

Chapter 1 : Ocean Gallery. World Center! Boardwalk & 2nd St. It's Astounding!

Portrait of Sylvester Stallone by Samerry on Stars Portraits, the biggest online gallery for celebrity portraits. Famous and Infamous Marylanders by Maryland.

Said Joyce Dennison, 71, a retired Baltimore schoolteacher: There was a great feeling of humanity. Reverend Martin Luther King Jr. The march and rally provided the setting for the Dr. The event that culminated with Martin Luther King Jr. Image distributed by Getty Publications Rev. Sands attended the March on Washington fifty years ago. Dennison, of Baltimore, attended the March on Washington on Aug 28, Collins stood just behind Dr. King and to the right and has been featured in countless photographs from that day. Sands, then 29, stood a few hundred feet from the Lincoln Memorial and looked out over the National Mall in wonder. People were flooding in by the thousands, gathering by the Reflecting Pool like members of an extended family assembling for a picnic. A quarter of a million people – including 15, Marylanders, by one estimate – turned out to take a stand on behalf of racial justice on what would become a landmark day in American history, one that ended with a speech for the ages. At the time, many observers feared it would end in violence, others thought it would have no effect, and no one knew how it would turn out. To many on the Mall and to the millions who watched it on TV, the meaning of the March on Washington only became clear as the day unfolded or in the following weeks. Many felt its power on the spot, others as the months and years went by. Some who missed it swore to rededicate themselves to the movement. Marylanders who remember it hope its lessons might yet inform our discussions of race, politics and equal rights. In February , she was one of hundreds of college students jailed for protesting a policy that barred blacks from the Northwood Shopping Center near the Morgan State campus. The action helped force the owners to integrate. Joyce Dennison, 71 But nothing could have prepared her for the experience of Aug. The day began when Dennison, like thousands across the region, boarded a chartered bus. The atmosphere on the bus was jubilant, she says, as strangers, black and white, sang folk and gospel songs. And the roads were packed. Martin Luther King Jr. She found herself hoping no sniper would take aim at King. But across that distance, as the amplified sound wafted in and out, two life-giving phrases came through loud and clear: But he still got to hear King speak from 20 feet away. As the day of the march approached, David Apter volunteered his services to organizers. But at work, his bosses declined to give him time off. Marc Apter recalls being impressed by the diversity and serenity of the crowd. He was positively wowed when he got to stand next to Joan Baez. As the day went on, he saw history. March leaders vetted every speech before it was given that day. Only dimly sensing its importance, he lugged it up the steps, handed it to an aide, and was about to return to the tent when King began speaking. He stood a bit behind King and to one side until the speech was over. Over the next few days, as pundits aired their views, the speech began to strike him as historic. Years later, a PR man himself, he ran press operations for the 20th and 30th anniversary marches, which drew more than , people combined. Union of a broader base Larry Gibson would never have skipped the rally. At 21, he was already a player on the local civil rights scene. But he was so immersed in the movement that he missed the main event. A native of Baltimore, he was the recently elected student body president at Howard University. He was also chairman of a coalition of students lobbying Congress to get the Civil Rights Act enacted. His goal that day was to march. As the day began at the Mall, he says, he was amazed to see so many nonblacks – 30 percent to 40 percent, he guessed. And as he joined the throng quietly moving from the Washington Monument to the Memorial, he was surprised to find himself among marchers in military-style folded paper hats. They were members of the United Auto Workers, a group he never imagined seeing. That gave a stronger sense of hope. To his long-lasting regret, he left. Over time, it was singled out as a game-changer. But it changed them both. Roemer, 75, the longtime executive director of the Maryland chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, figured the day would be a merely symbolic exercise. As Roemer, who is white, looked on at his home in Parkton, the multiracial crowd swelled to massive proportions, coalescing into a statement for the ages. He was ashamed to have no good answer. The next day, he went to the North Avenue headquarters of the Congress on Racial Equality and signed up. Within two months, he was chapter president. Over the next five years, he helped overturn race-tinged state public-accommodations laws and helped bring a national health care workers union to Baltimore. In that role, he was asked to serve as a marshal for the March on Washington. His job was to usher diplomats and make sure marchers got any special help they needed. As the hours passed, he thought of the problems many marchers must have faced in their own communities just to get to this point. At some point in the afternoon, everything seemed so harmonious that he left his post to watch the speeches. No one seemed to mind. He was no more than yards away when King took center stage. He, too, had heard the minister speak before, often with plenty of theatrics. What he noticed this time was that King used a more serene tone. A quarter of a million people seemed to be listening intently. As King wove Scripture and history with pleas for repurposed unity, his oration stood out as the best of the 12 that day, Sands says, in large part because it encapsulated them all: To Sands, America has come a long way in 50 years, but it still has a ways to travel. As the minister recalls, they all hugged back. My goodness, what a blessing.

