Dear Kerry, My heart aches for you and the pain you have endured. It cannot be easy to have to deal with this woman that, in my heart, does not deserve for you to call her "mother. Let her go for she is obviously mentally ill and only hurts you. Despite the harm this person has done to you, your loving nature and ability for unconditional love bestowed on your own daughters is amazing. Be ever proud of that and continue to stay true to yourself, and do not let anyone take that away. I have many challenges with my own "mother" and have had to block her from being able to call me. I do not want to focus on my own challenges but to support you and ways of ensuring that this woman has no way of contacting you or your daughter. Go in peace, dear heart, and know you are not alone. While I was pregnant with my second son. I was diagnosed with uterus cancer and have to have an emergency c-section. I also had to have a hysterectomy. So I would no longer be able to have children. Although I love my boys with every fiber of my being I longed for a little girl. But I knew it could never be until a good friend asked me to help her with a foster child fundraising event. It was there that I met a beautiful little girl who would soon call me mom. I later learned that the fundraising I was helping with was to help that same little girl have a heart transplant. I called my husband and told him that I was bringing her home. And that I would do everything in my power to get her a new heart. My beautiful little girl had a heart transplant almost one year ago and is doing wonderful. I am so blessed to have two handsome sons and a beautiful daughter. Together they have brought my heart the great joy anyone could ever imagine. She is a great friend and daughter and will help you if she can. When she was born after 2 miscarriages she could not have been more special or wanted. She brought me a feeling of love I had never known. Her father and Grandmother said she looks like a little Angel and so she was named. God called her home on March 2, I felt good reading them and most of the time I would read them to my mom. It brought happiness to me to see the smile on my moms face. When she got rid of it I would still read them to her and I still do. This poem describes my lil angel perfectly. My husband and I waited for 12 years to have a child of our own and although my in-laws would have preferred a boy for their first grandchild, they had an angel that always left them teary eyed and smiling. My Angel left this world Nov. She was a very special angel and had many qualities. She was placed here for a short time to help others which she did so well and now she has moved on to another special role. She has left me with great memories and a deep love that although painful due to missing her yet so satisfying. Thank you again for your ability to express all the things I have felt thinking about my lovely daughter. I want to have two daughters. I was thinking of the names Charlotte Marie and Linda Ann.. My mom said I think too far ahead lol. Capanzana 6 years ago When I read this poem, my eyes start to cry, I remembered my 8 years old baby girl who passed away 4 years ago. We know that she was on our Almighty God who always comfort with tender loving care for her. Thank you for this poem.. I remember my only daughter Alissa.. How much I love her.. Thank you for your inspiring poem. And I have been looking for the most perfect poem to frame for her that tells her how much I love and adore her. I know every mom is proud of their daughter but you see 2 years ago I found out that I had cancer. After we got over the shock of such a life change this little girl grew up before my eyes. She never left my side. She was a Sr. She kept my medicines straight still does and never complained. Now she does but its amusing. I am in remission now 1 year clean and bless her heart she is still my biggest advocate. She is always right there whenever I get sick Still going through chemo She is my biggest fan. So when I saw this poem it really made me cry because Cassandra truly is my angel who left her wings behind Maine 6 years ago This poem means a lot to me.. I have a beautiful angel in Heaven already she lived after birth for 12 hours.. My Dad passed away August 27., I knew he would come and get her before winter which he did.. I am so blessed by Bill W 7 years ago Thank you for this poem. I pray everyday my 18 year old daughter is surrounded by your love and guardian angels and protect her in the darkness of the world We adopted her at age 5 but she came to us at 5 days old Wow talking about going way way way back.. She was 16 years old and four years in remission. When she turned 12 she relapsed and underwent a Stem-cell transplant and did well. She was in Early College and wanted to become a Nurse I consider both girls my angels and a true blessing. Your poem is wonderful. However, that changed in a matter of seconds. I have been clean since I heard I was going to be a father on Dec 2nd. I had never in my life been more scared, however at the same time I was extremely happy. The day she was born was the happiest day of my life. All I could think of was everything I had to teach her about the world she was brought into. This poem is written exactly how I feel and I thank you for that. It brought tears to my eyes, and I really needed that. On January 14, we got life changing news that turned our lives upside down. She is partially paralyzed on the left side, has daily seizures, drools, and her speech is also affected along with her fine motor skills by Ashwini, Yakima Wa 7 years ago Great Poem as if made for my daughter Tasha Tasha was normal till when she was 15 months old, then we had a car accident, slowly she started to loose her abilities She is my LIFE She is turning 9 on September 7, Your Poem is Very much heart touching Thank you so much for writhing this and sharing with all of us. On Christmas day I found out my girlfriend was pregnant. I stopped drinking on New Years. This poem means more then words can express. My daughter saved my life. She is my angel. This poem is to the T how I feel. Thank you so much for writing this. I am a perfect example that love can shatter chains, defeat your demons, and rise above anything. God bless our lil Angels.

