some sporadic opposition excepted failing to oppose their arrival. He does, however, point out that Aboriginal Australians provided input to an unknown extent in a wide range of tasks and occupationsâ€”as trackers for the police, guides for the early explorers, domestic workers, shepherds and stockmen. Now the often reviled mining industry is providing serious job opportunities for Aborigines, documented most clearly by Marcia Langton in the Boyer Lectures. Ian McLean also discusses convicts in a more positive way than in most previous history or economic analysis. England did not settle Australia to create a thriving economyâ€”and in my opinion most Englishmen are still puzzled at the outcome of sending their best criminals to the other side of the world. Some , convicts were transported between and , with free settlers only becoming significant in the s. The convicts were overwhelmingly young and fitâ€”just the people to clear land, construct key infrastructure and produce food. McLean points out that the convicts were not slaves, and also from early days the colony had a developing free market initially run by the officers of the Rum Corps.

Convicts had numerous legal rights and, when their daily tasks were completed exceptionally hard cases apart, they were free to pursue other activities. In addition, some convicts were assigned to work for free settlers. The evidence suggests that tasks were assigned roughly in accord with the skills of convicts albeit self-declared, while still in England, and that some convicts had professional training; a few even had university degrees. The convict-based workforce was in many ways well suited to the task of creating a thriving colony on a distant shore. And the decision-making and management structures within the company overseeing the construction project would likely bear more than a passing resemblance to those of the governor and officers in the first years of New South Wales. Once the colony was established, self-sufficient in food, there was another vital requirement—“an export capacity sufficient to pay for imports of goods not able to be produced locally. The answer was the discovery that merino sheep could be farmed profitably in New South Wales for their wool, a commodity in strong demand to feed the high demand of the booming English woollen mills. Successful economic growth also required a suitable institutional setting. The initial suitability of the military structure has been mentioned but, as seen many times in later history, this ultimately involved a blurring of roles and widespread opportunities for corruption. The use of rum, McLean says, may have been exaggerated. Spanish dollars, over stamped coins of various sources and other foreign currencies circulated. Ramshackle improvisation however worked well enough, until in the establishment of the Bank of New South Wales marked a fresh milestone of economic development. Then, in 1825, imperial currency reform led to the creation of an Australian pound alongside domestic acceptance of British currency as legal tender. Also crucial was the development of Australian political life. Here a vital point was that Britain had learned from the adverse outcome of its harsh treatment of its American colonies. An entire chapter is devoted to this matter, including the handling of the crucial matter of dealing with the squatters. Failure to deal with this matter probably would have produced a highly unequal society of the sort that bedevilled development on other places, notably the banana and drug republics of South America. This was the continuing subsidy from the British government, which permitted the settlement not just to survive its uncertain first years, but financed the investment in infrastructure and pioneer agriculture that would permit growth in the population and the attainment of a degree of self-sufficiency. Reliable estimation of the amounts involved is impossible. Members of the military engaged in commercial ventures. Many placeholders were not salaried officials, though having their income augmented in various ways. Convicts were assigned to work for wages below market rates. Land was owned by the Crown, but access was not always by purchase or paying rent. There are many further barriers to any attempt at accounting. That great Australian quantifier Noel Butlin nevertheless made an heroic attempt, and suggests initially the British contribution to Australian GDP was as high as 75 per cent, declining perhaps to a bit less than 50 per cent by 1850, and more important than wool until around 1850. Other quantifiers have broadly confirmed the view that British subsidisation was substantial and helped Australia to reach British levels of GDP per capita before the gold discoveries of the 1850s. The wool industry was clearly a key reason for Australian self-sufficiency. Wool was the largest export for every decade from the 1790s to the 1840s, with the exception of the 1820s and 1830s, when gold was the winner. There were 75,000 sheep in 1790 and 16 million in 1850. Dividing wool exported by population for New South Wales shows wool rising from six pounds to 16 pounds weight in 1790. And in 1850, Australian wool provided 53 per cent of total British imports. Once it was