Herla , Erlking , and Alichino devil Although the origins of the Harlequin are obscure there are several theories for how the character came to be. One theory posits that the name is derived from a bird with polychromatic feathers called a Harle [4] Another theory suggest that the name Harlequin is taken from that of a mischievous "devil" or "demon" character in popular French passion plays. It originates with an Old French term herlequin, hellequin, first attested in the 11th century, by the chronicler Orderic Vitalis , who recounts a story of a monk who was pursued by a troop of demons when wandering on the coast of Normandy France at night. Zan Ganassa , whose troupe is first mentioned in Mantua in the late s, is one of the earliest known actors suggested to have performed the part, [3] although there is "little hard evidence to support [it]. He was very successful, even playing at court and becoming a favourite of Henry IV of France , to whom he addressed insolent monologues Compositions de Rhetorique de Mr. Characteristics and dramatic function[edit] Physicality[edit] The primary aspect of Arlecchino was his physical agility. The character would never perform a simple action when the addition of a cartwheel , somersault, or flip would spice up the movement. He is therefore always on the go, very agile and more acrobatic than any of the other Masks – Oreglia, Giacomo [4] Early characteristics of Arlecchino paint the character as a second zanni servant from northern Italy with the paradoxical attributes of a dimwitted fool and an intelligent trickster. Appearing humpbacked without artificial padding The ability to eat large amounts of food quickly Using his wooden sword like a fan A parody of bel canto and several other techniques. Originally speaking in a Bergamo dialect, the character adopted a mixture of French and Italian dialects when the character became more of fixture in France so as to help the performers to connect to the common masses. He is typically cast as the servant of an innamorato or vecchio much to the detriment of the plans of his master. Arlecchino often had a love interest in the person of Columbina , or in older plays any of the Soubrette roles, and his lust for her was only superseded by his desire for food and fear of his master. Occasionally, Arlecchino would pursue the innamorata, though rarely with success, as in the Recueil Fossard of the 16th century where he is shown trying to woo Donna Lucia for himself by masquerading as a foreign nobleman. He also is known to try to win any given lady for himself if he chances upon anyone else trying to woo her, by interrupting or ridiculing the new competitor. His sexual appetite is essentially immediate, and can be applied to any passing woman. Name is said to mean "Tatterdemalion. In 18th century France , Trivelino was a distinct character from Harlequin. Popular characters with Gozzi and Goldoni, but said to be best when used for improvisations. By the 18th century was a Bergamask caricature. In the seventeenth century, a variety of anonymous engravings show Guazzetto rollicking, similar to Arlechino. He also dons a neckerchief dropped over the shoulders like a small cape. His bat is shaped like a scimitar-esque sword. Character dating to the 15th century.

The Hampstead Football Club was founded in 1874 and the first recorded game took place in 1875. A disagreement between Club Secretary William Titchener and William Alford in 1875 resulted in Alford leaving with half of the membership to form the club now known as Wasps. Since 1875, they have only played at three. In those early days, only one or two internationals were played there during the season, and before long Twickenham became the headquarters of the Harlequin Football Club. The tour is notable for two facts, it was the first time that three sister clubs of the Harlequin family all played each other in a coordinated series of matches and at 19 days it was the longest overseas tour undertaken by a British club up to that time. Despite this, the tour pales to insignificance when it is realised the Pretoria club spent four weeks in East Africa playing eight matches and another in Rhodesia on the way home. The London club arrived at Entebbe airport at dawn on 4 May and opened their tour with a 44–13 win against Uganda in Kampala on 6 May. The next two matches were played at the same location, beating the host club 16–0 the next day and earning a 9-all tie against Kenya Central Province on Wednesday 17 May. This last match was played under a typical "long-rains" shower that, though heavy, did not soften the hard ground enough to be a problem. This subsequently become their home: This is named after Adrian Dura Stoop, who won 15 caps for England and is said[by whom? The club has won the Rugby Football Union clubs knockout competition on two occasions: In addition, they played in the finals of 1974 and 1975. Harlequins hold the world record for providing the most players from one club 8 in a Rugby World Cup final. They are also affiliated with an amateur team, Harlequin Amateurs. Harlequins became the first British team to win the European Shield in 1974, defeating Narbonne 42–33 in the final. They then became the first team to win the tournament twice, defeating Montferrand 27–26 in the final of the renamed Parker Pen Challenge Cup on 22 May 1975. Harlequins celebrating a try during the 2006 season. In 2006 they were relegated to National Division One after finishing at the bottom of the Zurich Premiership. In July of that year they announced that they would be establishing a partnership with rugby league club London Broncos, which saw the two clubs sharing Harlequins home ground of The Stoop from the start of the Super League season. As part of the deal, the Broncos changed their name to Harlequins RL, though the two clubs remain under separate ownership. In 2006, Quins utterly dominated National Division One. They won 25 of their 26 league matches, including their first 19, losing only at Exeter Chiefs on 25 February. Quins also averaged nearly 40 points per match, scored four or more tries in 20 matches, and racked up an average victory margin of slightly over 25 points. They secured their return to the Premiership on 1 April with four matches to spare, crushing Sedgley Park 65–8 while the only team with a mathematical chance of pipping them for the title, Bedford Blues, lost 26–23 at Exeter. Harlequins in a huddle during the 2009 season. Harlequins got off to a shaky start which saw them be in 2nd, 3rd 4th place