Looking for someone to love? The dating site for conscious men and women. In fact, after a divorce, it would be fair to say that I failed miserably with the woman in my life. Upon further reflection, however, I learned a few things about how to treat, love and care for the woman I am with. Or for your next relationship. You could say that mistakes and failures in relationships are the keys to learning, growth and understanding. The worse you are at relationships, the better you can understand them. Based on my own experiences and having checked in with women I know, here are 11 ways to make a woman feel loved. Make time for her consistently. A woman feels loved when you make time for and prioritize her in your life. Creating time for the woman in your life helps her feel important, cared for and loved. Most women go out of their way to nurture, care for and serve the people they care most about. So much of their work and giving is ignored. Simple appreciation for what she means to you can make a world of difference to her. There are so many things women do that we take for granted. Thoughtful gestures, healing touch, passionate kiss, care for children, or thoughtfulness toward family are just some of the many things a man can appreciate about the woman in his life. Notice what she did and let her know that you appreciate it. A thoughtful gesture, kind word or small gift will help her feel appreciated. Accept her for who she is. Appreciate her for the best version of herself instead of reminding her of her flaws. The simplest way to love a woman is to accept her for who she is – no need to change her or wish she were different. Society tells women what to do, what to eat, how to look and even how to dress. Tell your woman you love her unconditionally and accept her completely for who she is – no improvement needed. Let go of trying to change her. Along the same lines of accepting her is learning to let go of trying to change her in the relationship. The best way to help a woman become the best version of herself is through compassion, understanding and kindness. Work on your growth, your desire to change her, and how to let go of that desire. Become a supporter and enjoy The Good Men Project ad free 6. Compassion is putting yourself in her shoes. Compassion is seeing things from her perspective. Compassion can involve simply creating space for her or holding her for comfort. Offer a listening ear. Women, more so than most men, love to talk as a way of expressing themselves, as a way of sharing and even as a way of loving. One easy way for us to love them is to listen to them without trying to fix them, help them, or troubleshoot for them. In our society, we usually engage in two-way conversations; we always want to respond, fix something or offer advice. Instead, try listening with empathy to help a woman express herself and be who she is. Show openness and honesty. When you do converse, nothing can make a woman feel more loved than honesty. Being able to have an honest conversation, share deep and intimate thoughts and have an open conversation allows women to feel safe. Turn offs include hiding information, not being completely truthful or outright lying about something. Women can usually deal with whatever it is you say to them, but they feel hurt and betrayed when you lie or hide the truth. Be vulnerable with her. Women feel loved when you share your feelings and your experiences – positive and negative – with them. Just as much as they appreciate your being there for them, they want to be there for you. Sharing your vulnerability gives the woman in your life a chance to comfort you, nurture you and love you. Women understand how difficult it is for men to open up, so opening up to her helps her feel special, needed and loved. Commit to being a better partner. The best thing you can do for her – and for you – is to become the best version of yourself. Grow, learn and work on improving yourself. Work on eliminating bad habits and becoming emotionally stronger and more vulnerable. You may be doing a lot of personal development work, but also work on becoming a better partner in your relationship. Read books on becoming a better man, attend workshops about being a better partner and try counseling if you think it will help you work through old patterns and harmful tendencies. When you commit to becoming a better version of yourself, women get the benefits of a better you. Healing your emotional wounds, becoming a better listener, and being more present in your life are all big wins for her. Show small acts of thoughtfulness. Thinking about small ways to show appreciation, to make her life easier or to anticipate what she needs are just some of the ways you can show her how much you love her. What does she need help with? What would brighten her day? Consciously think of small ways to improve her life – things like putting away your own clothes or the dishes in the kitchen seem to make a much bigger difference to women than you can imagine. Shower her with small notes, affection, and light physical touch. Yes, women like to be praised, appreciated and loved with words. Small love notes, words of appreciation and greeting cards that share your feelings can warm her heart and improve your relationship. Show her affection by holding her and touching her the way she likes to be touched. Do things that she enjoys. Be thoughtful of her needs and more aware of her feelings. The more conscious dating site.