Chapter 2 : About Us | National Portrait Gallery

This year, the Sun Magazine asked several prominent Marylanders to pause -- for a phone call or an email -- and reveal what they planned to bestow upon those dearest to them.

About Us About Us Experience portraiture beyond the frame. Our collections present people of remarkable character and achievement. These Americansâ€™ artists, politicians, scientists, inventors, activists, and performersâ€™ form our national identity. They help us understand who we are and remind us of what we can aspire to be. Get to know us at the National Portrait Gallery. We look forward to sharing the faces and stories of inspiring Americans with you. Our Collection The National Portrait Gallery was authorized and founded by Congress in with the mission to acquire and display portraits of "men and women who have made significant contributions to the history, development, and culture of the people of the United States. Through the visual arts, performing arts, and new media, the Portrait Gallery presents poets and presidents, visionaries and villains, actors and activists whose lives form our national identity. A generous gift from the Donald W. Reynolds Foundation allowed the "Lansdowne" painting to be purchased as a gift to the nation. Over the years the collections, which were initially restricted to paintings, prints, drawings, and engravings, have grown to over 23, items in all media, from daguerreotypes to digital. In the late s, the Portrait Gallery began commissioning portraits of presidents, beginning with George H. In , the Portrait Gallery hosted the first Outwin Boochever Portrait Competition, now a prestigious triennial event, which also brings commissioned works into the collection. The winner was Bo Gehring, whose close-up video and sound portrait of jazz musician Esperanza Spalding draws delight and praise from visitors. Smith, philanthropist, media executive and visionary Chairman of the Donald W. Reynolds Foundation, on April 29, Smith, that the iconic portrait of George Washington, known as the Lansdowne Portrait by Gilbert Stuart, was acquired for the nation. The Lansdowne was taken on a multi-state tour while the historic building that is home to both the National Portrait Gallery and Smithsonian American Art Museum, was closed for renovation. A further gift to support the renovation project resulted in the endowment of the Donald W. Reynolds Center for American Art and Portraiture, encompassing the two museums and their programs.

Chapter 3 : Fifty years later, Marylanders recall the March on Washington

See pictures of Maryland celebrities. Filmmaker John Waters was born in Baltimore on April 22, He is known for using Baltimore as the backdrop for his films.

