Chapter 2 : calendrierdelascience.com:Customer reviews: Her Majesty: 60 Regal Years

Her Majesty 50 Regal Years by Brian Hoey Queen Elizabeth II is the most experienced figure in British public life. The most famous woman in the world, she is also the most private.

I also pay my respects to the Gadigal Elders, past and present, and all representatives of our traditional custodians of this country here present. Over the course of the past 64 years, our Monarch has had many private and public meetings with Indigenous elders, leaders and artists, both in Australia and in London. This year is an important year in our nation. As we progress on the path of Reconciliation, taking into consideration the outcomes of the recent, historic Uluru meeting, we recognise the ancient ancestral ownership of this land by our Indigenous people. While we live in uncertain times, highlighted through recent tragic events, I would suggest that the Crown, the headship of our constitutional monarchy, provides a secure and strong foundation for the future and works to safeguard our harmony and stability. But as with any form of guardianship, vigilance is necessary to keep our democracy strong. Her focus on service to her people is above any consideration for self. I am always particularly moved when I recall the words that our Queen used as a Princess in her 21st Birthday broadcast message to the Commonwealth in , 70 years ago: And, it is, indeed, a magnificent model to follow. She continues to serve as Patron to hundreds of charities and institutions but has commenced the sharing of this work with her family. Over people visited the House to tour the rooms and gardens and were able to find out more about the great work these organisations do for the community. We have representatives of these organisations here at this reception today. You will also find a wonderful portrait exhibition here in the House. Employees of Cana Farm, part of Cana Communities, one of our patronage organisations, are the subjects of this exhibition and we are delighted to have some of the employees at this reception today. Their journeys to gain the employment skills to overcome disadvantage, as well as the personal skills of resilience, respect and citizenship within a community are etched into the faces of these portraits. I encourage you to spend some time viewing this art exhibition today. By meeting and chatting with the representatives of all of our patronage organisations present, we may all learn something about service â€" and about how we may work to transform our communities. Here today are the many vibrant and diverse faces of our community. To celebrate our rich national culture and statehood â€" comprising many faces and heritages, I would like to announce a new initiative at Government House. I have been keen to establish a visible link between the position of Governor, the site of Government House, and our Indigenous people. For the first time in Government House history, the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander flags will fly as a permanent fixture. They will proudly reflect our community and welcome guests to Government House. It is the birthday of a person for whom we have the greatest admiration and love. Ladies and Gentlemen, I would ask you now to join me in a Toast: The Queen [1] https: This committee was once responsible for organising national activities during NAIDOC Week and its acronym has since become the name of the week itself.