discovered around 1800 that the central west of New South Wales was a large natural grassland on which stock could be grazed, Australia became a place that could be described as short of labour and capital but with abundant land. This constituted a major addition to the natural resource endowment of the colony, like deposits of valuable gold, iron ore or natural gas. Abundant land would be expected to drive up the relative price of capital and labour. Free land and economies of scale were very important aspects of the new model. But, even better, sheep could be allowed to wander free with little supervision, therefore little need for the scarce items of capital or labour. Wool was in most years sufficiently valuable that it could absorb the costs of cartage to a port by horse and dray and a long sea voyage. And labour was sufficiently costly that wool was generally not even washed. The lack of value-adding, McLean notes, is typical of later exports like iron ore or natural gas. Innovation was required to set up marketing and financing businesses, and the result was the development of independent stock-and-station agents. The development of an embryonic democracy was delayed until there were sufficient free settlers, but British experience in America including problems in Canada made the Colonial Office prepared to move at a reasonable pace. Chapter 4 covers the subject of land ownership and the debate on transportation in some detail, and is full of interest. The towns saw the growth of brick-making, brewing, baking, boat building as well as banking, wholesale and retail trade and other industries needed in a developing country. Like wool production, gold was so valuable that the alluvial gold that was first exploited could be produced without sophisticated technology or much capital. A first effect was to attract a rush of mainly young men—like the convicts, ideal demographic material—almost tripling the non-indigenous population in the decade from 1820 to 1830. As he points out, this is a perspective that colours appropriately in my view his approach to the other shocks afflicting or benefiting Australia—the major examples of which include the depression and drought, the two world wars and the depression of the 1930s, as well as the resource boom we are still experiencing. Two perhaps obvious facts about the gold shocks are examined more closely than usual by McLean—the fact that the shock was positive, and that most of those people attracted by the gold stayed to build a nation, something that does not always happen when a rich resource is discovered in a sparsely populated place. Indeed, economists more often describe a major resource discovery as a curse than as a blessing. This potential negative effect weighed on the minds of the colonial administrators, and the people who first discovered gold had a struggle to convince the authorities of the reality of their discovery or to be rewarded. The fact that the gold technically belonged to the Crown was an initial impediment to wealth creation, but was solved after an early mining tax in the form of a steep licence fee caused quite a lot of unhappiness, especially in Victoria which at the time had an inflexible former sailor as its lieutenant-governor. He notes that there were virtually no effective border controls, so people arrived freely from the four corners of the globe. Economic activity in general was almost totally unregulated, with few barriers to starting a business or hiring and firing labour. This all happened without any national government with great armies of econocrats, tax collectors and other people trained to prevent, or severely slow down, those people ambitious to create wealth. There is much food for thought in this observation. And the gold finds had a major democratising effect, with massive numbers of individual miners or small groups mining tiny areas. This was a major contrast to a tiny number of Tory squatters bestriding vast grazing lands. It is important, McLean says, to consider the sustainment of prosperity after the decade of rushes. Australia produced around 3 million fine ounces of gold per annum in the 1830s. The finds in Western Australia in the 1840s returned production to 3 million fine ounces. Californian production was initially also 3 million ounces, but declined far more rapidly than in Australia. Both ratios are greater than those being achieved in the current mining boom. The initial gold boom in the 1830s did not turn into a bust, as often happens, partly because only small numbers of the early diggers departed: These actions included subsidisation of young, single female immigrants, incentives to encourage young men to marry and settle, opening new rural land for settlement and, in Victoria, introduction of tariffs to encourage colonial manufacturing. Victoria also entered the London capital market in 1851, to fund public works or infrastructure spending—especially railways and urban utilities.

Chapter 7 : Merovingian Bloodline and The Black Nobility

Join us for an evening with Ireland's first resident Ambassador to New Zealand, Peter Ryan. Hear about Ambassador Ryan's experience representing Ireland in Asia and the US, and how he sees the Ireland-New Zealand relationship strengthening.

