

Chapter 1 : I Can Make You Hate Quotes by Charlie Brooker

'I can make you hate' is a collection of television presenter and journalist Charlie Brooker's columns from the Guardian written between August and July , where he pokes splenetic fun at all manner of targets, from politicians, other newspapers like the Daily Mail, and the stars of reality television.

The point is this: Charlie Brooker is an angry man. Well, I can outdistance this Charlie Come Lately in a few paragraphs. He needs to get out right now so that I can beat him up. Or maybe someone else can beat him up. Or maybe Mac enthusiasts can beat him up. Someone needs to charge admission. Someone needs to provide chainsaws. And somebody needs to film it. I have always hated Charlie Fucking Brooker even before I knew who he was. Even before I was aware that he was a columnist. Even before I knew his name. When I was a boy, I asked several of my friends who I might hate in my adulthood and they suggested that it would be some English guy named Charlie. I did not know who this Charlie would be. Oh, but now I know who he is! I even hate the people who even considered reading Charlie Brooker. I will go on hating Charlie Fucking Brooker, even if we have a crazy night and he proves okay in the sack. Even if he turns out to be a good guy and he buys me a lager. There can be no quarter! Charlie Brooker must be stopped. But more importantly, he must be hated! This has been a cultural commentary. Ed spent an uninterrupted sixteen hour period contemplating several ways to murder Charlie Fucking Brooker on his PC. He went to the gun range and fired about thirty-two rounds of ammo into targets that he named Charlie Fucking Brooker.
