Chapter 1 : Lily Toy Hong: Mormon Illustrator - Mormonism, The Mormon Church, Beliefs, & Religion - Mor

In a text at once poetic and straightforward, Hong retells a Chinese legend that explains how oxen first came to reside on earth. She describes how these creatures once lived a life of luxury at the p.

Lily Toy Hong Genre: Chinese Legend Theme s: They could only be found in the heavens, among the stars. While the oxen laze around in the lush amenities of the high heavens, below on Earth the people are suffering from a famine. The emperor from heaven sends the Ox Star to Earth to tell people Title: The emperor from heaven sends the Ox Star to Earth to tell people they should be able to eat every 3 days but the Ox Star makes a mistake and tells the people they will eat 3 times a day everyday. The emperor in heaven kicks the Ox Star out of the heavens and sends him to Earth and helps the farmers harvest the land. The other oxen also start to fall from the heavens and help the farmers to kill the famine that was spreading through the town. Uneven in design and composition, the airbrushed acrylic and gouache illustrations of droopy-eyed oxen are nonetheless appealing. The ox star was sent to earth by the emperor of All the Heavens to tell the poor struggling peoples that they could eat once every three days. He confused the message, however, and said three times each day, As punishment for his mistake, the ox was thrown out of heaven and he became a much needed beast of burden on earth. This Chinese folktale is illustrated with brilliant stylized illustrations ideally suited to the text. Response to Two Professional Reviews: Both reviewers felt the illustrations and the tale went together well and did the Chinese legend justice. Evaluation of Literary Elements: The author did a good job at bringing this Chinese legend to life in the text and illustrations. Children will appreciate the abstract illustrations and the happenings of this tale. Consideration of Instructional Application: With this legend, I would use this during a social studies lesson when learning about famines and how livestock help farmers harvest their crops for people to eat. We can look at and research what different types of animals are used around the world and what they help to harvest. Once we have researched the animals we can determine why people use them specially to harvest their crops against other animals.