In one word, it is "power" by privilege or right in perpetuity over the lesser beings in human society. This concept of an arbitrarily "chosen people" is marked bold. It identifies the true authors of Nazi philosophy whom British Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli described as, "the hidden hand behind government". From Babel it goes back to the original sin and the fall in the garden of Eden. These people have two things in common. Carnality and human wisdom in place of the faith of Jesus Christ, and the Babylonian religion, or learning. Perhaps the majority of these people are related to the serpent by blood, as well as by cunning. Computer genealogies of dynastic families uncover interesting links with other families in the past, disclosing hidden criminal interests that continue to represent the main source of income of these pillars of society to the present time. The opium trade and usury are two such examples. Brother Branham explained how in the Spiritual, Jesus was speaking of those who claimed to be in the election: Christians circumcised in heart and ear and full of the Spirit, when in fact they were impersonators of Christianity. Paul said in Romans 9: Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all heirs of the Promise: And certainly not by faith. True Israelites who are Hebrews call them Ashkenazim or Khazars. How are you going to defend yourself? The enemy is anything off the Word. Or "smelling salts" in order to stay awake. These people earned the title of "Black" Nobility from their ruthless lack of scruple. They employed murder, rape, kidnapping, assassination, robbery, and all manner of deceit on a grand scale, brooking no opposition to attaining their objectives. These all have immense wealth. And money is power. Their roots may be traced back to the Venetian oligarchs who are of Khazar extraction. They married into these royal houses in the early part of the twelfth century. Many of these royal families no longer have kingdoms, and not all Black Nobility are royal houses. Documentary proof as to the existence of the "Committee of " is not forthcoming, and it may be no more than a convenient phrase to describe certain key players. Socialist politician and financial adviser to the Rothschilds, Walter Rathenau, writing in the Wiener Press 24 December, said, "Only men, each of whom knows all others govern the fate of Europe. They select their successors from their own entourage. These men have the means in their hands of putting an end to the form of State which they find unreasonable. Whereas the English have a long history and are very aware of their ancestry, there are certain families of "blue-bloods" in the United States that have historic ties with the British through blood and money. These "noble" families are behind most if not all of the so-called pro-environmental movements that are actually intended to curb the population growth of ALL nations. Prince Philip and Prince Charles are the most visible symbols of this movement, and are a true part of this conspiracy to destroy industry and take the world back to a New Dark Age. Most if not all the crowned and uncrowned heads of these dynasties enjoy huge incomes from ground rents. All oppose nuclear power that can produce clean cheap electricity, the key to economic development and prosperity in the Third World. They ardently desire a return to the feudal system where they will once again be absolute rulers. While professing Christianity, the oligarchical families, for the greater part actually despise it in secret. Masonry provides their religious fulfillment. And without faith, they have no belief in reward or punishment and a world to come. They live for the here and now. Many of these oligarchies are in the drug and arms trade through well-distanced intermediaries like so many of the large banks. The Masonic-controlled Swiss banks owe their existence to these families. In the Jesuits and their Freemason allies among the crowned heads of Europe held the Congress of Vienna, whereby Swiss neutrality already sanctioned by the Peace of Westphalia in was forever guaranteed; and no matter how many wars are provoked in which the common man has to do the fighting, the money of the Nobility in Switzerland should always be free from plunder. Since Gregory XVI conferred a Papal decoration on Kalman Rothschild for loaning the Vatican five million pounds in a period of difficulty, the Rothschilds have been the fiscal agents of the Vatican. With Vatican interests at heart, the Rothschilds extended their financial and political dominion in the United States. As Senator Robert Owen pointed out to the US Senate in , the prime target to which the Vatican and the "Holy Alliance" directed the subversive and destructive activities of the Society of Jesus, in the United States, and other republics in the Western hemisphere. This plot, he claimed, was the target at which the Monroe Doctrine was directed. They were established under emergency powers granted to the President by the Constitution, as temporary institutions to tide the country through the periods of financial stress occasioned by the Revolutionary and Wars. But the aims