Mo Yan recreates the historical sweep and earthy exuberance of his much acclaimed novel Red Sorghum. The protagonist, Mother, is born in and married at seventeen into the Shangguan family. She has nine children, only one of whom is a boyâ€”the narrator of the book. A spoiled and ineffectual child, he stands in stark contrast to his eight strong and forceful female siblings. Mother, a survivor, is the quintessential strong woman who risks her life to save several of her children and grandchildren. The writing is picturesque, bawdy, shocking, and imaginative. The structure draws on the essentials of classical Chinese formalism and injects them with extraordinarily raw and surprising prose. Each of the seven chapters represents a different time period, from the end of the Qing dynasty up through the Japanese invasion in the s, the civil war, the Cultural Revolution, and the post-Mao years. By moving back and forth in time and focusing on small events and everyday people, Yan breathes life into history by describing the effects of larger-than-life events on the average citizen. Grove Press, , In David Der-wei Wang, ed. In Jeanne Tai, tr. Random House, , Explosions and Other Stories. Chinese Literature Spring In her youth, Guguâ€”the beautiful daughter of a famous doctor and staunch Communistâ€”is revered for her skill as a midwife. She decides to prove her allegiance by strictly enforcing the one-child policy, keeping tabs on the number of children in the village, and performing abortions on women as many as eight months pregnant. In sharply personal prose, Mo Yan depicts a world of desperate families, illegal surrogates, forced abortions, and the guilt of those who must enforce the policy. The farmers of Paradise County have been leading a hardscrabble life unchanged for generations. The Communist government has encouraged them to plant garlic, but selling the crop is not as simple as they believed. Warehouses fill up, taxes skyrocket, and government officials maltreat even those who have traveled for days to sell their harvest. A surplus on the garlic market ensues, and the farmers must watch in horror as their crops wither and rot in the fields. Families are destroyed by the random imprisonment of young and old for supposed crimes against the state. The prisoners languish in horrifying conditions in their cells, with only their strength of character and thoughts of their loved ones to save them from madness. Meanwhile, a blind minstrel incites the masses to take the law into their own hands, and a riot of apocalyptic proportions follows with savage and unforgettable consequences. The Garlic Ballads is a powerful vision of life under the heel of an inflexible and uncaring government. It is also a delicate story of love between man and woman, father and child, friend and friendâ€”and the struggle to maintain that love despite overwhelming obstacles. Ren Zhong and Yuzhi Yang. In Hometowns and Childhood. Long River Press, , Manoa 18, 1 Whereabouts Press, , Pow!. In this bizarre romp through the Chinese countryside, the author treats us to a cornucopia of cooked animal fleshâ€”ostrich, camel, donkey, dog, as well as the more common varieties. As his dual narratives merge and feather into one another, each informing and illuminating the other, Yan probes the character and lifestyle of modern China. Hei-hai, a skinny, sorry, silent boy. Assigned to pump the bellows at the worksite forge, Hei-hai proves indifferent to pain or suffering, but eerily sensitive to the beauties of the natural world. One day, he finds all that he has been seeking embodied in the most mundane and fragile of objects: In this hypnotic epic novel, Mo Yan, the most critically acclaimed Chinese writer of this generation, takes us on a journey to a conjured province of contemporary China known as the Republic of Wine—a corrupt and hallucinatory world filled with superstitions, gargantuan appetites, and surrealistic events. His mission begins at the Mount Lou Coal Mine, where he encounters the prime suspect—Deputy Head Diamond Jin, legendary for his capacity to hold his liquor. When he finally wakes up from his stupor, he has still found no answers to his rapidly mounting questions. Worse yet, he soon finds that his trusty gun is missing. Wild, bawdy, politically explosive, and subversive, The Republic of Wine is both mesmerizing and exhilarating, proving that no repressive regime can stifle true creative imagination. Chinese Literature Today 2, 1 University of Oklahoma Press, Against a broad historical canvas, the novel centers on the interplay between its female protagonist, Sun