consecutively, and during the latter half of the season Harlequins managed to reach 3rd after a string of 7 out of 9 wins, but three defeats from London Irish, Sale Sharks and Leicester Tigers to finish the season meant that Quins dropped to 6th and missed out on the play-offs. Quins finished second in the Guinness Premiership table. In the play-offs, they lost 0–17 at home to eventual losing finalists London Irish. Quins also hosted their first "Big Game" at Twickenham over the Christmas period, playing out a 26–26 draw with Leicester Tigers in front of 70,000 people. They lost 5–6 at the Stoop to eventual tournament winners Leinster Rugby at the quarter final stage, a match in which the infamous Bloodgate Scandal took place. With the shadow of Bloodgate still hanging over the club, the club struggled to an 8th-place finish despite retaining most of the players from their successful previous campaign. They also made a swift exit from the Heineken Cup at the group stages while failing to chalk up a single victory in the competition. Quins also hosted their second "Big Game" at Twickenham. Despite losing 20–21 to "London" Wasps, the game attracted 70,000 spectators. They finished seventh in the league, which was insufficient to ensure Heineken Cup qualification. However, they proved their potential with some inspiring performances on their way to the Amlin Cup final. This included a historic win away against Munster in the semi-final, where they became only the second club to beat the Irish province at home in a European Competition. They played Northampton Saints at the Twickenham Stoop on 12 May, a match which they won thanks to a 25-23 victory sealed with a try in the 77th minute by Joe Marler. Tom Williams and Chris Robshaw scored the tries and Nick Evans scored 20 points through penalties and a conversion. Chris Robshaw was named man of the match. During this season, Harlequins played in the Heineken Cup thanks to their victory in the Amlin Cup the season before. However, they lost out on a quarter final spot in the last game of the pool stage after a defeat to Connacht. Subsequently, they went into the Amlin Cup competition but were resoundingly beaten by Toulon. The club then managed to stay within the first two places of the table. On 29 December Big Game 5 proved to be a success with a 26-15 win over London Irish before a capacity crowd of 82, at Twickenham Stadium. Later in the season, the second setback came in the return game against Exeter when the Chiefs defeated Harlequins. The slide continued as they suffered back-to-back defeats against Saracens and Gloucester. They secured their place in the play-offs, but lost to Leicester at Welford Road in the semi-final 33-9. Having qualified for the Heineken Cup on the virtue of their English Premiership title, Harlequins produced a strong showing in the pool stage, remaining unbeaten in pool 3 against Biarritz Olympique, Connacht Rugby and Zebre to be granted No. However, they lost to No. Relying on a team of developing players, the club remained unbeaten throughout the pool stage. This title granted Harlequins a place in the Heineken Cup. Aviva Premiership[edit] Harlequins made a disappointing start to the new season suffering two defeats in their opening two home games against Northampton and Saracens. Injuries stalled their start to the season, and they found themselves in seventh after five games. Their season did eventually improve and they did begin to challenge for a top four spot. But four consecutive away defeats set them back again. They were left in sixth place, six points behind fourth, with four games left to play. A series of several closely fought wins including a try bonus point in the penultimate game against Exeter Chiefs ensured they would face a winner takes all home tie against Bath in the final round of the regular season. A 19-16 win in this game saw them march on to a semi-final at Allianz Park having finished level on points with Bath but crucially winning one more game. Heineken Cup and Europe[edit] Harlequins also made a poor start in Europe suffering a 26-33 home defeat against Scarlets before being beaten at Clermont Auvergne. They replied strongly with back to back wins over Racing Metro. They lost their next home game against Clermont after they lost a 13-3 lead. They did win their last game at Scarlets to secure a place in the second tier Amlin Challenge Cup competition. They won their quarter final 29-6 at Stade Francais, but lost to Northampton Saints in the next round. Aviva Premiership[edit] Harlequins were inconsistent at the start of the season and won half of their opening six games before heading into Europe. The rest of the season saw this pattern continue and Quins finished 8th. However, subsequent losses away to Leinster, and then at home to Wasps ensured Harlequins finished third in their group and were knocked out of the tournament. However Harlequins made a strong start having a good first half to the season. They were in 3rd place in mid-January. One of the highlights of the seasons was the home defeat of Saracens. Following this game their form fell to pieces however. First giving away a 9-point lead at Newcastle followed by a home defeat by Northampton when fly half Ben Botica failed to kick the ball out of the play when the game had finished. It was the start of a run of 7 defeat in 9 games and after being thrashed by the Exeter Chiefs on the final day of the season, Quins failed to earn a place in the European Champions Cup, finishing 7th when they required a top six finish European Rugby Challenge Cup[edit] Quins put in a very strong performance in the group stage of the Challenge Cup, topping their pool and winning all of their first five games with a bonus point. This gave them a home quarter final. After their League form had left them out of the Champions Cup places they needed victory to ensure a place in the competition next season. They slipped to a deficit and got within 7 points but Ben Botica inexplicably kicked the ball out of play on his last game before heading to Montpellier to hand his new club the title, leaving Quins as runners-up and out of Champions Cup for a second consecutive season Summary of league positions[edit] Summary of Haerlequins league positions since league rugby was introduced in [10].

Costume almost identical to Harlequin's, but had a variation of the 17th century where the triangular patches were replaced with moons, stars, circles and triangles. In 18th century France, Trivelino was a distinct character from Harlequin.