of the conspirators to establish a banking monopoly were thwarted by the Constitution. And that Russia promised to see that all royal houses are restored to the rightful heirs if they decouple Europe from the American Alliance. Can you see this in the Bible? Imperial nobility enjoy a more elevated status than the nobilities of the German successor states and, indeed, of the Italian states. The descendants of Italian Holy Roman Empire titles have formed an Association to which all male line descendants of someone ennobled by Imperial Patent is entitled to belong. And the Principality of Liechtenstein has also claimed the ability to confirm a succession to Imperial titles, and has confirmed the right of a Spanish noble man to heir such a title for purposes of the Spanish law requiring the successor state to confirm that the claimant to a particular title is in fact the heir. Thus there is a remaining jurisdiction, even though no Imperial titles have been conferred since It also includes a number of honorary members. This I have been unable to confirm but in general, this is what will happen. This was foretold in Daniel 7: They are the royal houses into which the old Roman Empire was divided after the fall of the last emperor Romulus Augustus, in AD Although their thrones will not be returned, their royal authority as kings will be recognized by Rome so long as she rules the NWO. She is controlling the last, or fourth empire. This Roman Church is doing that. Thus all the people have to belong to the world church system or be at the mercy of the elements for they cannot buy or sell without the mark of the beast in the hand or head" Church Ages, The Prince has veto power because his family, the Habsburgs, are descended directly from the last Roman emperor. Prince Bernhard is leader of the Black Families and he also claims descent from the House of David through the Merovingian dynasty, a claim that was acknowledged to be valid by the Carolingian dynasty that supplanted them, by other monarchs and by the Roman Church of that time. Thus he can truly say that he is "related to Jesus". The Habsburgs are related through marriage with the Merovingians, who are said to have descended from the Tribe of Benjamin who went into exile following war with the other eleven Tribes - see Judges chapter Exile took them to Arcadia in the central Peloponnese, Greece. Here they aligned with the Arcadian royal line and towards the advent of the Christian era, migrated up the Danube and Rhine, through marriage engendering the Sicambrian Franks - the immediate forebears of the Merovingians, who were ultimately of Semitic or Israelite origin, and descendants of King Saul. They are identified with the Spartans, and both books of Maccabees link the Spartans with the Jews. I Maccabees 12 tells of Jonathan sending a letter to the Lacedemonians Spartan Greeks asking for their help, since they were brethren. The Spartans replied, "It is found in writing, that the Lacedemonians and Jews are brethren and that they are of the stock of Abraham" verse It is assumed by some writers that this means the Spartans were Israelites, but the Spartans were not Israelites they were Edomites descended from Bela son of Beor and brother of Baalim, and king of Edom Genesis Edom was the son of Isaac and grandson of Abraham who sold his birthright, and bred his posterity off the Book of Life. Early in the fifth century the Merovingians established themselves in what is now Belgium and northern France. There they adopted the Cabalistic pseudo-Christianity of the Cathars, a dualistic religion that holds there are two eternal gods, the god of Good and the god of Evil. It is revealing that this Luciferian belief is held by those who would be Masters of this world today, and who claim that Lucifer will ultimately be victorious. Through him, Rome began to establish undisputed supremacy in Western Europe. In return for being the sword of Rome whereby the church would manifest her power and impose a spiritual dominion, Clovis was granted the title of "New Constantine" and to preside over a unified "Holy Roman Empire" based on the church and administered on the secular level in perpetuity by the Merovingian bloodline. Like "the sure mercies of David", this was a pact that could be modified, but not revoked, broken or betrayed. They believe Jesus survived the cross and married Mary Magdalene who bore his son then lived in seclusion in the south of France. During the fifth century this lineage is said to have married with the royal line of the Franks engendering the Merovingian dynasty. When in the church pledged itself in perpetuity to the Merovingian bloodline it was presumably in full knowledge of their claimed identity. This would explain why Clovis was offered the status of Holy Roman Emperor, and why he was not created but only "crowned" king. In the church clandestinely betrayed its pact. The Prieure de Sion is the name of the secret order which created the Knights Templars as its military and administrative arm. It should be remembered that the Knights Templars were the forerunners of Freemasonry. The Prieure de Sion continues to function through the centuries, acting in the shadows, and has orchestrated certain critical events in Western history. It exists today and is still operative. Its declared objective is the restoration of the Merovingian dynasty and bloodline - to the throne not only of France, but of other European nations as well - a restoration that is sanctioned and justifiable, both legally and morally. There is strong evidence to suggest that this Jewish order was the author of Freemasonry, and "The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Sion", as well as the Rosicrucians. There is abundant evidence to suggest that Nostradamus was one of their secret agents, and there is no question that numerous quatrains which refer to the advent of "Le Grand Monarch" indicate that this sovereign will ultimately derive from the Merovingian dynasty. Implying a double hegemony of the Papacy and the Empire, of the Vatican and of the Habsburgs. He frequently referred quite explicitly to the Knights Templars and to the house of Lorraine which is now synonymous with the Habsburgs. Although deposed in the eighth century, the Merovingian bloodline did not become extinct. By dint of dynastic alliances and intermarriages, this line came to include Godfroi de Bouillon, who captured Jerusalem in , and various other noble and royal families, past and present - Blanchefort, Gisors, Saint-Clair Sinclair in England , Montesquieu, Montpezat, Poher, Luisignan, Plantard and Habsburg-Lorraine. At present, the Merovingian bloodline enjoys a legitimate claim to its heritage. The crown of Charlemagne - a replica of which is now part of the imperial Habsburg regalia - is said to have borne the inscription "Rex Salomon" Encyclopaedia Britannica, 14th Ed. History and Culture I, The Prieure de Sion claim to hold the lost treasure of the Temple of Jerusalem plundered by Titus in AD 70 which would be returned to Israel "when the time was right".

They enlisted a few musical friends and named their rock act This Beautiful Mess—a phrase which first attained cult prominence a year earlier when Sixpence None the Richer released its award-winning second album, This Beautiful Mess. Senior year ended, and Tedder and Filkins parted ways, each attending different colleges. Reformation[edit] Reuniting in Los Angeles in , Tedder and Filkins re-formed their second band under the moniker Republic. Tedder, by then an established songwriter and record producer, had convinced Filkins who was living in Chicago to relocate. Nine months later, the band signed with Columbia Records. After a few lineup changes, the group finally settled with Tedder on vocals, Filkins on lead guitar and backing vocals, Eddie Fisher on drums, Brent Kutzle on bass and cello, and Drew Brown on guitar. Two months before the album was due to be released, with "Sleep" as its debut single , OneRepublic was dropped by Columbia Records. The band was beginning to gain prominence on MySpace ; Tedder said it was the number-one unsigned act on MySpace, and credits the website for keeping the band together. The band soon signed onto the label, becoming the first rock band to do so. Allmusic gave the album a modest review, stating the "album sounds derivative" but also "sounds cohesive and smoothly pleasant". This along with the strong backing of the Timbaland name made it a major hit both in the United States and internationally. It peaked a number one globally, including eight consecutive weeks on the Billboard Pop chart, subsequently reaching the top three of the Billboard Hot It also spent thirteen weeks at number one in Canada. It has since been certified over 2x Platinum in 6 countries worldwide, including 4x Platinum in Australia. The song ultimately earned the band their first Grammy nomination for best pop performance in a group or duo. The second single from the album, " Stop and Stare ", released in March , reached the top ten in eight countries worldwide, including charting at number four in the United Kingdom, and topping the UK Rock Chart. It also reached number twelve on the Billboard Hot , and number nine on the Pop It has sold almost 4 million copies in the US as of August Furthermore, it reached number 21 on the Hot Released on November 19, , it became their second top ten single on the Billboard Hot at the time, peaking at number 8 and selling over 4 million copies in the US alone, earning a 4x Platinum certification. Rolling Stone put the song on its list of the best 15 whistling songs of all time. Waking Up was later certified Gold in Austria, Germany, and the US for sales of over ,, and has since sold over 1 million copies worldwide. It was also their best opening sales week since their debut album Dreaming Out Loud which sold 75, copies in its first week. The song was used in an official trailer for The Spectacular Now. The song has since peaked at number 1 in 5 countries worldwide and has gone 5x platinum in Australia, 2x Platinum in New Zealand, Platinum in the UK, Gold in Switzerland and Germany, as well as currently holding a 3x Platinum certification in the US. On October 29, , the video for "Counting Stars" became the first video, by a band to reach 1 billion views on YouTube. As of November , the music video has over 2.