Meiniang, and the three paternal figures in her life. One of these men is her biological father, Sun Bing, an opera virtuoso and a leader of the Boxer Rebellion. Filled with the sensual imagery and lacerating expressions for which Mo Yan is so celebrated, Sandalwood Death brilliantly exhibits a range of artistic styles, from stylized arias and poetry to the antiquated idiom of late Imperial China to contemporary prose. Its starkly beautiful language is here masterfully rendered into English by renowned translator Howard Goldblatt. *The Nobel Foundation, Chinese Literature Winter Chinese Literature Today Summer Song Xiaoping and Richard Ellis. Here is the list Nicky created. But here is my chance to remedy that situation and to share some of my enthusiasm for Chinese literature with you. Where on earth to start? Given the quantity of books that are available, my choice has to be a personal one and I make no apology for that. So here goes in no particular order: Family secrets are revealed, long-time sibling rivalries re-ignite with renewed vigour. She is a member of the Evenki people; an animistic, reindeer-herding, hunter tribe who live in the mountain forests of north-east China. The narrator comes from a long lineage of clan chieftains and, through her recollections, we follow the decline of the Evenki. Little Aunt Crane, by YAN Geling, translated by Esther Tyldesley Vintage Tatsuuro, a Japanese orphan, is bought by a Chinese peasant and his wife, for whom she bears two children, while all the time the couple conceal her existence from the authorities. Set in China in , A Hero Born tells of an empire close to collapse. Under attack from the Jurchen Jin dynasty, the future of the entire Chinese population rests in the hands of a few lone martial arts exponents. The first in a twelve-volume series to be translated, A Hero Born has a fictional plot, with a real historical background. Nothing daunted, he decides to fight for the life he wants. A Memoir of Love and Life in China, by RAO Pingru, translated by Nicky Harman Square Peg Begun by the author when he was eighty-seven years old and mourning the loss of his wife Meitang, Our Story is a graphic memoir telling the story of a marriage, illustrated with vibrant, original paintings. Considered so sensitive, with its graphic depictions of sex and corruption, that it was instantly banned on publication in the s, and has only recently been unbanned. In the title story, beautiful young Jiazhi spends her days playing mahjong and drinking tea with high society ladies. But s Shanghai is occupied by invading Japanese forces and things are not what they seem. Yet as she waits for him to arrive at their liaison, Jiazhi begins to wonder if she is cut out to be a femme fatale and coldly take Mr Yi to his death. Or is she beginning to fall in love with him? But when the Great Famine strikes, the intellectuals are abandoned by the regime and left on their own to survive. Bronze and Sunflower, by CAO Wenxuan, translated by Helen Wang Walker Books When Sunflower, a young city girl, moves to the countryside, she grows to love the reed marsh lands â€” the endlessly flowing river and the sky that stretches on and on in its vastness. However, the days are long, and the little girl is lonely. Then she meets Bronze, who, unable to speak, is ostracized by the other village boys. Soon the pair are inseparable. Will Sunflower be able to stay in this place where she has finally found happiness? A lovely read for young people and those still young at heart alike. In simple language and with an eye for detail, she describes their simple physical existence and their complex interior lives. Her descriptions are often realistic, affectionate and vivid yet somehow they remain evocative and haunting. Creating poetry out of the ordinary and the mundane, her stories are at once both stark and deeply poetic. Love in a Small Town. Glennie and John R. Columbia University Press, Infatuated with the glitz and glamour of s Hollywood, Wang Qiyao seeks fame in the Miss Shanghai beauty pageant, and this fleeting moment of stardom becomes the pinnacle of her life. During the next four decades, Wang Qiyao indulges in the decadent pleasures of pre-liberation Shanghai, secretly playing mahjong during the antirightist Movement and exchanging lovers on the eve of the Cultural Revolution. From the violent persecution of communism to the liberalism and openness of the age of reform, this sorrowful tale of old China versus new, of perseverance in the face of adversity, is a timeless tale of our never-ending quest for transformation and beauty.