Chapter 4 : 11 Ways to Make a Woman Feel Loved - The Good Men Project

HEAVEN SENT As she lit a candle in the mission at San Juan Capistrano, Jacki Brannigan knew only a miracle would save her ranch from foreclosure.

Early life[edit] Angela Davis was born in Birmingham, Alabama. Her family lived in the "Dynamite Hill" neighborhood, which was marked in the s by the bombings of houses in an attempt to intimidate and drive out middle-class blacks who had moved there. Ben played defensive back for the Cleveland Browns and Detroit Lions in the late s and early s. Tuggle School, a segregated black elementary school, and later, Parker Annex, a middle-school branch of Parker High School in Birmingham. Davis grew up surrounded by communist organizers and thinkers, who significantly influenced her intellectual development. She attributes much of her political involvement to her involvement with the Girl Scouts of the United States of America. She also participated in the Girl Scouts national roundup in Colorado. As a Girl Scout, she marched and picketed to protest racial segregation in Birmingham. There she was recruited by a Communist youth group, Advance. In a television interview, Davis said, "Herbert Marcuse taught me that it was possible to be an academic, an activist, a scholar, and a revolutionary. She returned home in to a Federal Bureau of Investigation interview about her attendance at the Communist-sponsored festival. Classes were initially at Biarritz and later at the Sorbonne. In Paris, she and other students lived with a French family. She was in Biarritz when she learned of the Birmingham church bombing , committed by members of the Ku Klux Klan , in which four black girls were killed. She grieved deeply as she was personally acquainted with the victims. On returning to Brandeis, she sat in on his course. Marcuse, she wrote in her autobiography, was approachable and helpful. She began making plans to attend the University of Frankfurt for graduate work in philosophy. In , she graduated magna cum laude , a member of Phi Beta Kappa. After visiting East Berlin during the annual May Day celebration , she felt that the East German government was dealing better with the residual effects of fascism than were the West Germans. The Board of Regents was censured by the American Association of University Professors for its failure to reappoint Davis after her teaching contract expired. Marin County courthouse incident Davis was a supporter of the Soledad Brothers , three inmates accused of killing a prison guard at Soledad Prison. He armed the black defendants and took Judge Harold Haley, the prosecutor, and three female jurors as hostages. The judge and the three black men were killed in the melee; one of the jurors and the prosecutor were injured. Although the judge was shot in the head with a blast from a shotgun, he also suffered a chest wound from a bullet that may have been fired from outside the van. Evidence during the trial showed that either could have been fatal. Hours after the judge issued the warrant on August 14, , a massive attempt to find and arrest Davis began. With the help of her legal team, she obtained a federal court order to get out of the segregated area. By February more than local committees in the United States, and 67 in foreign countries, worked to free Davis from prison. John Lennon and Yoko Ono contributed to this campaign with the song "Angela". The United Presbyterian Church paid some of her legal defense expenses. On June 4, , after 13 hours of deliberations, [28] the all-white jury returned a verdict of not guilty. She was represented by Leo Branton Jr. He hired experts to discredit the reliability of eyewitness accounts. He received some anonymous threats. Her reception by Afro-Cubans at a mass rally was so enthusiastic that she was reportedly barely able to speak. She said, "when you are attacked, it is because of your progressive stand, and we feel that it is directly an attack against us as well. He claimed a group of Czech prisoners had appealed to Davis for support, which Solzhenitsyn said she had declined. She delivered a public lecture on May 8 in Royce Hall, where she had given her first lecture 45 years earlier.

Chapter 5 : My Mother, My Angel, Mother Death Poem

Her Special Angel By Marie Ferrarella - FictionDB. Cover art, synopsis, sequels, reviews, awards, publishing history, genres, and time period.

