Family activities can be held anywhere, including your living room, den, and even your kitchen! In terms of indoor activities that the whole family can enjoy, the list is really, truly, never ending. This super popular game has actually won awards Party Game of the Year in by Games Magazine , and is a real blast to play with family members of even friends. The way to play the game is for each player to try and win the most rounds by playing their Red Apple cards, each of which has a noun. Can you believe that this classic card game that has been entertaining families in their living rooms was only invented in ? Uno is a thoroughly entertaining family activity game which is great for all ages. Parents and kids alike will have fun playing it. Fun Board Games for the Family: This is classic family board game which can be a time consuming but really fun activity for kids, siblings, parents, and grandparents! If you are a super competitive family, then you probably want to win when you play. On that notion, we found a really awesome resource on how to win a Monopoly game, with some great advice here. This game is more for families with older siblings, who have a bit more knowledge about the world and can answer random trivia questions. Assuming you have a teenager in your home, then Trivial Pursuit is an entertaining and educational family activity that everyone can enjoy. Trivial Pursuit is an immensely popular board game, with over million copies sold and appearing in over 26 countries in 17 different languages! That is because people often assume all planting and gardening if for the outdoors. That is certainly not the case, and there are definitely a bunch of fun planting activities that you can do with the whole family. The great thing about Venus Fly Traps is that they can indeed be grown indoors. However, it is important that you place the plant by a window, ideally one that is opened on a regular basis. The open window can be anywhere in the room, but the sunlight must hit the plant. The fun part is obviously feeding the plant. If your kid has patience, he may get to witness the Venus Flytrap capture a bug such as a fly or ant. But, it is definitely a fun thing to watch if you feed your Venus Flytrap various goodies, including tiny pieces of chicken or fruit. Check out this amazing slow motion video capture of a Venus Fly Trap catching a fly: This would essentially be a competition between family members, on whose plant can grow the fastest. It would make sense that the only way to stoke interest from all family members would be a bit of friendly competition. Essentially, each family member would get their own identical seeds, dirt, and pot. After that, each is on their own! It is up to each person in charge of their respective plants to water it correctly, give it the right amount of sunlight, and perhaps be creative with other plant-growing creative ideas playing Mozart near the plant comes to mind. You can also measure other aspects such as first seeds to sprout, and differences in leaf structure, color, or quality. Looking for some more ideas for indoor plant ideas and activities? Here is a great list! Gym Activities for the Family: Gyms are perfect for rainy days and bad weather. Whether you need an outlet for your kids to run around, or an intramural pickup basketball league, there is something to do. Now, if you are able to rent out a part of the gym for your family to play, then the sky is the limit on various gym-related fun family activities, and here are our favorites: This game involves the classic dodgeball rules, but instead of going off to the side after getting hit by a ball, the player just sits in the spot that they were hit. These sitting players can then tag anyone who runs by them, forcing them to sit as well. This is a basic race, probably best between just two family members. Why, you might ask? The basic premise is to have 2 people, ideally siblings, each take a bat or a ball and hold it above their head, look at the bottom of it, and then spin around ten times. THEN these 2 dizzy siblings will race eachother to the finish line! And yes, hilarity will ensue. Have a few kids spinning with hula hoops. They are only allowed to hula hoop until the count to Then they can be tagged by anyone, and then they are IT. Of course, anyone who is using the hula hoop is invisible from getting frozen by anyone else. Daytime Activities for Families There is certainly plenty of overlap between daytime and outdoor fun family activities. However, we came up with a list of a few activities for kids which are absolutely exclusive to the daytime, involving places which you probably only want to go during the day anyhow: For example, place a sandal somewhere about 30 feet away, and place a towel in the opposite direction 25 feet away. Toss the Frisbee and try to nail the target! And if you have a family dog, he can totally participate! This is a classic daytime beach activity, and the reason is because kids love it! However, kite flying is also educational, as kids will be able to learn and understand how the kite can soar depending on the wind direction. Tug of War Sandpit: This is a great one but requires some effort. Before you start tugging the rope, dig a pit in the middle. Then place the rope over the pit and have the opposing captains stand across from the pit, facing each other, and holding the rope. Let the tug of war begin! Obviously the team that loses will fall into the sandpit. Playgrounds offer a plethora of daytime activities for families to have some fun! Depending on the playground, there are different options available. Red light green light activity: The first person to get close enough and tag the traffic light is the winner! This is an interesting one and more enjoyable for an older family. It is a basic game of freeze tag, but in this case the person that unfreezes the frozen player must call out a TV show title each time. The catch of the game is that every TV show can only be used once! This requires a parent to bring along some elastic rope, and is a classic game that kids can play for hours and burn off some calories as well! Rather than explain it, we figured we would show you this fun to watch and easy to understand video: Looking for more fun kids activities during the day at your local playground? Have no fear, Pinterest has a huge list! We mentioned it above, and biking is a great family activity. Often, most playgrounds and parks have wide swaths of pavement where you and your family can easily bike for hours. This can be indoor or outdoors, but rollerblading can ostensibly be done on any bike path. Skating is less of a journey-activity like biking is, and is more for fun bursts in your local playground. Whether your local park has a skate park, or just a blacktop for freestyling, skating can be fun with a few family members involved. Looking for more daytime beach activities for your kids? Night Activities for Family Though most of our indoor fun family activities with kids listed above can be done at night, we were able to cobble together a few family night ideas that are specific to night time that the family and kids and teenagers will love! However, the night time presents a unique experience where a family can gaze out onto the stars together in wonderment. Additionally, it allows parents to teach their kids a thing or two, by pointing out notable stars such as: Here are more resources for learning about the midnight sky and its brightest stars. There is definitely something to watching a movie as a family bonding night time activity rather than during the day. Although this can be done during the day, there is a definitely an enjoyable and soothing effect of baking before and during bedtime hours. Going to sleep at night with the fresh aroma of a warm cake that was just baked really is an underrated experience, and is what qualifies baking as a fun night time activity for the family. You can get everyone involved as well: If you have a backyard, then why not pitch a tent and go camping! Pull out the sleeping bags, maybe even light a small bonfire but be careful! The best part is, if your kids get scared you can always go right back inside and into bed! Sure, this kind of defeats the purpose of camping. But, if your kids are younger and still afraid of sleeping outdoors, then why not try a trial run with indoor camping. You can pitch tents, put everyone in sleeping bags, and even roast marshmallows! Talk about a fun indoor nighttime activity for the family! This is also conducive for a family that has a baby at home, allowing the parents to be within earshot. Depending on where you live, this can be a fun activity. If your family lives anywhere mountainous, or even in certain suburbs, you can definitely hear sounds nature. Often times, we take the natural sounds of nature for granted, but if you listen closely you can hear tons of interesting sounds! We bet you never thought this could be a fun family activity! If you put your ear to the outdoors, especially at nighttime when things are more quiet, you can probably hear crickets, cicadas, tree frogs, hummingbirds more likely during the day , bats, and croaking lizards. Glow in the Dark: Well, what if you brightened it up a bit?