If you are an aspiring photographer and want to learn from the best, take a look at these top photographers who have achieved a lot within a short span of time. Some of these best photographers maybe known to you and some have a great reputation in the history of photography. Patience and hard work - sitting still in wilderness to get the perfect shot, goes a long way into making professional photographers. Jimmy Nelson - Famous Photographer Jimmy Nelson is a famous photographer from UK and he has been taking amazing photography since He visits tribal people and takes photos of them in their natural habitat, which is really amazing, since the emotions are beautifully captured in his photos. His part 1 series has won him several international awards and he is currently working on the part two series. Tribal by famous photographer jimmy nelson 2. Rehahn - Famous Photographer Rehahn is a french photographer currently settled in Vietnam. He is quite popular for his photographs of India, Vietnam and Cuba. He published hs first book - Vietnam, Mosaic of Contrasts in which has more than photographs of Vietnam which focuses specifically on the large diverse culture. According to his biography, "By capturing images of these exceptionally contrasting cultures, and collecting their traditional costumes and precious artifacts, he has built up the Precious Heritage Collection, which is now the core of the eponymous Gallery Museum". He is also known as a photographer who captures the souls of his models. Green girl by famous photographer rehahn Elba cuba by famous photographer rehahn Hidden smile by famous photographer rehahn 3. Lee Jeffries - Famous Photographer Lee Jeffries is from Manchester, UK and he enjoys travelling around the world to capture black and white portraits of homeless people. His passion for homeless portrait photography started when he participated in a marathon in London. He happened to come across a young woman huddled in a sleeping bag and his conception of homeless people changed drastically. According to Lee Jeffries, the emotions of homeless people seem to ooze out which can tell stunning stories. Ever since he has been photographing homeless people as his subjects and collects funds through his photos to help make the lives of homeless people a better place. Hats off to this photographer, who has humility and nobility in his work. Homeless by famous photographer lee jeffries Homeless by famous photographer lee jeffries Homeless by famous photographer lee jeffries 4. He work is quite popular in more than 70 countries. His photos have featured in top magazines like National Geographic, Life and so on. Ballerina by famous photographer joe mcnally Music woman by famous photographer joe mcnally Woods by famous photographer joe mcnally 5. He was given a camera as present at the age of 12 and since then his exploration with photography has taken him many places. He pursued his education in photography at the Academy of Art University for 4 years. He was under some of the best tutors and mentors and developed his own sense of photography, which has definitely made his career. He is the proud receipt of numerous awards and his photos have featured in some of the top fashion magazines, news magazines and so on. He has worked with international clients like Absolut, Pfizer, Toyota, Hyatt and many others. Expedition by famous photographer erik almas Russian dolls by famous photographer erik almas Famous by famous photographer erik almas Walk by famous photographer erik almas 6. His work has been featured in magazines such as Vogue and Vanity Fair. Today he is best known for his highly polished, exotically bright ad campaigns and his exquisitely styled photographs of the couture scene all of which carry a deceptive air of nonchalance. Now at the top of his profession, Testino has shot Madonna for Versace as well as photographing the late Diana, Princess of Wales for her famous Vanity Fair cover in His popularity with designers and fashion editors stems as much from his professionalism and good nature as his unerring ability to take beautiful pictures which sell clothes. Steve McCurry born February 24, is an American photojournalist best known for his photograph, "Afghan Girl" that originally appeared in National Geographic magazine. He originally planned to study cinematography and filmmaking, but ended up getting a degree in theater arts and graduating in He became interested in photography when he started taking pictures for the Penn State newspaper The Daily Collegian. It was here that McCurry learned to watch and wait on life. As a photographer, director, cinematographer, and avid surfer, he is a jack of all trades, working with global clients on everything but the kitchen sink – from still life, to film, to fashion. The photos remind us of how the simplicity of objects can become in their own way, beautiful masterpieces.

DOWNLOAD PDF GALLERY OF FAMOUS MARYLANDERS.

Chapter 4 : List of museums in Maryland - Wikipedia

Famous Marylanders Research Links. Maryland Women's Hall of Fame. calendrierdelascience.com

Chapter 5 : Los Angeles Galleries and Los Angeles Gallery Guide

The Amazing Ocean Gallery - World Center on Ocean City, Maryland's boardwalk is an incredible original work of art itself! Fine Art as entertainment a philosophy that works for the time we live in.

Chapter 6 : Mosaic Artists Gallery - Mosaic Art Supply

Ocean Gallery-World Famous, Ocean City, Maryland. 1 like 9 were here. Art Gallery.

Chapter 7 : Fine Art and Custom Framing for Home and Business

Updated on December 27, National Gallery of Art. The National Gallery of Art's neoclassical West Building is home to one of the world's best collections of paintings, sculpture, and more, dating from the 13th to the 20th century.

Chapter 8 : Diamond ES - Famous Marylanders

Raise A Glass And Enjoy The Maryland Wine Festival This Weekend Sample wines, enjoy a wide spread of assorted food, and jam to live music this Saturday, October 13, at the Maryland Wine Festival.

Chapter 9 : Famous Redheads – CBS Baltimore

This list of museums in Maryland encompasses museums, defined for this context as institutions (including nonprofit organizations, government entities, and private businesses) that collect and care for objects of cultural, artistic, scientific, or historical interest and make their collections or related exhibits available for public viewing.