I thank God every day for my mother even though she has crossed over. I am comforted by knowing the Lord and standing firm on his promise that we will be together again and throughout eternity. I wrote and read this poem to my mother as she lay dying, and at that moment I thought I would die right with her. May God Bless you. Although we lived a couple of states apart, I would try to call her at least once a week. I knew the end was near when she no longer remembered me as her daughter. I know my Mom is watching over all of us, but nothing will fill the void in my life that her death caused. My Mom is truly my angel Please give me strength, Mom. How do I move on? I needed you then and God knows I need you now. Mom, let God know that our family misses you. Mommy, I just want you to know I have always been there with you, and you did everything to stay strong. That heart was just too weak and our heavenly Father took the only person in my life who loved me. Miss you, Mom, so much! My life is not the same without you. Please come back for me. I miss all those moments we spent together. God takes you to heaven, but it makes my life a living hell. Why did you leave me, Ma? I want to know when you will come back to me and hug me tightly. Ma, I want to cry by putting my head in your lap. Her spirit lives on; she is not dead. Her earthly body is gone, but the spirit that made her who she was is alive and watching over you forever. I hope you know that Jesus sees your pain and wants you to trust in him as the days, months, and years pass while you are on this earth. You have a special purpose for being here. There is unfinished work you need to do, and then you will be reunited with your precious mother. I want you to know you are in my prayers. She was not just my mom, she was also my best friend. The day she passed on I literally left this earth. I love her so, so much, and I miss her with all of my life. She was a Christian and loved the Lord. So according to 1 Thessalonians 4: Thank you so much for your poem. I am encouraged too by it On May 17, , our heavenly Father called her home. She had cancer as well. There is just an emptiness now. I find some of the poems so touching and true as this shows that mothers are very, very special people and losing them leaves an empty gap that will never be filled by anyone else. Take courage, all those who have lost a mother, and try to continue the great works she left behind. What I can say is that my mother was not just a mother to 12 children but she definitely was an angel. No words can fully describe how wonderful she was. She struggled so hard to make sure we had enough to eat, pay school fees, and buy us clothing. She never stopped working until she got sick in May this year. She carried the responsibility of bringing us up with dignity and success. I am so proud to have had an angelic mother who loved, shared, advised, not just us but anyone who came home or passed on her path. May our good Lord rest her soul in eternal peace. I was still 14 when she passed away. She was really a strong woman. Her cancer ate her slowly with so painfully, but she still smiled for her family. So I learned that we have to cherish every single time with the ones we love because we will never know what time they will leave this world forever. With each passing day, I miss her more. She was so loving and kind and I miss her so much. Her birthday is April 14, I will never ever forget her. Thank you Jesus for giving me such a wonderful mother. Happy birthday Mom in heaven. She passed away October 2, I love you, Mom. I always knew that living without her was going to be the hardest thing that I was ever going to face. It feels like a hug from heaven. I was her baby, and she had 13 of us. I will always mourn for her. She was such an amazing woman, and I was truly blessed. I was on my way to her and got the call that she was gone. I held her, laid on her chest, begging God not to take the most important person in the world to me. God Bless You All. She was a nurse for over 20 years, a Christian woman and a true beautiful soul inside and out. She will be missed by all who knew her, and we were truly blessed to be her children. She taught us to love all people and share the love she gave us with everyone. I miss her so much. Every day I think about her, and my cousin lost her mom from cancer this Sunday and I feel so much pain for her. How do you go on without your Mom? Mom, I love you. I will see you again. My mom was an angel, very gracious and kind. She was filled with love, which she has left behind. In loving memory of my mom. Sleep in peace, Angel. I have faith they are all together and that someday I will be reunited with them again. It has gotten easier, but I miss them like crazy every day. I was blessed to be with each of them when they passed. Stay strong and God Bless. Walker 1 year ago I know exactly how you feel because today marks 2 months that my mother has been gone. Every day I try to stay strong for my mama. Thanks for that wonderful poem. I needed to read something that would touch every fiber of my spirit, and reading your poem was like a gift from GOD because it expressed it all. Campbell, Calif 2 years ago Oh my! That was so heart-warming. As I was reading, I started remembering many of the same qualities in my own mother. It was a horrible time for us 5 kids. We lost a little of her each day, until God took her home. It was the hardest thing to ever cope with, seeing how ill she was and how she changed. I was only Her body left this world, but her spirit lives on in you. You are never alone. I feel my mom with me every day. I know the hurt you are feeling all too well. My mom was my best friend.