Chapter 2 : Fun Family Reunion Games For All Ages

These games are designed to bring generations together-from preteens to seniors, these one hundred games really are fun for all ages! This book includes four types of games: high-action games, low-key games, get-to-know-you games, and games with a point.

Families can have their own picnics, or several families can get together for a larger picnic event. Picnics are often more enjoyable with large groups because there are more people to participate in games and activities. Choose picnic games that are suited to the ages of the people attending the picnic to avoid injuries. Video of the Day Tag Variations Tag is a fun game that children and adults of all ages can play. The people who are it try to gather the clothespins and flags from the other players. You can also have a free-for-all game where anyone can collect pins or flags. The person with the most pins at the end of the game wins. Bowling Make a bowling lane from chalk on a smooth concrete area. Set up 10 bowling pins made from large plastic soda bottles. Add a little water or sand to the bottles to hold them in place until the ball knocks them over. Use a soccer ball to knock down the pins. Each person gets two tries to knock down all 10 pins, just like in real bowling. Have someone keep score. Play five or 10 rounds, just like in real bowling. Players score one point for each pin knocked down. Add 10 points to the score if the person knocks them down the first time, and five if they knock them all down on the second try. Red Rover Red Rover is a classic picnic game that is idea for large groups and large grassy areas. Divide the players into two teams. Make sure people of the same height are placed across from each other for safety reasons. One player from each team takes turns calling someone from the opposite team to come over and try to break through the line. If they do break through, they bring one person from the broken line to their side of the game. Play continues until there are two people left on one team or until players get bored. Frisbee Playing with a Frisbee is another classic picnic game for players of all ages. Players can toss the Frisbee back and forth with no particular goal, or you can set rules similar to the rules of volleyball. If a team fails to catch the Frisbee, then the other team gets a point. Set up defined boundaries to avoid unnecessary conflict. You can also have contests to see who can throw the Frisbee the farthest.

Chapter 3 : 25 Awesome Outdoor Party Games for Kids

A sneaky game that you can play over the course of an entire party. Everyone has some stickers " the challenge is to stick them on people without their noticing. Get stealthy and use up all of.

Grapevine This game is intended for a large group, kids and adults 15 or more. The more the better. The group sit in a large circle. The kids should be spaced about arms length apart. The way we did it was to hold hands in a circle and gradually spread out until our arms were stretched. Now everyone takes a seat. The "originator", usually the one who organized the game, or the bossiest, starts a message. The originator whispers a short message into the ear of the person sitting to the right of them. The message is whispered once. The new messenger then whispers the message into the ear to the one to their right, and so on and so on. When the message reaches the person sitting to the left of the originator the message is announced out loud. Seldom does the message arrive in its original form. The person to the right gets to be the next originator.

Kick the Can You get an old coffee can or other tin can and put it in the middle of a safe place because this is base, where at any given moment several people will be running toward it. One person is it. The rest of the crowd must go and hide. The object of the game is for the "it" person to SEE you, not necessarily tag you. Now the crowd is not aloud to stay in one spot But, if the "it" person tags the free-er before they reach the can then they are captured too. The object of the game is to see or tag everyone without a free-er letting all the prisoners go. If someone kicks the can, the "it" person must count to while everyone scatters and hides again. The first one captured is then "it". Picking who is "it" Picking who is it is a very serious part of any game. Rhymes are used to pick who would be it by making fists and turning them sideways. Each fist is hit once you would say the word and hit the fist at the same time. One word for each fist. At the end the person whose fist was hit last is out. You can also put feet in the circle and use them instead of fists Some of the rhymes were:
